LOOP SUBWAYS PUT UP TO ICKES BY HIS EXPERTS

O. K. State St. Tube; Suggest Changes.

Chicago's wavering hopes for a better local transportation system were revived yesterday when a board of engineers, appointed by the government, recommended early construction of subways through the loop.

Col. H. M. Waite, chairman of engineers' committee.

The plan the engineers offered differed radically from that proposed by the city, but Mayor Kelly and his traction advisers regarded the board's report as favorable in many respects. There was hope, they indicated, that construction might be started by Jan. 1.

In general, the engineering board approved a subway beneath State street, as proposed by the mayor and city council. It opposed subways to carry surface cars under Washington and Jackson streets. In their stead tubes under Dearborn and Lake streets to connect the loop with the west side elevated lines were recommended.

Report to Ickes.

The report was made to Public Works Administrator Ickes. It is now up to the city to determine whether it will follow the recommendations of the engineers and ask the PWA to grant $14,258,000—45 per cent of the total estimated cost.

This, if done, would place the fate of the city's subways again squarely up to Ickes, who has adopted a chilly attitude toward the city's traction aspirations in recent weeks. A week ago he announced he had "temporarily laid aside" the city's application for the grant, and planned to use the money for smaller projects throughout Illinois. Ickes has opposed Mayor Kelly politically for years.

Whether Ickes will stand by his own engineers' findings—and the board members are experienced subway men—was a secret last night. The city, he said, would be given a hearing next week and can say then whether to adopt the revised program or give up all hopes of getting anything under the current PWA spending progrma.

Mayor Kelly Comments.

The mayor was on a train in New Mexico, on the way from California to Chicago, when he was informed of the issuance of the report.

"I am not fully informed as to the recommendations," he wrote in a telegram sent from the train, "but I understand there are many points of conformity with our plans and aims. Perhaps the plan can be accepted. I shall endeavor to talk to Mr. Ickes. When I know more I can comment more fully."

Philip R. Harrington, the city's engineer in traction matters, was also mildly optimistic about the prospects. All realized that speed would be neccessary if the new plans are to be adopted. The PWA rules would require a start within three months and completion by June 30, 1940.

State Street Tube Approved.

The board of engineers approved the building of a two track tube through State street, but would modify the city plan in two particulars. They suggested that a tunnel be bored through the clay subsoil rather than built by open cuts through the loop. They also opposed the city's program of connecting the subway with the elevated lines near Chicago avenue.

Instead, they said, the subway should be carried north to Division street, west to Clybourn avenue, then northwest under Clybourn to join the "L" near Halsted street and North avenue. The city's proposal to connect with the south side "L" lines at 14th street was not overruled, the board holding that the junction

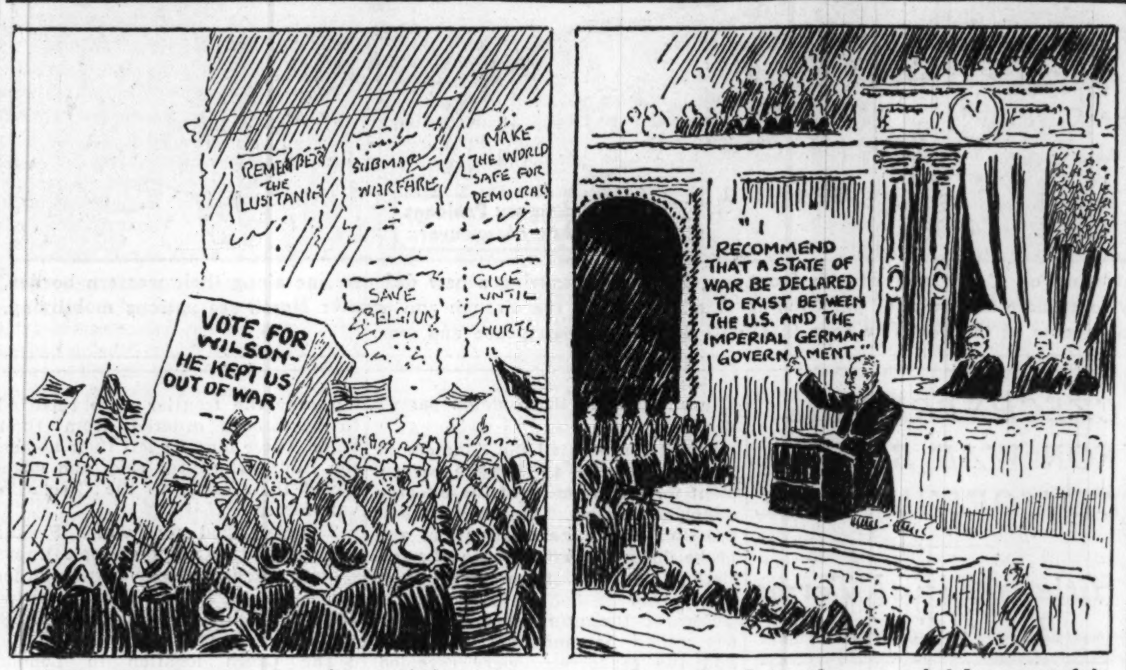
NOVEMBER ELECTIONS AND EUROPEAN WARS



The American people, after resisting every form of emotional propaganda for over two years, went to the polls in November, 1916, and re-elected Wilson because he had kept us out of war.

Soon after being thus rewarded by a grateful people, Wilson seems to have misconstrued his mandate, for he speedily got the United States into the war and, when volunteering failed, he drafted millions of American youth to fight in Europe.

And now, twenty years later, we are approaching another November election with another European war, the child of the Versailles treaty, threatening to engulf Europe again. If the American people had a chance to express their opinion about being dragged into this new war involving purely European issues—— ——would they voluntarily vote to repeat that experience, in spite of the calamitous costs, the gigantic waste and destruction, the sickening post-war disillusionments, the trouble-breeding Versailles treaty, the war debt defaults, the ironic war slogans, and the futility, indecisiveness and aftermath consequences of the last war?

LONDON COUPLES RUSH TO BE MARRIED 'BEFORE THE WAR BREAKS OUT'

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Registrar offices were deluged today with a rush of couples getting married "before the war breaks out." At the Caxton hall office there were two long lines—one to the marriage license window, the other to the gas mask fitting depot. Some couples went directly to be fitted for gas masks after being married.

Most Courteous Motorist to Be Awarded Orchid

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 24.—(AP)—"An orchid to you" really means something in Cincinnati. The city's trafic safety council has adopted the idea of awarding one of the flowers each week to the motorist performing an outstanding act of courtesy or consideration toward a pedestrian.

New Fur Coats Each Day Give Thieves Away

One day it was Persian lamb. The next it would be a silver fox cape, or tipped skunk, or gray squirrel. Perhaps it might be a sleek looking coat in leopard cat, Russian pony, or red fox.

The girls couldn't believe their eyes. They just could not understand how Maxine Hurry managed to appear in a new fur coat every day. And then when Vesta Thomas swished around the neighborhood in the same swank furs—well—it was too much.

Policeman Gets Suspicious.

It was a little too much for the policeman on the beat, too. He reported his suspicions to the Shakespeare avenue station. Detectives Harry Jacobson and Harry Jensby took a look. It didn't seem right to them.

So they took Mrs. Hurry and Miss Thomas to the station. In a few hours they also brought in Mrs. Hurry's husband, Norbert, 22 years old, and Miss Thomas' sweetheart, Walter Stillwagon, 22, alias Tony Fletcher. The Hurrys live at 2154 North Springfield avenue, and the others at 821 North Oakley avenue.

Yesterday the policemen announced the solution of a freight car robbery at Rockford last month. The thieves had taken nineteen fur coats worth $3,000. Hurry and Stillwagon confessed.

Become Partners in Prison.

Each with a criminal record for stealing automobiles, the two met in 1935 in the federal reformatory at Chillicothe, O., where they were serving theft terms.

After the Rockford robbery they disposed of six coats through a fence who dealt in stolen furs. But they kept the other thirteen to dazzle their women folks.

HERO WHO LOST ARM IN ARGONNE TRAP DIES A HERO IN PEACE TIME

New York, Sept. 24.—(AP)—When the battle flags of the 77th division and the "Lost Battalion" were massed today at the city hall, Bert Fenning, 45 years old, who lost an arm in the Argonne, lay dead—again a hero.

Fenning, who was to have taken part in the services, drowned yesterday in Long Island Sound in a vain attempt to rescue a drowning person.

The survivors of Maj. Charles W. Whittlesey's "lost battalion" held their first reunion tonight since their exploit of twenty years ago in the Argonne, where they fought off overwhelmingly superior forces of surrounding Germans for five days. Whittlesey led a force of 600 men when they smashed through the German defenses. Only 194 survived the five days of battle, and only fifty are living now.

Ducks Early, but Weather Prophecy May Be Quackery

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Black ducks, southbound from Canada, are dropping in at a sanctuary here a full month ahead of schedule. Weather prophets may consider this a sign of an early winter, but not Paul Hodge, director of the sanctuary. "I don't know why they're flying south so early," he says. "Maybe some blight destroyed their food supply up north."

Finds $10,000 Securities and Gets Reward of $10

Arthur Anderson got $10 yesterday as a reward for turning in $10,000 worth of securities he found Friday on a 63d street surface lines car. He took the bundle to his superior, I. W. Lederer, 307 North Michigan avenue, a restaurant chain official. Mrs. Frances Ward appeared yesterday and recovered the bonds. She didn't leave her address.

WAR OR PEACE MAY HANG ON PARLEY AS HITLER DEMANDS SUDETENS BY OCT. 1

Censor Hides Moves of Republic as It Debates Fate.

The attention of a war-scared world last night was fixed on Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia. What waiting millions of people heard from the republic, however, came only in unrelated reports from many sources, for Czechoslovakia was cut off by a wall of military censorship.

Telephone calls were refused. Telegraph wires were cut, except for official messages. Radio broadcasts from Prague which were picked up in surrounding countries bore just such information as the government, now on a full war footing, chose to release.

Czechoslovakia was under arms, with all that statement implies. A million and a half men were in barracks and strategic garrisons. Most of them were reserves who had responded in a record six hour mobilization to the government's decree issued at 10:24 o'clock Friday night.

General Heads Cabinet.

The army had announced it stood ready to defend Czech territory against dismemberment by German troops on the west, Polish forces on the northeast and Hungarians on the southeast.

At the head of the cabinet and the army stood Gen. Jan Syrovy, the army's former inspector general. He became premier Thursday, swept in by popular indignation over the previous cabinet's agreement under British and French pressure, to cede the Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia to Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

The Prague government revealed yesterday that Syrovy had bolstered his government and army organization by appointments and promotions. Brig. Gen. Hashek, the government let it be known, became inspector general of the army, succeeding Syrovy.

Brig. Gen. Krajci, by one report, was made commander in chief of the army; by another he became war minister, a cabinet post which Syrovy had assumed originally in addition to the premiership.

Supreme War Council Formed.

A government broadcast also asserted that Czechoslovakia had formed a supreme war council, the better to prepare itself for possible war.

It was known that the immediate problem facing the Czechs' war government is the six day ultimatum presented by Reichsfuehrer Hitler to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain. Through Basil C. Newton, British minister in Prague, this message—Hitler's "last word"—was delivered to Premier Syrovy.

Reports of the Czech attitude toward Hitler's terms were varied. One broadcast, said a report from London, indicated Foreign Minister Kamil Krofta had said "serious consideration" would be given Hitler's demands.

"The Czechoslovakian government, conscious of the difficult situation, will certainly give serious consideration to the contents of the document you have just handed me," Krofta was said to have replied to Newton.

Moscow Version Is Different.

From Moscow, however, the Associated Press quoted the Czechoslovak legation as saying there is not the slightest chance that Germany's latest plan will be accepted. The Czech legation in Moscow was said to display an atmosphere of confidence.

"The feeling was expressed that the die is cast, and Adolf Hitler must choose between a crushing defeat in a new world war or demobilization of his armies concentrated against Czechoslovakia," the Moscow dispatch said.

It was reported from Paris, incidentally, that political circles, believed the time limit—Oct. 1—given in Hitler's memorandum could be extended if the Czechs showed good will. The Paris reports said Czechoslovakia is asking for a month in which to evacuate the Sudeten area which Germany demands. The Czechs asserted a month is necessary to dismantle advanced fortifications and

GERMANS REFUSE ANY GUARANTEE OF NEW FRONTIER

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—(AP)—By next Saturday, Oct. 1, at the latest the world will know whether Czechoslovakia will yield to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's final demand to cede peacefully to Germany those sections of its Sudeten region which are overwhelmingly German.

Confronted with the possibility that Europe's western democracies might yet rally to the republic's defense unless the Sudetenland transfer is made by mutual agreement, Hitler preferred peace to war, German sources said.

The Fuehrer was declared to have phrased his demands in such conciliatory words that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain agreed to submit them to the Prague government.

[This contradicted London dispatches, which said Hitler had stiffened his demands.]

Refuses Boundary Guarantee.

Hitler, who returned to Berlin from Godesberg today, insisted that by Oct. 1 the scheme must be carried out for giving Sudeten German districts to Germany. This is the scheme which Britain and France urged Czechoslovakia to accept and the Prague government agreed to under pressure last Wednesday.

Complete dismemberment of the Czechoslovak state no longer was insisted upon except by the implication in Hitler's refusal to become a coguarantor of the whittled-down state's boundaries unless other minorities attained their wishes.

Official Germany seemed confident tonight that a general European war or even a localized German-Czechoslovak conflict had been averted by the Hitler-Chamberlain negotiations at Godesberg. But the German army and air force remained close enough to the Czechoslovak border to be prepared for all emergencies.

Hitler's Stand Outlined.

The points in Hitler's stand, as outlined here by an informant who saw the Fuehrer's memorandum to Chamberlain and by other sources, included:

1. Eight days, counting yesterday, are envisaged for peaceful handing over of the Sudeten German territory to Germany.

2. If Czechoslovakia refuses, it would carry the responsibility for all that might follow; if it agrees, peace will be preserved.

3. Germany declines to become a coguarantor of the new Czechoslovak

Paris Chiefs Fly to London; Military Forces Massed.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 24.—British and French cabinet ministers will meet in London tomorrow to frame a joint policy on Reichsfuehrer Hitler's latest ultimatum to Czechoslovakia.

The ultimatum, demanding that the Czech army evacuate Sudetenland by Oct. 1 and permit German troops to move in, was delivered to Milan Hodza, Czech foreign minister, at 3 o'clock this afternoon by Basil C. Newton, British minister to Prague.

One report said Hitler demands a progressive German military occupation of Sudetenland up to a boundary line about thirty miles from the present frontier.

British Cabinet Gets Report.

At tomorrow's meeting the French government will be represented by Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet. They were invited to come to London by the British cabinet after it had received a report from Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain on his conferences with Hitler at Godesberg, Germany. Chamberlain flew to London from Godesberg this morning.

The French and British ministers will seek to coördinate their final plans on what they will do if the Czechs reject Hitler's demands and the German dictator sends his army to attack the Czechs.

War or peace may hang on this meeting. It will be held in what is described as a wrangling mood between Paris and London, and while all Europe is arming to meet the menace of a new world war. Millions of troops are in readiness, awaiting the arrival of Hitler's deadline.

Frenchmen Will Fly to London.

Daladier and Bonnet will fly to London tomorrow morning. Before they meet Prime Minister Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, the British cabinet will meet to put the final touches on the British policy.

It was emphasized here tonight that the British viewpoint is that the issue now has been narrowed down merely to the method of carrying into effect the agreed principle of cession of Sudetenland to Germany.

No announcement was made concerning the results of today's cabinet meeting. Hitler's memorandum, which he announced as "the final stand of Germany on the Sudeten problem," still is a closely guarded secret, but enough has leaked out to indicate that it raises three outstanding issues:

Issues Are Listed.

These issues are:

1. Are German troops to be allowed next Saturday to occupy those Sudeten districts which are preponderantly German?

2. Are the figures of the last Czech municipal elections to be taken as a basis on which the Sudeten districts are to be classified?

3. Shall the British, French, and Czech governments decide before next Saturday on a precise new Czech frontier?

It was reported that Chamberlain brought with him from Godesberg a big map of Czechoslovakia on which Hitler himself had drawn the new frontiers as he insisted they must be. It is understood these boundary lines went far beyond anything contemplated last week-end, when the British and French ministers agreed to desert Czechoslovakia and force her to cede Sudetenland to Germany.

Bars Boundary Commission.

All indications are that Hitler's memorandum sweeps away any idea of a boundary commission. The Fuehrer's terms appear to be much more severe than was allowed to be known last night.

During the coming week it is hoped war will be averted. However, tonight every country in Europe, from Norway to Italy, was taking steps on the assumption that it will not be averted.

Great Britain took steps to match the partial French mobilization. The British home fleet hurriedly sailed from Invergordon, in north Scotland, after all night refueling and revictualing operations. The fleet presumably left for battle stations to await the outcome of next week's diplomatic moves.

More warships were ordered to Alexandria, Egypt, to reënforce the thirty-three warships now concentrated there.

Guard Egyptian Railway.

Artillery detachments were guarding railway stations on the line between Alexandria and Mersa Metruh, on the Egyptian-Italian Lybian frontier.

These moves presumably were made to counter any Italian moves in support of Germany.

The Czechoslovak mobilization was said to be complete. Prague now has 1,500,000 men under arms. France has more than 1,000,000 men under arms. Most of them were sent to the Maginot line of fortifications on the German border.

It was estimated that the French mobilization will force Reichsfuehrer Hitler to keep half of his divisions in the west, so that the Czechs will have to cope with only 50 per cent of the German strength.

Rest of Europe Joins Move.

In other parts of Europe the situation was as follows:

SCANDINAVIA: Both Sweden and Norway kept large forces of reserves with the colors which otherwise would have been dismissed.

POLAND: More reservists were called up and three divisions were reported concentrated on the Czechoslovak frontier.

SWITZERLAND: Troops which were to have been released yesterday after annual maneuvers were retained with the colors.

THE NETHERLANDS: Maneuvers were ended suddenly and troops returned to their garrisons, where week-end leaves were cancelled.

BELGIUM: Military technical units and certain classes of militia were called to the colors.

Duce Calls Grand Council.

HUNGARY: Army maneuvers, due to end yesterday, were prolonged indefinitly.

RUMANIA: The war ministry assumed control of industry.

ITALY: Premier Mussolini summoned the Grand Fascist council to meet on Oct. 1, Europe's war deadline.

Under these circumstances there was much interest in Germany's military situation. Hitler now has a million men under arms.

The Czech frontier has a mountain barrier. Beyond the foothills from Breslau to Linz the Germans have 32 divisions of troops, although a quarter of these are in reserve at some distance.

Germans in Good Positions.

The Germans are reported to be in good strategic positions, which may mean that they control the roads through the mountains.

The Czechs could delay a German advance by hill fighting, at which they are adept, but their main resistance would be on a trench line and defended rivers. Saaz may be taken as a pivotal point, and main attention is paid to the north, where the way is less difficult.

A direct movement on Prague by the Elbe valley has possibilities, but the short cuts to the capital are well defended. The Czech policy is to hold and delay. The Czechs could use 500,000 men in this effort, but it is, of course, built on the supposition of France and Russia coming to the army's aid before the might of the German forces could deploy on the plains.

If France could tie down half of the German army in the west, the contribution would be an immense one, but not decisive unless the Czechs were aided from the east or France moved forward into Germany and so transferred the main theater to the west.

All of this is in the realm of theoretic planning for the moment.

NAZIS MAY PINCH CZECHS IN HALF IF A WAR COMES

Attack Expected Along Breslau-Vienna Line.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, German minister of aviation, today forbade aircraft to fly over Vienna and vicinity. Exceptions were made only to government airplanes and regular passenger and mail planes. These, however, must follow routes mapped out by the air ministry.

Field Marshal Goering.

The order was taken as an indication of the direction from which German military action against Czechoslovakia may come if Prague rejects Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demand to evacuate Sudetenland by Oct. 1.

Many observers believe that in event of war the German forces will perform a pincer movement on a line connecting Breslau, in Silesia, with the former capital of Austria. Czechoslovakia thus would be cut in two halves.

Goering Well Again.

It was announced that Goering's health now is completely restored. He had been suffering from an inflammation of the right leg, which laid him up after he delivered his Nuremberg speech attacking Czechoslovakia. The air chief has spent several days entertaining King Boris III. of Bulgaria on his East Prussian hunting preserve, Alt-Sternberg. King Boris returned to Berlin today.

While German newspapers continued to assert that the greater part of Sudeten Germany is in the grip of "unparalleled Czech and communist terror," the district of Asch, which is under Sudeten-German control, was described as a haven of peace "visited by many German excursionists from across the border."

Newspapers said not one Czech official has remained in office in the entire Asch area nor in part of the Eger district. They have all been interned. They are held as hostages together with alleged Marxists and "other shady elements." The Czech officials have been replaced, the Nazis assert, by "pensioned off German officials and other competent persons," who will wear swastika armbands.

Defy Mobilization Order.

Following orders from Konrad Henlein, fugitive leader of the outlawed Sudeten German party, the Sudeten authorities of Asch issued a proclamation declaring that anybody obeying the Czech mobilization order will be treated as a traitor.

Postal authorities at Asch will cancel letters leaving there with special stamps in honor of the occupation of the city.

Some Nazi editorial writers are indignant against foreign correspondents who reported to their papers that Sudeten Free Corps men entered Czech territory. It is alleged that these reports greatly complicated Hitler's negotiatior with Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain.

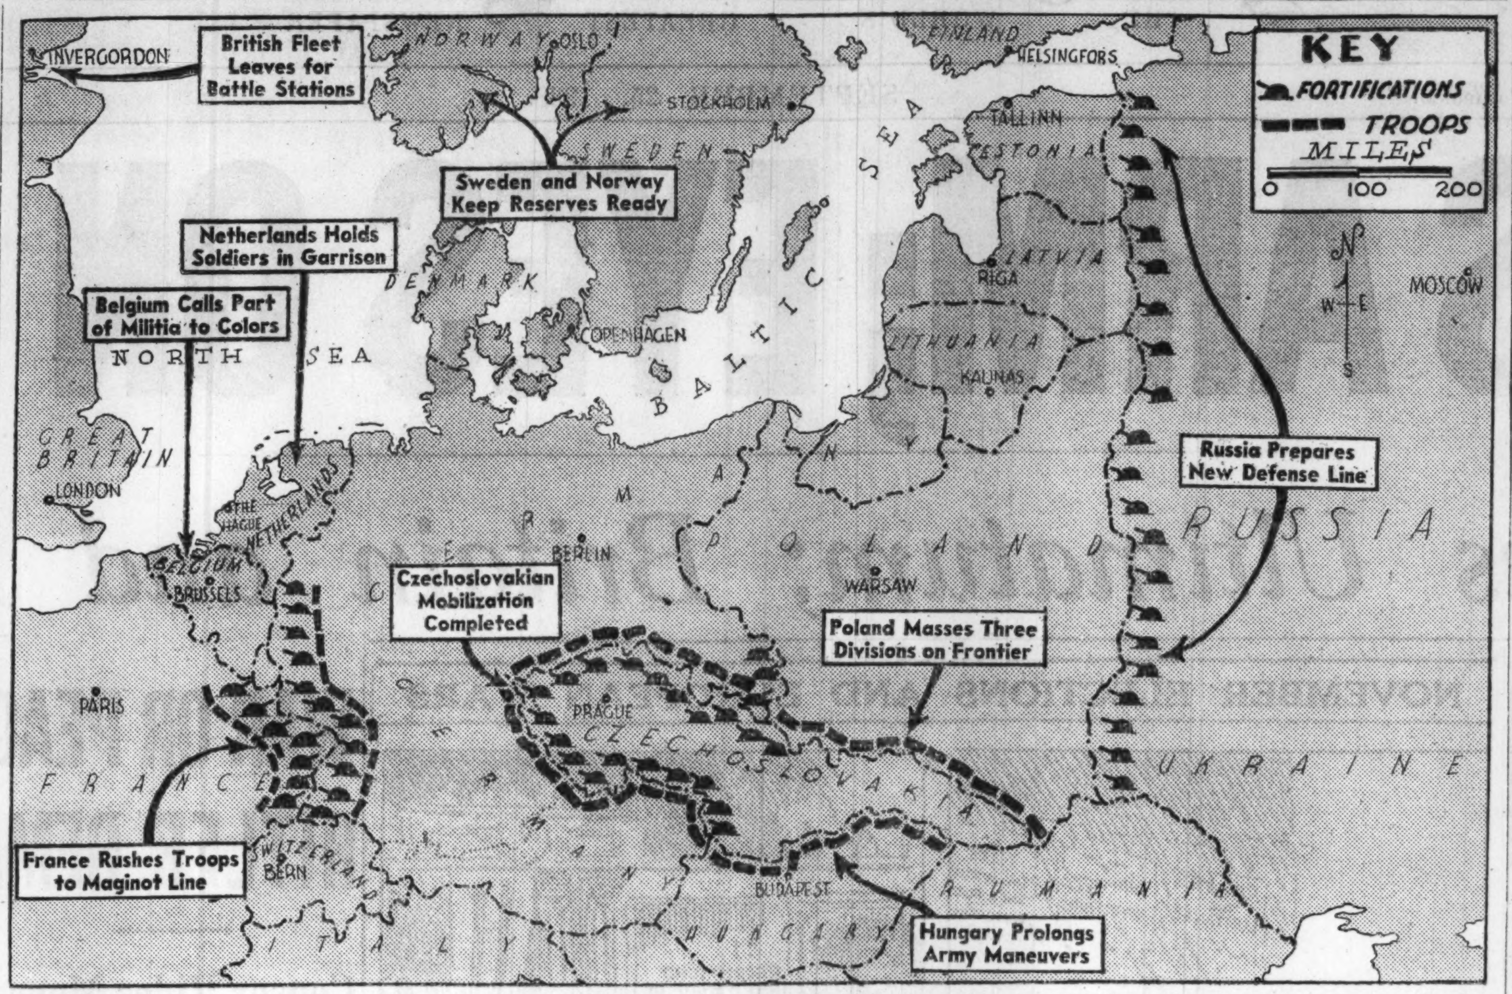
Thousands of Czechs Held.

It is estimated that several thousand Czechs are held as hostages by the Germans. According to the Germans' own statements, 600 were taken as hostages in Warnsdorf, 400 in Zittau, 400 in Asch, and 50 in Bautzen. Interned in the fortress of Frederick the Great in Glatz are 117 Czech soldiers, police, and officials.

The German radio tonight announced that all German citizens who wish to leave Prague are to be given an opportunity to do so tomorrow morning, when a special train will leave the Czech capital for Germany.

Following official instructions, the German press played down the partial mobilization of the French army. While refraining from any comment, the papers stressed that the French measures were of "limited scope."

European Nations Draw Battle Lines Along Frontiers



With German troops concentrating on Czech and French frontiers, Russians preparing a new defense line along their western border, Hungarian and Polish soldiers ready to enforce demands for partition of Czechoslovakia, the French and smaller North sea nations mobilizing, Europe was tense yesterday, awaiting events of the next few days that will decide between peace and war.

CZECHS PREPARE FOR WAR BEHIND CENSORSHIP WALL

Report Kundt Arrested.

A Berlin dispatch gave still another view of Hitler's terms.

"It is understood in Berlin," said this message, "that German territorial demands from Czechoslovakia are greater than the territorial concessions originally suggested in the Anglo-French agreement."

The DNB, official German news agency, asserted that Ernst Kundt, a Sudeten German deputy in the Czechoslovak parliament, had been arrested by Czechoslovak authorities in Prague. Kundt was a leader of the Sudeten German [Nazi] party, which existed long before the current crisis arose, and was a collaborator with Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten party's chief.

Kundt represented the Sudetens in negotiations with the Prague government for a settlement of the Sudeten minority problem. These negotiations preceded the present situation, and broke down when the scene of negotiations shifted from Prague to Germany.

Few of Prague's preparations for war, other than mobilization of men and the censorship, were revealed. From Paris it was reported, however, that the Czech government had decreed that the "indirect export" of capital should cease. Such exportation can be made now only after a certificate of authorization is obtained from the Czech ministry of commerce, it was said.

The army's preparations for defense, it was known, were being made on three fronts. This was, of course, a result of the demands by both Poland and Hungary that their respective minorities in Czechoslovakia be granted the same concessions which finally are granted the Sudeten German minority.

Reports from Budapest told of hasty establishment of defenses by Czechoslovak troops along the Hungarian border. Farmhouses were being converted into machine gun emplacements, it was said. Farmers living near the frontier were reported to have been ordered from their fields. These farmers left their homes, the Budapest source said, and abandoned their cattle to the Czechoslovak forces.

The electrified spirit which, Prague said, spread to all the people immediately after the mobilization order was broadcast Friday night, persisted throughout the mobilization, Czech sources indicated.

The Czech legation in London said of the mobilization: "It was carried out in perfect order and enthusiasm. This applies equally to the western part of the country as well as Slovakia and Carpathian Ruthenia. In the German districts a large number of men obeyed the call to the colors. These were mostly Democrats.

"Gaps occurred only in the districts that are under the influence of Konrad Henlein. There is order throughout the republic."

NATIONS LINE UP THEIR WAR ALLIES IN 'CITY OF PEACE'

GENEVA, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Geneva, the "city of peace," today became a place where league of nations powers lined up their allies before the threat of a general European war.

Here is how Geneva saw the lineup in the event of war over the Czechoslovak-German situation:

Poland—The belief in league circles was that Poland, although she would like to remain neutral, would cast her lot with Germany as a result of Adolf Hitler's espousal of her designs on Teschen, Czechoslovak border city.

Hungary—With Germany. Nothing to lose and everything to gain.

Rumania—With France.

Jugoslavia—Neutral, if possible.

Turkey—Against Germany.

FRENCH RELIVE 1914 WAR SCENES IN MOBILIZATION

Tens of Thousands Called to Strengthen Army.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Backing up its expressed determination to hold Reichsfuehrer Hitler to the limits of the Sudeten country of Czechoslovakia, the French government today put France through a grimly realistic dress rehersal of a general mobilization. It was also an important step in putting the nation on a full war basis.

Reservists of the second and third classes were ordered to report for duty at once, and were shipped off to their posts as fast as they could be handled.

Trucks and buses were requisitioned freely throughout the country. Trains had orders to give the troops priority, with the result that normal trafic in certain parts of the nation was paralyzed for several hours. Naval reservists were included in the partial mobilization.

Ages Range from 25 to 45.

The mobilization affects men ranging from 25 to 45 years of age. The total number was not revealed, but parliamentary circles estimated that between 350,000 and 500,000 men were involved in today's partial mobilization.

One reason for the disparity in estimates is that not all the men who were ordered to report to the mobilization centers were called to the colors immediately, THE TRIBUNE was informed.

The French army has seven classes of reservists, and it was assumed that most of the reservists called up prior to today belonged to the first group. If this is so, the French now are a little less than halfway toward a general mobilization.

Today's partial mobilization was decided on by Premier Edouard Daladier at 4 o'clock this morning, and was carried out as dramatically as a general mobilization would have been. Parisians awoke to find public buildings and billboards placarded with official notices of the call to the colors. Later in the morning a second notice appeared.

Public Feared General Call.

Not until nearly moon did the radio and newspapers carry an explanatory communique.

This calmed the general anxiety a little. Previously the public feared the partial mobilization was only the preface to a general one, which they feared would be ordered during the day.

In the course of a few seconds, however, the French had rediscovered their wartime mentality and with it their wartime morale. It was the government's use of posters like the famous general mobilization order of 1914, rather than the number of reservists called, which produced this effect. There has been a popular ironical saying in this country since 1914 that "mobilization is not war," so when Parisians saw the posters many of them took it for granted that war is inevitable.

Neighbors called on one another to see whose sons already had left, parents called up sons of military age, and wives and children rushed to join husbands and fathers. As fast as military authorities could organize it—and they did a very efficient job—the reservists formed in groups and marched or were transported to the nearest railroad station or barracks around the city.

Most Depart from East Station.

The East station, famous for its wartime memories, was the busiest center. Most of the trains to the east and northeast depart from there. Wives and children accompanied many reservists, who carried small satchels or rucksacks just as the figures in the memorial painting depicting the 1914 scene which hangs in the station.

The government apparently was well pleased with the mobilization. Premier Daladier said tonight as he left his war ministry office: "The measures necessary to security taken this morning have been received and executed throughout France with the calmness and determination which the government expected of the nation. Our country is thus in position to pursue in calmness and dignity the important diplomatic negotiations on which depends the maintenance of peace."

The French people accepted the situation realistically—making the best of it and hoping the worst won't come, but ready if it does. There were no street demonstrations. War veterans' associations, and even some labor unions, deluged the government with resolutions of confidence. Building trades workers who had been on strike for several days today came to terms with the government, announcing they were giving up many of their demands because of the international situation.

Requisition Trucks, Wagons.

Trucks and wagons are being requisitioned by the army throughout the country. Many automobile owners were warned to be ready to surrender their cars when asked. Riding horses and farm animals have been put under order.

Civilians were ordered to evacuate many towns and villages near the German border—which would be the center of warfare should it break out. The town of Bouzonville, five miles from the German Saarland, was deserted by 1,200 people so it can become an army base if necessary.

It was believed in Paris that the French military measures made a tremendous impression on Germany, and that Reichsfuehrer Hitler will hesitate to attack Czechoslovakia unless the Czechs can be maneuvered somehow into starting a war.

Furthermore, if war should come, it will be of great advantage to the French to have the first stages of mobilization accomplished, and sizable forces near the border before German air raids begin.

STAGE GUERRILLA WARFARE ALONG GERMAN BORDER

Sudetens, Czechs Clash; Roads Barricaded.

ASCH, Czechoslovakia [near the German Frontier], Sept. 24.—(AP)—Guerrilla warfare today swept along Czechoslovakia's borders with Bavaria and Saxony, growing more serious hour by hour.

Engagements between Sudeten German free corps units, organized in Germany, and Czechoslovak forces multiplied as the result of the Prague government's general mobilization order of last night. The mobilization, which was completed in six hours, assembled an army of 1,500,000 men.

Fleeing Sudeten Germans were the chief cause of shooting frays reported all along the frontier.

German territory on the northwest and southwest borders of Czechoslovakia was without communication with the war born Republic except for the Asch district, a strip of land fifteen miles long and five miles wide jutting into Germany.

Roads Are Barricaded.

Asch yesterday declared itself free from Czechoslovakia and barricades were erected across all roads to prevent reoccupation by the Czechoslovak military.

What was happening in Eger, less than fifteen miles from here, was not known even in German border points which are three miles from the city's limits. Strong military reinforcements arrived in Eger last night.

The Czechoslovak army today blew up bridges, barricades, and roads all along the borders with Bavaria and Saxony. No trains entered Czechoslovakia from those sections of Germany.

The Sudeten German free corps undertook its largest, and first daylight, raid this morning in Muelbach, three miles from Eger. One machine gun was used in the action against Muelbach and Czechoslovak customs houses.

Blow Up Bridges as They Flee.

Some thirty free corps men participated in the fray and the Czechoslovaks retired down the road toward Eger, blowing up two bridges as they went.

The shooting started when free corps men operating along the frontier attempted to cover a group of Sudeten Germans fleeing from Eger near the customs house. Sudeten Germans charged that a Czechoslovak border patrol opened fire in an effort to prevent the fugitives from escaping into Germany.

Two wings of free corps men converged on the customs house with hand grenades and the one machine gun. The Czechoslovaks, according to the Sudeten German account of the action, retired after exchanging a few shots. No casualties were reported.

The free corps held the customs house and a small strip of Czechoslovak territory.

The village of Lieberstein, two miles from Muelbach, exchanged masters three times in the last forty-eight hours. A Czechoslovak army force with three armored cars reoccupied it yesterday; after the cars left a free corps unit succeeded in taking it away from a handful of soldiers.

Border at Wies Blocked.

The border at Wies, five miles beyond Muelbach, was impassable. German customs officials said machine guns had been mounted on zigzag cement and steel barriers which already existed at the Czechoslovak customs station three miles from Eger.

The Ascher Zeitung, Sudeten German newspaper, tonight reported that 600 Czechs and anti-Nazis were being held as hostages by Sudeten Germans in Rumberg on the Saxony border. It asserted the Sudeten Germans threatened them with death if the Czechoslovak military attempted to reoccupy Asch.

The paper reported that 400 Czech civil employés and soldiers had gone to Germany, as well as three army officers with forty-six men. It said 600 persons had been arrested in Asch since the Sudeten party executive assumed power as a provisional government last Wednesday.

Prague's mobilization order was defied by the Asch executive, which announced the proclamation was invalid in this district.

150 POLICEMEN TO GUARD CZECH PROTEST TODAY

One hundred and fifty policemen have been detailed to the Chicago stadium this afternoon when an expected crowd of 30,000 meets to protest the plight of Czechoslovakia. The meeting, beginning at 3 o'clock, is sponsored by the Czechoslovak National Alliance of America.

Three automobile parades, expected to draw 5,000 cars, will converge upon the stadium from Harlem avenue and Cermak road, Chicago avenue and Nobel street, and from 19th street and Ashland avenue.

Among the speakers at the rally will be John A. Cervenka, head of the Czechoslovak alliance; Prof. Paul A. Douglas, University of Chicago, and Dr. Erich Von Schroeter, president of the German American League for Culture.

SATURDAY, OCT. 1: THAT IS DEADLINE SET BY HITLER

Czechs Must Submit by Then, or Else—

boundaries unless other minorities in the republic also attain their wishes.

4. Chamberlain was assured Germany had no intention of annexing territory overwhelmingly inhabited by Czechs.

5. The memorandum contained positive suggestions for carrying out the transfer of such parts of the Sudeten region as were conceded to Germany by Britain and France in the plan accepted by the Prague government.

6. The memorandum positively is Germany's last offer to Czechoslovakia.

Crucial Week Ahead.

With Oct. 1 as the deadline, there remained the prospect of another whole week in which Europe's nerves would be strained to the snapping point.

It was felt that incidents of a provocative nature might prove inevitable during the ensuing days, and that expert statesmanship would be required to hold the opposing forces in leash.

Germany believed that Hitler's memorandum to Chamberlain, which the prime minister forwarded to President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia, opened the way for a peaceful separation of the Sudeten Germans from Czechoslovakia.

Since the Fuehrer's messenger, Paul Schmidt, arrived at Chamberlain's hotel in Koenigswinter with Hitler's memorandum at 3 p. m. [8 a. m. Chicago standard time] yesterday, the opinion in political circles was that the "final offer" would hold open until 3 p. m. next Saturday.

Details Seep Out.

Gradually, additional details began to filter out concerning the Godesberg conference despite official secrecy.

It appeared that for many anxious hours Friday it was uncertain whether Hitler would agree to wait once more in the hope of a peaceful transfer of Sudetenland to greater Germany.

Chamberlain was said to have insisted on some sort of truce on both sides.

He also argued eloquently, it was reported, that even with good will on all sides the transfer of the predominantly German speaking sections of Sudetenland was a complicated matter involving, as it did, grave economic issues, the rights of minorities in the ceded territory, the treatment of Germans in the nonceded areas, and the possibilities for the exchange of peoples living on the "wrong side" of the new frontiers.

Hitler Finally Agrees.

To all of this Hitler, to whom reports of added French defensive measures and British fleet movements appear to have brought home the possibility of a general war, agreed finally.

He declined, however, under present conditions to become a coguarantor of the smaller Czechoslovakia.

"No possibility exists for Germany to guarantee the new Czechoslovak border so long as an obligation to the reich may be involved to protect this border even though it be rendered questionable on account of the demands of other nationalities for self-determination.

"The situation would be different, of course, if Czechoslovakia were purged of foreign minorities which do not wish to live in the same state with the Czechs.

"Germany, however, never had designs upon soil inhabited overwhelmingly by Czechs."

LOYALISTS BEGIN NEW OFFENSIVE AGAINST CORDOBA

HENDAYE, France [at the Spanish Frontier], Sept. 24.—(AP)—A new Spanish government offensive toward the insurgents' southern stronghold of Cordoba was reported in government dispatches today. Government troops were said to be pressing toward the Guadalquivir river north of Cordoba, with several villages in its valley already under their fire.

Insurgent dispatches, however, insisted this push was merely another diversion movement designed to relieve pressure elsewhere. They compared it to the government's earlier drive toward the Teruel-Sagunto highway south of Sarrion on the central front.

CHICAGO SLAVIC GROUP PROTESTS RAID ON CZECHS

The executive board of the Slavic Alliance of America, in session yesterday at the American-Czechoslovak bureau, 20 North Wacker drive, sent cablegrams protesting the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia as a threat to the peace of the world. The messages were sent to Prime Ministers Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain and Eduoard Daladier of France and accused them of promoting the destruction of the nation.

Other cables, urging that Germany be prevented from grabbing Sudetenland, were sent to the premiers of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, Russia, and Bulgaria. A resolution proposing a union of all Slavic nations was passed.

HITLER'S GUARDS WIN ADMIRATION OF CHAMBERLAIN

COLOGNE, Germany, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today inspected and approved Chancellor Hitler's Black Death head guards, honor men of the elite SS.

When he arrived from Godesberg to depart by plane for London, the guards presented arms and the British National Anthem was played by the band.

Chamberlain, with Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, then reviewed the guards. As he finished, the prime minister said:

"I congratulate you upon your excellent bearing."

Turning to the German foreign minister, he requested these words be translated into German.

Sir Nevile Henderson, British ambassador to Berlin, was among the farewell group.

Britain Will Reinforce Mediterranean Fleet

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Sept. 24.—[U. P.]—Additional British warships will be sent to the Mediterranean to reinforce the thirty-three vessels in this area. That was learned today. British artillery detachments were on guard at all railroad stations linking the cities of Alexandria and Mersamatruh. Egyptian infantry was reinforced in upper Egypt to protect the Nile. Guards likewise were increased around dams, electric power stations, and monuments.

Good news for troubled sleepers! And good news for all who want to enjoy more rest and refreshment from their sleep. Drawing upon years of clinical and laboratory experience, Dr. Jacobson shows you exactly how to combat the failure to "slow down" sufficiently at night that causes insomnia and restlessness. How many of us say, "I'd give anything for a good night's sleep!" Now you can look forward to having it. Your failure to sleep well is due to you and what you fail to do. In his new book, "You Can Sleep Well," Dr. Jacobson shows you how to avoid that failure. Fascinating to read, non-technical, authoritative, illustrated throughout with actual photographs, it is a book not only for sufferers from chronic or occasional insomnia, but also for every normal person who wants to sleep better in order to work and play better.

LET DR. JACOBSON SHOW YOU

2. The fourteen points by which the body goes to sleep.
3. How to help your child to sleep readily.
4. What prevents sleep.
6. What sleep is.

30 YEARS OF STUDY

"You Can Sleep Well" is based on thirty years of intensive scientific study of sleep and relaxation. It is the only book that has ever resulted from laboratory research on sleep plus extensive clinical testing and experience. And it is the only authoritative book FOR THE LAYMAN that brings scientific and medical data on sleep up to date, presenting it in such a way that every reader can use it for himself. It shows you exactly what its title says: how "You Can Sleep Well."

FOR ADULTS AND CHILDREN

If you or any member of your family suffers from difficulty in sleeping, you can find the solution through reading "You Can Sleep Well." It is a book that you can give to a friend with the assurance that you are doing him a real service. It is a book you, yourself, may not need today—but when you do need it, you will be glad it is at hand.

The chapters on children and their sleep are invaluable to every parent. The restless, tossing child is a constant worry, yet the difficulty may be readily overcome by knowing why the child is restless and what to do about it. That is where Dr. Jacobson's book is so valuable—it tells not only WHY but WHAT TO DO.

Recommended by Harry Hansen

"If you are really serious about getting a good rest, this is the book to take to bed," says the noted critic, Harry Hansen. "Dr. Jacobson prescribes common sense, with the authority of a physician."

Scientific Laboratory Experiments Reveal Method Arrived at to Sleep Well

The detailed, helpful information you will find in Dr. Jacobson's new book, "You Can Sleep Well," is the result of thirty years devoted to the careful study of sleep and relaxation carried on by Dr. Jacobson at Harvard, Cornell, and the University of Chicago, and at the Laboratory for Clinical Physiology in Chicago—the only laboratory devoted solely to studying the phenomena of sleep and relaxation. The many photographs which illustrate the text were taken under Dr. Jacobson's own supervision to show you exactly what to do, and what not to do, if you want to sleep well.

Read the book first—then decide how valuable it is to you.

BRITONS GLOOMY AS CHAMBERLAIN REACHES LONDON

Crowds Solemn; Fear War Not Far Away.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Eight thousand gloomy Britons waited silently for hours today to greet Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain upon his arrival at Downing street at 2 p. m. on his return from a desperate effort to insure peace in Europe.

Feeble cheers and a few feebler boos greeted his arrival. That pretty well describes the state of the Londoners' mind. They feel the worst will come to pass and it is only a matter of a few days.

Feverish, but not panicky, preparations for war, if it does come, marked the day.

Open Gas Mask Depots.

Throughout London notices were posted telling the inhabitants where to call for free gas mask fittings in local depots. In most cases it is the usual polling place.

Even the royal family is being fitted with appropriate sizes. Most hospitals already have sent all patients able to stand or travel to other hospitals outside the city. The aim is to provide room for casualties if they come.

Six hundred thousand school children in the London area are being allotted billets in concentration centers outside a fifty mile radius of London. Schools will be used as assembly points where members of the same families will be kept together even though they normally attend different schools. There will be one adult teacher or guardian to every ten children.

Crowds Silent, Solemn.

Conscious of all these urgent measures the crowds that waited for the premier in Downing street and at Heston airdrome were more silent than usual and more solemn.

As the plane swooped down at Heston at 1:13 p. m., the premier could be seen at the window looking worn and weary. He mustered a smile to the throng, but did not appear cheery.

"My first duty," he told the crowds, "is to report to the British and French governments the result of my mission."

Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, greeted him for his own government, and Theodore Kordt, German chargé d'affaires, and Baron Edwart von Selzam, third secretary, welcomed him on behalf of the German embassy. The French ambassador, Charles Corbin, also was there.

"May I express my deep sympathy in your gigantic efforts," said Kordt.

Police Block Paraders.

In Whitehall police kept back paraders with banners reading: "Stand by the Czechs," and other anti-Hitler slogans. Mounted police blocked Downing street and kept the crowd from surging into the narrow little way after the premier.

On the doorstep, Mrs. Chamberlain, who had been attending special services in Westminster abbey to pray for her husband's success, greeted him with a kiss.

While the prime minister and his colleagues turned their attention to the problems before them and worried crowds stood and stared outside, other crowds no less oppressed by fear of war watched the powerful home fleet steam out from Cromarty Firth into the gray northern waters for a secret destination.

Exactly where the fleet was going was not revealed. It is assumed, however, that the ships will take up stations in the Atlantic off northwestern Scotland within striking distance if needed but not exposed to the danger of being trapped in closed waters.

Members of parliament are flocking to London expecting to assemble on Tuesday at the latest, though parliament has not been officially summoned.

Key officials are sleeping in their offices and are in touch half-hourly by telephone if they go out on business.

The Czech minister, Jan Masaryk, announced that hundreds of cables of sympathy from Americans flooded in after his broadcast to America in the early hours of the morning.

German Vets Tour London.

In the midst of all the worry and activity, 800 German veterans here as guests of their former foes continued to tour London. A scheduled ceremony at the Cenotaph was canceled for fear of demonstrations, but the rest of the program was continued.

A group of mayors in the party visited the Lord Mayor and others saw the sights. At the tower of London the single question was: "Where was Carl Hans Lody shot."

Lody, a German naval officer, was shot as a spy by the British in October, 1914.

Through the day delegations visited Downing street to state the views of various groups in the form of petitions. Three barristers representing 181 colleagues in London, were among them. "The lawyers knew well that the only way to deal with a blackmailer is to stand up to him," remarked the leader of the delegation.

Crowds Demand Recall of Parliament.

Other delegations chiefly were representatives of union groups, and most of them were demanding immediate recall of parliament, it is understood.

Among the symptoms of Europe's worries was the revelation by a leading stamp dealer that the London market is flooded with fine stamp collections from the continent. It is one of the best ways of getting money out of the countries which prohibit export of currency.

Other marks of the crisis and its financial effect were the upward bound of the dollar and wheat prices.

Gen. Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army, added her part to church requests that the public pray for peace. All regular Salvation Army programs for tomorrow are abandoned and members will devote the day to prayer for peace.

Moving Forward

Marshall Field & Company presents here each day observations and opinions intended to be of interest and value to those it seeks to serve.

JUST IMAGINE

By CALEB

THE IMAGINATIVE excursions of childhood are familiar to us all. We remember our own, or we chart their fantastic courses in the growing minds about us.

The keen young mind sees in the world its egg—it grasps at each new fact, weaves it hungrily into the pattern of a limited experience, and returns a sometimes startling answer. But in these unguided excursions there lies the future of the mind involved.

As we grow older, one of three things happens in the realm of imagination. First, it may die or atrophy—as tragic a thing as the loss of mind itself. Second, it may retain its childish aberrations and lack of proportion, leading to all sorts of difficulties. But third—and most importantly—it may remain vigorous and active, steadily acquiring more balance and usefulness as the background of experience and knowledge increases.

How dull knowledge is without imagination; how dangerous imagination is without knowledge! Imagination is the bridge across which knowledge marches to useful achievement. Archimedes hitting upon the law of displacement in his bathtub, Newton under an apple tree, Shakespeare a newcomer at an English court, Henry Ford running a threshing engine as a boy, picturing it as a device to do the farmer's work and carry him about—these are the things wherein imagination furnishes the spark.

The world laughs consistently at men with imagination, and it is a strange and pleasant thing to discover that the men with imagination, having proved themselves right, are much too courteous and magnanimous to laugh back when their turn comes. The truth is that people with imagination are always among the most pleasant to know and be with—whether it be in the matter of a dinner partner or an associate in some hazardous and difficult undertaking.

Imagination, in balance and under control, is the thing to which we must look for the solution of our problems now, and men who have it are the ones to be intrusted with our collective destiny. But there is always the danger of being fascinated by the pyrotechnic display of some imagination not yet freed from the fantastic dreams and wishful thinking of childhood. Tomorrow will be splendid and fine—or it will be a bitter disappointment—precisely in the degree to which we intrust our fate to men and leaders with lively and balanced imaginations.

WILL HITLER PULL TRIGGER? POLICY FACES FIRST TEST

Every Other Victory He Has Won by Bluff.

BY JOHN LEAR.

[Associated Press Staf Writer.]

It poised the momentous question: Would some one at last call the German Nazi leader's nand?

Would France, England, or Russia challenge him to see if he is really ready to start a war to gain his demands or is merely scaring the rest of Europe into thinking so?

If they did issue the defi it would be the first time in the Fuehrer's career that he would be forced to prove he was willing to fire the gun he has been pointing at his neighbors for so long.

"Might Is Right."

Up to now he has gained his ends through a masterly sense of timing; an uncanny, almost mystical, advance knowledge of how far others were prepared to go to stop him, and a grimly realistic practice of the theory that the way to get what you want in world politics is to take it by force or threat of force.

"Strength alone constitutes the right to possess," he wrote in his autobiography, "Mein Kampf," when he was in prison fourteen years ago, long before he came to power.

He also wrote:

"The building up of foreign policy and also assessment of the importance of the state are based less on existing armaments than on the known or imagined powers of resistance of a nation."

Real Strength a Secret.

Since he became Germany's chancellor in 1933 he has never permitted the rest of the world to know how much of his boasted strength is real and how much is imaginary. For five years he has been waving a gun and no one has been able to tell if, or how heavily, it is loaded. Many militarists have insisted he is not yet ready for war, though better prepared than England and France.

While keeping the neighbors guessing about himself the Nazi chief has been able—or at least appeared to be able—to tell what they were going to do, irrespective of what they might be saying they would do at the time.

The full secret of how he has done this is a mystery. Part of the answer may lie in clever espionage; even in the United States the German spy system has been dangerous enough to result in a federal dragnet that caught and indicted eighteen alleged undercover agents for the Nazis. Part of the answer may lie in an uncanny guessing ability on Hitler's part. Part of the answer undoubtedly does lie in the Hitlerian judgment of the timing of international events.

Awaits Psychological Moment.

In every case his plans have been held in abeyance until the psychological moment.

The psychological moment for open renunciation of the treaty of Versailles came in 1935.

Italy was busy in Ethiopia. Russia was tangled with Japan over Manchukuan border clashes. France was broken internally by the Stavisky affair, its economic recovery program, and Fascist riots. England had let it be known she favored release of German arms restrictions if Hitler would sign an armaments control treaty. Every power that had to be reckoned with was embroiled in its own troubles.

So Hitler struck three blows in quick succession:

Announced quadrupling of his army.

Announced he had an air force.

Won from England an agreement to increase his navy.

And nothing was done to stop him.

The Rhineland Coup.

The psychological moment to remilitarize the Rhineland came in 1936.

Italy still was busy in Ethiopia. Russia was fighting with Japan in Outer Mongolia. France, with unrest in her colonies, was trying unsuccessfully to get Britain to adopt a joint program of action in preparation for another German move. England was arguing at home over increased arms, trying to enforce sanctions in the Italian-Ethiopian dispute, and apprehensive in the far east over the military coup in Japan. Every power that had to be reckoned with was occupied.

So Hitler abruptly called the reichstag into session and announced that at that moment his troops were marching into the Ruhr.

France theatened to fight. She even went through some mobilization gestures. But the German soldiers stood their ground and nothing happened.

Marches Into Austria.

The psychological moment to seize Austria came in March of 1938.

Italy was now a friend at the other end of the Berlin-Rome axis. Russia was in the throes of a "purge," as evidenced by the greatest of Stalin's "treason" trials, and also troubled by Japan. France was split internally again, this time over her arms budget. England was just emerging from a cabinet break which ended in the resignation of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and a shift of policy to appeasement of dictators. Every power that had to be reckoned with was occupied.

So Hitler moved his troops into Austria and followed in personal triumph. French and English threats of war dissolved, and nothing happened.

Now has the psychological moment come to swallow the Sudeten area of Czechoslovakia and thus hurdle the great mountain fortress barrier to the Nazis' "march to the east"?

This week Hitler appeared to think so.

Italy not only was friendly but was talking of complete dismemberment of the war born Czechoslovakian democracy, with shares going to Poland, Hungary, and Jugo-Slavia. Russia was wary of her eastern frontier, where not so long ago clashes gave observers fear of a new Russo-Japanese war. France was suffering from one of her usual internal complaints—labor trouble. Britain had Arab trouble in Palestine, oil trouble in Mexico, trade trouble in Australia, and assorted troubles in the orient due to the Chinese-Japanese war.

So Hitler began moving troops on his side of the Czech border while his Czech right hand, Konrad Henlein, stirred up Nazi demonstrations on the other side.

France and England said they would fight to keep the Czech nation in one piece. But Hitler increased his threats and they backed down. Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain flew to the Fuehrer's side and returned to join France in persuading the Czechs to give up the Sudeten districts.

Once again Hitler seemed to have won his objective by threatening force without using it.

Sees Another Moment.

But apparently he thought he saw another psychological moment.

Instead of accepting the Czech offer of peaceful annexation of those parts of Sudetenland he could rightfully establish as predominately German, he insisted upon occupation of an undefined area within eight days and refused to guarantee he would not gobble up part or all of the remainder of Czechoslovakia now or later.

Has he guessed wrong this time?

Chamberlain broke off the Anglo-German conversations on an obviously strained note. Russia declared she would fight if France did. France announced she would fight if Czechoslovakia proper were invaded, and she mobilized her army reserves in preparation for battle. The Czechs themselves, having thrown out one government because it capitulated to Anglo-French-German pressure, mobilized for war. England began moving her home and Mediterranean fleets, and put Gibraltar on a wartime footing.

Will they hold that stand, and, if they do, what will happen?

Will there be war?

Or will Hitler take his gun from Czechoslovakia's head, put it in his pocket, and back down?

Norway Orders Seamen Ending Duty: Stay on Ships

OSLO, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Norway today ordered all contingents now ending naval service to remain aboard their ships. Coast artillery service leaves also were curtailed.

BELGIUM CALLS RESERVES; ALARM GRIPS THE NATION

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Alarm prevailed in parts of Belgium—overrun by Germany in the last war—as the government took precautionary defense steps today along with other European nations.

It was understood that approximately 4,400 men, mostly engineers among the reserves, were called to the colors.

Requisitioning of trucks and private cars in Ostend, Brussels, and Tournai, and orders to frontier units to be on the alert, especially in Arlon, caused the alarm among the people.

Premier Paul Spaak received the French and British ambassadors, the German chargé d'affaires, and the Netherlands minister today to explain the reasons for the military measures.

The Luxemburg foreign minister, J. Bech, visited Brussels where it was understood he sounded out the government on the possibility of creating an international Red Cross center in the grand duchy. He proposed making it a haven for refugees from all countries seeking protection against air attacks.

AIR CONDITIONED BOMB CELLARS BUILT FOR HITLER

New Berlin Chancellery Is Armed "Fortress."

BY JOHN DICKSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 24.—Heads that bear a crown rest uneasy at times—but their worries are small compared to those of dictators. Occasionally one learns details of the vast machinery being used to protect Premier Mussolini and Dictator Josef Stalin. Little is known, however, of the secret measures taken to protect Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany, though they rival in efficiency those taken for other dictators.

The newly built chancellery in Berlin can be described as a fortress. Its bombproof cellars reach far down into the earth and are equipped with all modern conveniences — including bathrooms and high grade air conditioning unknown in other German buildings. There are special elevators connecting with the kitchen of the chancellery to provide food. In addition emergency rations are packed in vast pantries.

Room for 3,000 Guests.

The new festive halls, which Hitler added to the chancellery which fulfilled the needs of Germany's iron chancellor, Prince von Bismarck, provide space for 3,000 guests. Under these halls are three bombproof cellars to shelter the chief of state and his aids.

The new building has a hidden bombproof roof. The top layer of the roof is made of a new variety of glass — about three inches thick, which is supposed to be bombproof. Parts of this roof can be moved back —something like a horizontal shutter—allowing armored turrets to emerge. They are similar to the pillboxes in fortification lines along the German border.

These turrets are equipped with machine guns, anti-aircraft guns and a sound detecting outfit. While the new chancellery was being built, observers could see a tremendous iron structure being incorporated into the façade on the Voss street side of the building. The structure is topped by a crane which, in case of emergency, can be used to raise or lower artillery and ammunition to and from the roof of the chancellery.

May Leave by Subway.

Nazis realize that the day may come when the chief of state will want to leave his headquarters rapidly, without being seen by those surrounding the chancellery. A special tunnel connects with the nearby subway. Workers are building an additional tunnel connecting the subway in the west end of Berlin with the Avus, the automobile speedway leading out of Berlin.

Hitler's bodyguards are well known figures in modern Germany. They appear in their black uniforms with white belts and trimmings at gala festivities. In time of emergencies they appear in field grey, very similar to that of the German soldiers.

Report on All Calls.

The GSP [secret police] has an entire department responsible for the personal safety of the Fuehrer. What is more, there is an extra service supervising the telephone calls wherever Hitler goes. This is in addition to the GSP wire tappers. They report directly to the Feuhrer.

Hitler does not want his guards to be visible . The Begleitmannschaft, or the accompanying crew, is the only group whose presence he accepts. He insists that members of his Sicherheitsdienst, or safety service, be inconspicuous.

Beside the safety service, on duty wherever Hitler goes, is the national safety service, which, it is estimated, numbers about 5,000 men. A former major of gendarmes, Rattenhuber, commands this body. He ranks as Standartenfuehrer, or the equivalent of a colonel in the Hitler Guards.

Has Bombproof Mountain.

When Hitler is in Berghof, his residence on the Obersalzberg, in Bavaria, many officials are stationed in the neighborhood with their stafs. Wide areas of land near the Obersalzberg have been purchased to ensure the "privacy" of the Fuehrer and to provide sites for anti-aircraft guns .

The Untersberg, a mountain near the Berghof, has been excavated and turned into a giant bombproof cellar, which will be a safe refuge should a conflict break out.

The method used by the Germans to build their bombproof cellars can be watched in the various centers of Berlin, where new official and semi-official buildings are being erected. The building of the General Dye Trust, for instance, will have about four underground floors.

The layers between the floors are not closely packed, but are loose and somewhat elastic. Should an average bomb hit the floor, it would not do much damage, because its exploding parts would find space in the loosely packed layers.

FOES OVER ALPS TOO STUPID TO BE DANGEROUS: DUCE

Warns Italy Will Help Nazis Against Czechs.

ROME, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Italians tonight considered war almost inevitable after a speech by Premier Benito Mussolini disclosing that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler had given Czechoslovakia an Oct. 1 deadline for a reply to German demands.

Italy's most authoritative editor, Virginio Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, assumed Prague would reject the German Fuehrer's demands, and added:

"It therefore may be considered that events are moving toward an armed, bloody conflict."

Premier Mussolini, addressing 300,000 Fascist Black Shirts in Padua, in northeastern Italy's Venezia province, said "if the conflict must nevertheless break out there is a possibility of localizing it," but added that in event of an ideological war against Nazilism, Italy and Germany would form "a single bloc."

Six Days for Sanity.

He said Germany "has sent requests to Prague and has given until Oct. 1 for a reply." He continued:

"There are, therefore, exactly six days for the Prague government to resume again a way of sanity, for it would be truly absurd and even criminal that Europe's millions should be hurled against one another simply to maintain the feudal lordship of [President Eduard] Benes over that land."

Then, after concluding his Padua talk, Il Duce went a few miles north to Belluno, where he roused an audience to a fighting fever for war by taunting Fascism's adversaries "beyond the Alps" as being "too stupid to be dangerous."

His epithet appeared to be aimed at both the French and the British, for he described Italy's adversaries as those "still bound to outdated ideologies" — meaning democratic principles.

Asks for War Opinions.

In both the Padua and Belluno speeches Il Duce appealed to massed crowds of Black Shirts and civilians for evidence of their readiness for war. The expected answers were shouted back at him from well disciplined ranks.

"I know," he shouted in Padua, "that each of you and all of you are ready for any eventuality."

"Yes," roared back the crowd.

"Butter or cannons—which have we chosen?" he asked in Belluno.

"Cannons," came the response.

The speech in Belluno, the second of the day, was Il Duce's sixth brief speech within a week in support of German minority claims in Czechoslovakia. He was expected to speak again tomorrow [about 10:35 a. m. Chicago time] when he visits Vicenza.

URGE 1,000 CHICAGO PASTORS TO PRAY FOR WORLD PEACE TODAY

Leaders of Protestant and Episcopal faiths yesterday urged the pastors of more than 1,000 Chicago churches to pray from their pulpits and chancels today for world peace and a bloodless settlement of differences between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The invitation to prayer, which was made public by the Rev. Theodore C. Hume, head of the world friendship commission of the Chicago Church federation, was signed by Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago; Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Church federation, and Clifford W. Barnes, president of the Chicago Sunday Evening club.

The invitation pointed out that the momentous issues affecting the choice between war and peace depend for their outcome on the will of the people as well as on the decisions of statesmen. It requested that the leaders of America, as well as of other nations, be delivered "alike from sins of self-righteousness and faithless despair."

RUMANIA PREPARED TO MOBILIZE ARMY ON MOMENT'S NOTICE

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 24.—[U. P.]—The government completed arrangements for immediate mobilization of the Rumanian armed forces today.

The decree, published in the official gazette, authorized the war ministry to assume control of all industrial enterprises in Rumania. Posters announcing mobilization were distributed throughout the kingdom to be put up on a moment's notice.

A decree permitting the mobilization of women was published a week ago and it was understood that women were receiving orders concerning their war-time jobs.

JAP TROOPS PUSH ON TOWARD RAIL LINKS TO HANKOW

SHANGHAI, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Advancing in the face of desperate opposition, invading Japanese columns tonight reported they were a few miles closer to their goal, which is to cut strategic railway lines north and south of Hankow, China's provisional capital.

After capturing the village of Mushkiang, southeast of Hankow, the Japanese reported they were outside Yangsin.

Another Japanese column was reported to have fought its way to within nine miles of Wulitien, which is only fifteen miles east of Sinyang, a station on the Peking-Hankow railway 100 miles north of Hankow.

AX SQUADS FIND 9 BETTING DIVES; CHOP THEM UP

Handbooks were scarce yesterday, and when State's Attorney Courtney's 245 ax raiders finished their day's hunting they were still scarcer. The ax squads chopped up nine betting joints. This brought their grand total to 245 since the drive against gambling started. Eight of the gaming rooms were in the city. The ninth was at 12 Douglass street, Calumet City.

Starting tomorrow, Capt. Dan Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney, said the raiders will follow leads obtained in last week's raid on offices of the Nationwide News Service, a race information concern.

The joints wrecked yesterday in the city were on the second floor at 201 North avenue, in a garage back of 4630 Drexel avenue, in the basement of 2741 Hampden court, on the third floor at 2023 Division street, at 2758 Fullerton avenue, 3919 Sheridan road, the basement at 1521 East 63d street, and 943 Wilson avenue.

City police arrested alleged bookmakers at 5611 Waveland avenue, 1613 East 67th street, 17 West Quincy street, and 33 West Jackson boulevard. Policy game operators at 3237 Indiana avenue and 303 East 61st street were raided.

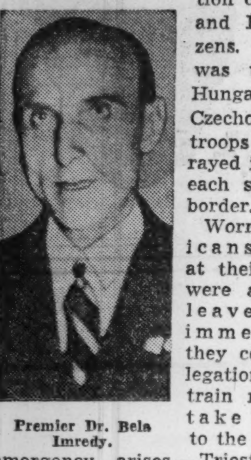
WARN AMERICANS TO QUIT HUNGARY AS ARMIES MASS

U. S. Holds Train Ready for Speedy Evacuation.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The United States and British legations in Budapest today made ready for possible emergency evacuation of American and British citizens. The action was taken as Hungarian and Czechoslovak troops were arrayed in force on each side of the border.



Premier Dr. Bela Imredy.

Worried Americans inquiring at their legation were advised to leave Hungary immediately if they could. The legation has a train ready to take Americans to the coast if an emergency arises—Trieste, Italian Adriatic port, is the nearest coastal point. The British legation has taken similar measures.

The Czechoslovak mobilization through the night resulted in changes of central European air travel schedules. Though no planes had arrived from Prague since yesterday, many relatives of American, British and French citizens waited at the Budapest airdrome. They hoped that their relatives would be able to fly from Czechoslovakia, now that railway connections had been severed.

Call Reservists to Colors.

There was a limited bank run in Budapest this morning but the banks were able to satisfy all depositors thus far. Radio dealers sold out all their stocks and pressed factories for new consignments to meet the rising demand.

The Hungarian government, headed by Premier Dr. Bela Imredy, ordered precautionary measures last night after Czechoslovakia's general mobilization order. These measures appeared to have been completed. Railway stations were crowded last night with reservists reporting for duty, but rumors of a general mobilization of Hungarian forces were officially denied.

Responsible quarters offered the explanation that troop movements near the Czechoslovak border were in "prolongation of Hungarian maneuvers because of the extremely beautiful fall weather this year."

Hungary Not "Frightened."

A foreign office statement, issued twelve hours after Czechoslovakia sounded a general call to arms, said:

"The Hungarian government has not been frightened by the Czech mobilization, and will keep up its territorial demands on Czechoslovakia."

[Hungary has demanded that the Czechoslovak government grant to its Hungarian minority of 700,000 concessions equal to those for the Sudeten German minority. Germany has vowed to "protect" the Sudetens and forced the Czechs to agree to cede the Sudeten area to German control.]

The newspaper Pester Lloyd, semi-official organ of the foreign office, called Czechoslovakia's mobilization "either a trick game against its own friends, France and England, or sheer panic."

Hungarian army authorities explained their call to reservists as intended to fill gaps in army units. Barracks were filled with these reservists.

France Orders Carrier Pigeons Killed; Fears Spies

STRASBOURG, France, Sept. 24.—(AP)—All carrier pigeons in this frontier region must be destroyed immediately under military orders. This notice, posted with mobilization and requisition orders, called upon the owners to kill the birds and present the bodies to the local town hall as proof. The order was directed against spies, since pigeons were used in the world war to carry information to the enemy.

WRITER EXPLAINS HUNGARY'S STAND IN CZECH DISPUTE

Says Hitler's Demands Were Cue for Budapest.

BY CHARLES LOVIK.
Foreign Editor of Az Est.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 24.—Hungarian revisionists' claims have risen to fever heat under the stimulus of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's success in his demands for the Sudeten districts of Czechoslovakia.

For twenty years the existence of a Hungarian minority of nearly 750,000 in Czechoslovakia has been a sore spot for Hungary. The official view is that in case of a world war Hungary will remain neutral, as Foreign Minister Koloman de Kanya often has stated. The Hungarians, however, want that minority back, and are determined to get it.

The argument in Budapest is that since the justice of Hitler's demands is admitted by the British and French, there is no legitimate excuse for not handing over the Hungarians of Czechoslovakia to Hungarian rule.

Says Peaceful Answer Is Sought.

Hungary is weaker than Germany and wants to get a settlement by peaceful means. There still is the possibility, nevertheless, that Hungary will fight.

Oppression of the Hungarian minority by the Czechs under either bolshevist terror or a rightist dictatorship could mean that Hungarians will take up arms, although sentiment is against that.

For twenty years Hungary, called by Premier Mussolini "the cripple of the great war," has been unable to demand return of this minority across the border, which was established by the Trianon treaty, after the World war. The sudden eruption of the German demands for the Sudetens brought the whole situation into the limelight.

The Slovaks, Ruthenians and Poles in Czechoslovakia put forward their claims through national parties in Czechoslovakia. Now the Hungarian and Polish governments have added their demands that the respective minorities get full rights.

Hitler's Aid Sought.

Only treatment identical with that given the Sudeten Germans will be satisfactory. Dr. Bela Imredy, Hungarian prime minister, flew to Berchtesgaden, Germany, as soon as it was known that Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands were making headway. He asked the Fuehrer to get the same treatment for the Hungarians as was secured for the Germany minority.

Accompanied by Foreign Minister Kanya and Gen. Keresztes-Fischer, chief of staf, he set forth the case. The radiant smiles of these men upon their return backed up their report that the Fuehrer had given them reason to expect satisfaction.

In agreement with Hungary, the Polish government announced to Prague the next day that Warsaw had canceled the 1926 Polish-Czech minority treaty, and claimed for the Polish minority all the rights accorded the Sudetens.

Hungary followed up with a warning to Prague that Hungary would not take less than the others were getting.

In addition to its contacts with Germany and Poland in connection with its demands, Hungary had approached Rome. There was quick response there. Premier Mussolini demanded equal rights for the Hungarians.

In view of the newest developments, all this means that the Hungarians will not be satisfied unless all the territories containing 75 per cent Hungarians are handed over to Budapest. In other areas they want a plebiscite wherever there is a Hungarian minority.

Prolong Army Maneuvers.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 24.—[U. P.]—The Hungarian army maneuvers which were scheduled to close today were prolonged indefinitly. Telephonic communication, railway and other trafic with Czechoslovakia were suspended.

U. S. NEUTRALITY ACT UNDER FIRE AS WAR BREEDER

Others Defend It as Peace Protection Law.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—With Europe on the brink of war, the neutrality act again is being heatedly debated throughout official Washington.

One school asserts that the act is the guarantee that America can keep out of a European conflict. According to this group, America need only to invoke the act to halt shipment of arms and implements of war, and loans and credits to the belligerents and watch the conflict from the sidelines.

The opposition school holds that the neutrality act is a breeder of war, which automatically puts the United States on the side of the stronger nation, regardless of right or wrong. They hold the act to be nothing more than a gesture to please those who believe wars are fomented by munitions makers.

Calls for Proclamation.

As the neutrality act stands, the President, upon finding that a state of war or civil war is of such magnitude as to threaten the peace of the United States, must issue a proclamation embargoing shipment of arms and munitions of war to the belligerents.

The President declared embargoes against Italy and Ethiopia in the African war and against both loyalists and rebels in the Spanish civil war. He closed his eyes to the war between China and Japan on the technicality that there has been no formal declaration of war by either side, and because imposition of an embargo would help Japan more than China.

A munitions board composed of cabinet officers decides the war material to be embargoed. The current United States barred list includes six classifications.

Covers Wide Field.

The first classification includes small arms larger than caliber 26.5, including rifles, automatic rifles, machine guns, cannons, ammunition, grenades, bombs, torpedoes, tanks, armored cars and armored trains. Revolvers and automatic pistols are in class four.

The second classification takes in warships, airplane carriers and submarines. The third bars export of military airplanes or those that may be adapted for combat or bombing and the necessary ammunition and bombs. The fifth classification includes airplanes not barred specifically in class three, airplane parts and engines.

Export of gas and flame throwers to belligerents is prohibited under the sixth classification. There is nothing in the neutrality act to prohibit the sale and export of raw materials.

Raw Materials Chief Need.

The enumerated articles, automatically prohibited, are the least of a nation's needs in the event of war as it is acknowledged that an industrial nation can and would prefer to make its implements at home. The pressing need of a warring nation would be raw materials and foodstuffs.

The munitions board has shied away from any commitment on raw materials. Discretion is given to the President to embargo any other articles he pleases and to prohibit American ships from carrying them.

Under this provision the chief executive is given a discretionary power, which he could employ in favor of one belligerent and against another he disliked. There has been no indication how Mr. Roosevelt might employ this power.

Favors Shipping Nations.

As the act stands any nation which has ships and money can get essential war materials from this country. In actual operation in the event of war with France and Great Britain on one side and Germany and Italy the other, the act would favor the former because their navies would control the seas.

This point is the chief argument of those who favor a strict automatic and all comprehensive embargo which would play no favorites.

CRISIS CREATES A NEW CROP OF BRITISH JOKES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 24.—In spite of its dire possibilities, the international crisis has stirred Londoners to reaction in the form of a whole crop of jokes.

"Have you heard that Chamberlain's [Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain] next flight is to Rome?" one British correspondent asked.

"To see Mussolini?" "No, to ask the pope to canonize Judas."

Others paraphrase a familiar whisky slogan and say the new Nazi slogan is "Don't be vague, ask for Prague."

When it became apparent that even Chamberlain's visit to Berchtesgaden was not clearing away the difficulties it was said around town that all of Britain's 30,000,000 gas masks had to be called in for alteration—because Englishmen's faces had gotten much longer since the crisis came.

Among the importations from the continent is the tale of a Dutchman who was assured by a Nazi that he had better learn to say "Heil Hitler" because "you also will have our Fuehrer soon."

"We probably won't," replied the Dutchman. "We've already had your kaiser a long time." [Kaiser Wilhelm II. is in exile at Doorn.]

INJURY IN FALL IS FATAL.

WARSAW POLICE DON GAS MASKS; WAR FEAR GROWS

Bank Run Starts; Food Hoarding Begins.

BULLETIN.

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 25. (Sunday.)—(AP)—The Polish telegraphic agency reported today that many persons were killed during the night in a series of clashes between police and Polish minority groups at Teschen, Czechoslovakia.

The agency said reports of the fighting were brought across the border by refugees, many of them deserters from the Czechoslovak army.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 24.—Warsaw policemen today appeared on the streets equipped with gas masks, intensifying the alarm of the inhabitants who fear that Poland has committed herself to join Germany in war against Czechoslovakia. Police prevented crowds from forming before banks, but the run on savings institutions continued and food hoarding has begun.

The Polish press is publishing virulent attacks against the soviet government, alleging that Moscow and Prague are trying to provoke a European war.

Press Attacks Russia.

The Polska Sbrojna, official newspaper of the Polish army and with exceptional sources of information, ridicules the possibility of Russia waging war with an incompetently staffed and officered army. It declares that Russia is trying to bluff Europe into a war which the communist international will attempt to convert into a European revolution.

The Gazeta Polska calls Moscow's action in threatening to cancel the nonaggression pact with Poland as blackmail, reporting that the Polish reply was strongly worded.

This paper accuses the soviet government of being the greatest disturbing force in European politics, saying that the Moscow-Prague-Paris alliance is only fiction and the Red army never will dare to move outside of Russia's frontiers.

Three Polish Borders Shut.

WARSAW, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Polish-Czechoslovak border was closed today and the American consulate here reported there was no chance for Americans attempting to leave Czechoslovakia to do so by way of Poland.

[The German and Hungarian Czechoslovak borders also were closed, leaving the Rumanian-Czechoslovak border the only open frontier.]

The Daily Prague-Warsaw airplane did not leave Prague. The afternoon train from Prague should have reached Warsaw at 1 p. m. [7 a. m., Chicago time], but did not arrive.

Report Several Dead in Clash.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(AP)—An Exchange Telegraph company [British news agency] dispatch from Warsaw today said a Polish wireless station had reported one Pole and some Czech police were killed in a clash on the Polish-Czechoslovak border.

[This report is not confirmed by Associated Press correspondents.]

The Exchange Telegraph dispatch said:

"A clash occurred between Polish insurgents and Czech police during the night near Sikora on the Czechoslovak side of Teschen [border area which straddles the international line].

"It was stated by the Polish wireless station in Morazka Ostrava that a Pole was killed during a frontier clash between insurgents and Czech police last night. Some Czech police, it was added, also were killed."

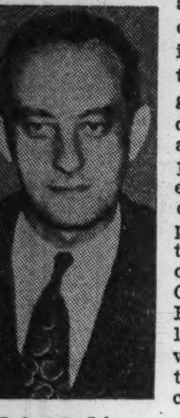
GRAFT RECORDS STOLEN, CHARGE AT PENN INQUIRY

Missing from Files, Says Ex-Attorney General.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Records reputedly revealing graft are missing from official state files, it was charged at the legislative graft hearing today. The records are said to support charges of extortion to force contributions by public employés to Democratic campaign funds. Gov. George H. Earle and other leaders allegedly were involved in the pressure for contributions.



Herbert B. Cohen.
[Acme Photo.]

This was the testimony of Charles J. Margiotti, former attorney general and chief accuser of the Earle régime, as the committee of legislators wound up the third week of its so-called investigation. The committee headed by House Democratic Leader Herbert B. Cohen adjourned until Tuesday.

In Justice Department Office.

The records had been in the office of the department of justice, Margiotti said, before Gov. Earle fired him as Pennsylvania's chief law officer last spring because he demanded a grand jury investigation into the graft charges hurled luring the blistering Democratic primary campaign.

Whether the files had been rifled and a bonfire held in the justice department after Margiotti's ouster and prior to the legislative inquiry was not brought out by the committee.

The legislative committee has been labeled a whitewashing body. It was appointed by Earle forces to forestall a grand jury inquiry. It is preponderately Democratic.

Charge 2 Million Extracted.

According to the charges the state machine extracted two million dollars a year from pay rollers, a percentage of which was poured into the coffers of the Democratic national committee at Washington.

Two days ago Margiotti had asked for the files on correspondence between himself and Gov. Earle as well as other documents dealing with the reputed extortion. What records there were finally arrived today.

Margiotti thumbed through the papers and then turned to the committee.

"I want to testify about some missing papers," said the ex-attorney general.

"We're not interested," snapped Chairman Cohen.

"Well, you ought to be," retorted Margiotti.

Representative Ellwood Turner, one of the two Republicans on the committee, declared that the incident showed the inadequacy of an investigation in which the accused were warned ahead of time.

Demands Action Be Taken.

"Such a procedure gives people who might be incriminated a long time to get at the files," asserted Turner. "If we find any proof that a paper has been removed from any department I am going to use every power I have to see that action is taken."

Just as the hearing ended Margiotti got to his feet and announced that certain records also were missing from the department of justice file of Pioneer Materials company in connection with an alleged scandal in the purchase of gravel in Erie county.

"There are some papers missing there and they are important papers," he said.

After this Margiotti testified that two of his deputy assistant attorney generals, George Keitel and Russell Shockley, had been assessed for political contributions a year ago. When they refused to pay, he declared, State Chairman [Democratic] David L. Lawrence demanded that they be fired.

Leading up to the episode, Margiotti related, was a conference with Ted Prendergast, Gov. Earle's confidential secretary. Prendergast told him the two assistants, who incidentally were holdover Republicans, had to be fired. Margiotti went to Earle who told him to work the matter out with Lawrence.

Margiotti declared that he refused to accede to the demands. The executive board headed by the governor also refused to consider increases in salary for the two deputies because they would not be shaken down for the contributions, the witness added.

Democrats Start Levies.

Until the present régime came in Pennsylvania it was unlawful for the party in power to levy assessments on employés. Legislative acts of 1883 and 1897 declared such practice a criminal offense.

Soon after the Earle administration began a new election code was drawn which repealed the two early acts. The state Supreme court subsequently upheld the election code legislation, but remarked that the repealer section was offensive to the public good.

Margiotti and others claim that the state officials who participated in the Shockley and Keitel episode are guilty of extortion and conspiracy. Under the common law if two persons conspire to do an immoral act or act offensive to public policy it is a crime.

EHLER PLEDGES A CRUSADE FOR HONEST BALLOTS

Names Ditchburne Manager in County Judge Race

Former Judge Theodore F. Ehler, Republican nominee for county judge, opened his election campaign yesterday with two announcements. He named Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne as his campaign manager and said that before the election on Nov. 8 he will make public the names of three prominent citizens he will appoint to the board of election commissioners if he is elected.

"I have asked Mr. Ditchburne to act as my campaign manager," read the Ehler announcement, "because of his high standing in the legal profession and his reputation as a courageous and fighting law enforcer. With him in command, we shall launch a crusade for honest elections and good government in Cook county such as has never been conducted before.

Demands Honest Election.

"Honest and efficient government in the county will remain an idle dream unless honest elections are assured. We have been talking about honest elections for years, but nothing has been done about it. Every primary and every election discloses greater frauds, more brazen vote thievery and more serious violations of the law.

"Every conceivable election crime has been committed during the four successive terms of the present county judge. Ballot boxes have been stuffed, criminals have been appointed as judges and clerks, honest poll officials and watchers have been intimidated and slugged and murdered, registration lists have been padded, and today there are 150,000 fraudulent names on the poll books.

"Throughout his sixteen years in office the county judge has been condemned by every newspaper and repudiated by all civic leaders and organizations. Yet he has more deeply entrenched himself through his domination and control of the election machinery.

"I have always maintained and I am firmly convinced that the alliance between crime and politics in Chicago begins at the polling booth where unscrupulous politicians promise protection to gamblers, racketeers, and criminals in return for their help in stealing elections.

Criminals' Aid Necessary.

"Registration rolls cannot be padded without the aid of lawbreakers, and ballot boxes cannot be stolen without the help of criminals. When this alliance is once formed, the politician becomes the tool of the criminal and must do his bidding. No one is more responsible for this situation than are the county judge and his election commissioners. Instead of stopping thievery and corruption by appointing honest election judges and clerks, they encourage it.

"I will divorce the election machinery of Cook county from the crooked and corrupt precinct workers and ward heelers by appointing as election commissioners three of our most prominent citizens, men who enjoy the confidence of the people and whose integrity cannot be questioned.

"I shall give them full and unconditional power and directions to remove all judges and clerks from political influence and domination.

"To assure the voters that this is not an idle promise, their names will be announced before Nov. 8 and these three outstanding citizens will guarantee honest elections unconditionally and without reservations."

A Candidate in 1936.

Attorney Ditchburne, who served several years as an assistant state's attorney and has a record as a successful prosecutor, was the Republican nominee for state's attorney in 1936. In accepting Ehler's invitation to manage his campaign, Ditchburne said he considered it a call to real public service.

"No number of alibis or excuses," he said, "can offset the patent fact that during sixteen years in office the present county judge has failed to clean up the deplorable conditions known to exist in Chicago elections.

"Former Judge Ehler has undertaken the race because he feels intensely, as I do and most of us do, the crying need for determined action to remove forever the menace to our liberties through dishonest elections. I believe in him and in the principles for which he stands. We call on all liberty loving, civic minded citizens to support him in a real crusade for the protection of the ballot."

Bride's Uncle Drops Dead at Wedding Festivities

Death ended a gay reception last night for two newlyweds, George and Mrs. Florence Chuhak, 1832 North Marshfield avenue. The reception was being held in the hall at 2254 Fullerton avenue. Some 200 guests were present and dancing. At the height of the celebration Michael Kostecki, 50 years old, 2226 Lyndale street, the bride's uncle, dropped dead of a heart attack.

CITY TO KEEP ITS REFUSE PIT, BUT IT WON'T SMELL

The city will continue to dump refuse into an abandoned lime quarry at 19th street and Damen avenue, but the refuse will be of an odorless nature. These were the terms of an agreement reached yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Smith and Attorney George F. Barrett, counsel for property owners in the neighborhood. The property owners sought an injunction to restrain the city from dumping any garbage into the pit. On Friday Judge William Brothers refused to issue the order, but suggested a compromise by which the type of refuse would not be objectionable to residents.

LOOP SHOPPERS WATCH FIRE.

Conceived in the mind and born of necessity—the little notions of yesterday become the ideas of today and the realities of tomorrow. FINDS U. S. LACKS ARMS TO EQUIP 400,000 TROOPS

General Staf Rushes to Meet Deficiency.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The army high command today disclosed that though 400,000 troops could be brought into line against an invading enemy, the troops could not take the field properly equipped with arms, ammunition, and other necessities.

At present, it was said, the government would be unable to supply sufficient war materials to keep an army of 400,000 men in the field against an enemy. There is an insufficient number of semi-automatic rifles, perfected anti-aircraft guns, latest type machine guns, modern heavy caliber guns, and ammunition for such an army.

However, the general staf is working to meet this deficiency in view of the tenseness in Europe, quieted as far as Czechoslovakia is concerned, but which may flare into war at any moment.

Army Works to Meet Problem.

The army is working to meet the problem on two fronts. First, the army is creating a reserve of materials and machinery for the making of munitions in wartime. Second, the army has mobilized industry to put the full force of the country's raw materials and factories behind the front line in the event of war.

Ten thousand industrial plants have agreed to hold themselves in readiness for industrial mobilization should this country enter war. The department is engaged in assigning tasks to these plants under a program which would rush a multimillion dollar production schedule to meet the needs of troops at the front.

In making the selection the war department canvassed some 20,000 plants throughout the country. Agreements are being made with the manufacturers as to the materials they will be called upon to produce for the fighting army. The plants are being equipped with machinery to turn out the needed materials.

Send Telegram to Plants.

As a result within a few months the program will have been brought to such a state of perfection that all the war department will have to do, if war comes, is to send a telegram to the plants and they will begin turning out the materials.

For the perfection of industrial coordination with fighting troops congress appropriated $10,000,000 to the war department. This is to be used in the next five years to finance "educational orders" of war supplies from private plants now engaged in turning out automobiles, machinery, and other instruments of peace.

Two million dollars of the fund was made available this year. Items for manufacturers to develop, as selected by the department, are semi-automatic rifles, forging and machining 75 millimeter shells, gas masks, and 60 inch search lights.

The Spanish conflict provided a lesson, which in part, prompted President Roosevelt to allot $50,000 of relief money to finance a federal survey of power facilities, contemplating a mobilization of power in time of war. Power interests feel that the survey also was ordered to further concentration of power in the executive.

Statistics on Power Facilities.

The survey is designed, as far as the war department is concerned, to furnish statistical information on how power facilities could be expanded to turn new wheels of industry and to move power into areas where it might be most necessary in event of a conflict.

In Spain Loyalist forces were forced to surrender ground time and again because power could not be brought to important strategic areas. When the local power houses were bombed the Loyalist troops were forced to give ground.

The department has completed studies of the availabiltiy of metals and other vital raw materials. It has also mapped transportation routes and facilities.

The department is ready to impress trucks into war service. It is also ready to take over railroads, if necessary, and has even prepared a study of civlian and commercial aircraft looking toward mobilization of these planes for war service.

The present shortage of war necessities was outlined by Gen. Malin Craig, army chief of staf. He said:

"The war department has designated as immediate and urgent the shortage in critical items of equipment for the initial protective force.

"These items are highly important in that they cover all types of ammunition, including bombs, anti-aircraft guns and accessories, all critical items of weapons, tanks, critical items of medical supply, gas masks and other material that would be vital in battle and which cannot be procured in time and quantity required from present commercial facilities.

"The army's most urgent need in ground equipment is anti-aircraft armament and equipment.

Anti-Aircraft Artillery.

"It is anticipated that in an emergency the demand for defense against hostile aviation will be immediate and enormous. Our present stocks of anti-aircraft artillery are entirely inadequate to meet the most urgent demands for the protection of vital objectives on or adjacent to our coasts.

"The manufacture of this material in the quantity needed requires many months, extending into years. In consequence, its procurement cannot be delayed until an emergency arises."

With the army striving to keep pace with its peacetime necessities, the task to see that the country will be able to equip a wartime army has been delegated to Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson. He has been completing the industrial mobilization plan and directing the survey of raw materials.

Provide for Three Basic Factors.

"To conduct a war successfully a nation must provide for three basic factors," Johnson said.

"First, the fighting man power must be raised and trained.

"Second, the fighting man power must be equipped and supplied with fighting materials and transportation.

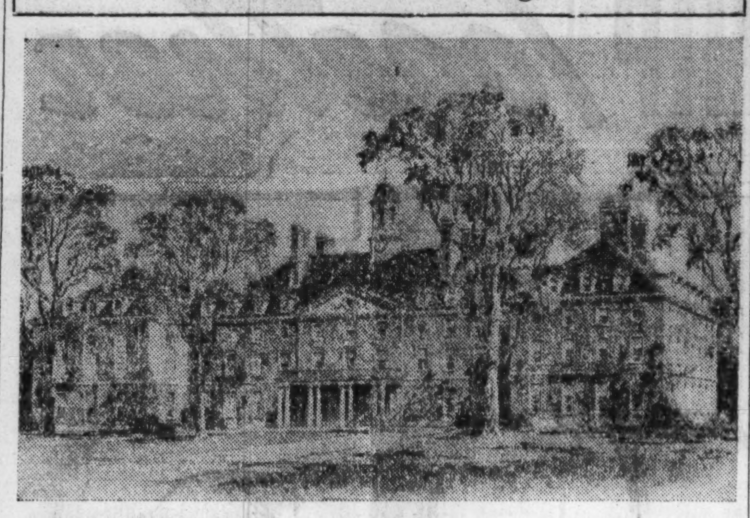
"Third, the fighting man power must receive the wholehearted and loyal support of the civilian population behind the lines."

The army feels that the United States is superior to any other nation in the character of the men it can summon to arms. The American soldier in this technical age is superior of any because of his education and background, officers say.

It is also acknowledged that this nation is richest in raw materials and industrial facilities. This country has within its borders and possessions a greater share of raw materials needed for war and is less dependent than other nations on outside sources.

The country also has far more industrial plants which can be mobilized to transform the raw materials into war supplies.

U. of I. Starts Union Building This Week



Preliminary excavation for the new Illini union at the University of Illinois in Urbana is scheduled to be started this week. The structure, costing a million dollars, is expected to be completed in February, 1940. This is an architect's drawing.

Approved by Board

Ground will be broken this week to move service lines preparatory to construction of the $1,000,000 Illini Union building at the University of Illinois, Urbana, it was announced yesterday at a meeting of the board of trustees at the Blackstone hotel. Sketches of the structure were approved by the trustees.

The building which will be part of a four million dollar construction program at the university this year, is made possible by a $450,000 federal grant and a loan of $550,000 from an eastern insurance company. Alumni and others will be asked to contribute to a fund to buy equipment and furnishings, to cost about $250,000.

Actual building will be started the first of the year and will be finished by February, 1940, university officials said.

Ernest L. Stouffer, assistant supervising architect for the university, designed the building. Howard L. Cheney, Chicago, is consulting architect.

Other construction at the university, scheduled to be started soon, includes a classroom building, additions to the library and hospital, and a natural resources building.

PRESIDENT STAYS IN WHITE HOUSE TO CURE HIS COLD

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt, who has been suffering all the week with a head cold which confined him to his private quarters in the White House, was reported by his aids today as showing continued improvement. Dr. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, who has been treating President Roosevelt for the cold, described the case as one where the chief executive was just "coasting along."

Despite his improved condition, President Roosevelt, on the advice of his physician, remained in his quarters at the White House again today and made no engagements to see any callers.

Should the President's condition continue to show improvement, he hopes to witness from aboard the presidential yacht Potomac tomorrow's motor boat races in the President's annual cup regatta on the Potomac river.

STORM STRICKEN AREAS BEGIN JOB OF DIGGING OUT

Death Toll Reaches 661; Loss Tops 300 Million.

New York, Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Seven New England and North Atlantic states today began the job of rehabilitation after Wednesday's hurricane and tidal wave.

The toll of known dead reached 661 and property damage was estimated at 300 million dollars. Known dead by states were Rhode Island, 325; Massachusetts, 165; Connecticut, 100; New York, 50; New Hampshire, 12; Vermont, 5; New Jersey, 2, and the province of Quebec, Canada, 2. The death list increased 175 over yesterday's figures by discovery of additional bodies and by reports from areas where communications had been disabled.

Damage Put at 300 Millions.

Property damage in New England was estimated at approximately 200 million dollars and the damage on Long Island and the rest of the area was placed at about 100 millions. Earlier reports estimated the property loss at half a billion.

Details of a train wreck at Stonington, Conn., became known today. The train, the Bostonian, a Boston to New York express, was wrecked while standing motionless when flood water undermined the tracks. Mrs. William B. Markell of Hartford, Conn., a passenger, and Chester A. Walker of New York, a diner pantryman, were drowned. Lack of communication prevented details of the wreck from becoming known before.

Troops Watch for Looting.

Much looting was reported throughout the storm area, and national guardsmen patroled streets and beaches to guard against theft.

Merchants made no attempt to do business in most of the section. Banks were closed and every one who was able turned to the job of cleaning up the débris. Federal and state officials said the work of rehabilitation would be a six or eight month job for 200,000 men.

The American Red Cross is asking the nation to contribute $500,000 to help care for 20,000 destitute persons.

Food Supplies Needed.

Food and medical supplies are needed at many points. Drinking water is being hauled in tank cars. Health authorities warned of the danger of pollution of the drinking water.

At New Hope, Pa., fear was expressed for the safety of William Langson Lathrop, 79 years old, dean of the Bucks county artists' colony. It was believed he was lost aboard his sailboat, which was reported to be anchored off Montauk Point, Long Island, during the storm.

DEMOCRATS PUT ANTI-NEW DEAL SLATE IN RACE

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Constitutional Democrats, the anti-New Deal party organized in Michigan by former Gov. William A. Comstock, adjourned today without persuading Comstock to accept the party's gubernatorial nomination. The ex-governor, who lost a fortune in the depression after having frequently financed Michigan Democracy in the lean years, said he could not afford to head the ticket.

As second choice, B. F. Stephenson of Detroit, former Coughlinite who was a leader in the Union for Social Justice during the 1936 campaign, was nominated over his own protest. The remainder of the state slate:

For lieutenant governor, Frank J. Sawyer, Grand Blanc; for secretary of state, Ray Morton Hardy of Wyandotte, Wayne university professor and former minister; for attorney general, Abner Dilley, Granc Rapids lawyer; for state treasurer, Sydney Main, Midland; for auditor general, John T. Bailey, Benton Harbor advertising man.

FINISH DRAFTING LAW TO PROHIBIT AIRPORT HAZARDS

Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes yesterday completed the draft of a proposed ordinance to limit the height and bulk of buildings in the vicinity of Chicago airport. The aim of the law is to prevent future flying hazards for the enlarged landing field.

Hodes submitted the draft to Ald. John E. Egan [13th] in whose ward the airport lies. It is expected to be referred to the city council building and zoning committee tomorrow.

The proposed ordinance would reduce the maximum height of buildings within the airport zone from 132 to 66 feet. The zone is bounded by Archer avenue, the tracks of the Chicago and Western Indiana and Indiana Belt railroads, 63 street, and South Central avenue.

The bulk of residences and apartments would be limited to no more than thirteen times the lot area, instead of the present fifty, and commercial buildings would be reduced to thirty-six times the area, instead of seventy-two.

Turn Back Big Fellow

Leonard Mudon moves back the hands of one of the best known clocks in Chicago in preparation for reversion to standard time.

Chicagoans turned the clock back one hour last night and awakened this morning on central standard time. Although daylight saving time for the year was officially over at 2 a. m. today, most Chicagoans changed their clocks before retiring last night.

Since the last Sunday in April when Chicago and its suburbs made the annual switch to daylight saving time 154 hours of daylight were saved. Now that daylight time is ended, Chicagoans soon will be going to and from work in the dark.

REOPEN BATTLE FOR $20,000,000 GARRETT ESTATE

Widow's Will Disposes of Only Small Part.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 24.—(AP)—A mysterious widow who died in 1930 as quietly as she had lived posed a tough question: Who is entitled to the $20,000,000 fortune she left?

No satisfactory answer has been found after nearly eight years. Next Wednesday, officials will resume hearings to determine the rightful heir, or heirs, if any.

One of those who would like to know is Attorney William M. Davison Jr., court appointed master in the estate. Others are the 25,000 claimants from every part of the world.

The widow was Mrs. Henrietta E. Garrett. She died disposing by will of only a few thousands of the $17,000,000 which had piled up through the years on the snuff fortune left by her husband, Walter Garrett, who has been dead for more than forty years. Since the widow's death the estate has grown at the rate of approximately $2,000 a day.

The hearings will be resumed at the point where they were suspended last July in the case of Isaac Newton Sheaffer, a paint and wallpaper merchant in Newark, Del. He claims to be the son of Mrs. Garrett, born before her marriage to the snuff manufacturer.

Cardinal Pacelli Injured When Auto Strikes Tree

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state, was cut slightly on his forehead today when his automobile struck a tree after the chauffeur swerved to avoid hitting a child. The papal secretary was returning from Castel Gandolfo to the Vatican to leave on a vacation in Switzerland when the accident occurred. The pope's personal physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, treated him.

AIRMEN WHO FLY FOR FUN TO RULE THE SKIES TODAY

70 Amateur Pilots to Vie at Harlem Airport.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon a formation of three light airplanes will zoom across Harlem airport at 87th street and Harlem avenue and the First Amateur Air Show will open in a burst of pyrotechnics and aerobatics.

This is the day for the men and women of Chicagoland and neighboring states who fly for fun. The show is their own. They organized it and they will be the pilots who compete in the various events. The meeting has been limited to planes with a maximum of 50 horse power so that no flyer need consider his own little ship outclassed.

Sportsmanship to Rule.

Because the show primarily is for sport, it is a nonprofit venture. Prizes have been posted by individuals and business concerns interested in promoting safe and sane flying by private airplane owners and sportsmen flyers in and around Chicago. These prizes are airplane accessories and instruments that the flyers may choose for themselves.

Clear skies and moderate northerly winds are promised for the day. The bright weather of the last week has dried out the airport.

Admission to Be Free.

There will be no admission charge for spectators. Johnny Wickham will announce the show over a public address system that has been installed on the field. Convenient parking space for 2,000 cars is available. Entrances will be on the east side of Harlem avenue.

A pilot's meeting that will be attended by the seventy entrants in the show and the field officials, headed by Jack Vilas, will be held on the airport at 11:30 a. m. All competing airplanes will be staked out along the northern boundary of the airport as they arrive, and will be on display until 1 o'clock.

PRESIDENT SEEKS 100% CONTROL OF N. Y. DEMOCRATS

Leaders Are Dismayed by His Demand.

New York, Sept. 24.—[Special.]—New York Democratic leaders are dismayed by President Roosevelt's demand that his 100 per cent New Deal partisans have 100 per cent control of the state Democratic convention in Rochester next Thursday and Friday. The leaders hoped to keep some semblance of unity between the radical and conservative factions, but Roosevelt's attitude has blasted that hope.

In carrying out Roosevelt's demands for complete control Senator Robert F. Wagner, one of his staunchest supporters, has been chosen as the keynote speaker of the convention.

Leaders in the President's own party hold that his insistence on a thorough-going vote of confidence in his home state organization is most inopportune.

O'Connor's Strength Cited.

They expressed the opinion that if Mr. Roosevelt is encouraged in his purge efforts by the recent primary defeat of Representative John J. O'Connor in the 16th congressional district he is basing his enthusiasm on an unsound premise.

O'Connor split the Democratic vote almost fifty-fifty and was defeated by only a slim margin on that ticket. He was nominated in the Republican primary. His strength was indicated by the fact he polled more votes in the two primaries than the total ballots given by both Republicans and Democrats to his two opponents.

With O'Connor's announcement that he will run as an independent Democrat as well as on the Republican ticket, political observers said the likelihood is increasing that the President crowed too soon over the representative's defeat.

Still in the Running.

If O'Connor wins in the fall election he will still have a sufficient claim on the Democratic label so that the house of representatives might properly restore him to his post as chairman of the powerful rules committee.

Another accusation made against the President by his party leaders is that the timing of his demands is poor. They point out that Jim Farley returned here only a few days ago to put the finishing touches on some high powered peace making.

It is generally conceded that Farley did an exceptionally good job in welding divergent Democratic factions into a fairly cohesive unit. But if his chief insists on forcing through his "100 percentism" policy, it is believed much of Farley's missionary work will have been in vain.

G. O. P. Prospects Brighten.

A few Democratic leaders see in "100 percentism" the possibility of a wide open split which would pave the way for a Republican victory in November. They wonder if Mr. Roosevelt has lost his political astuteness to such an extent as to risk this possibility.

Gov. Herbert Lehman, it is pointed out, would be highly embarrassed in running on a platform which unqualifiedly endorsed Mr. Roosevelt. The governor was most outspoken in his opposition to the President's court packing scheme and more recently has taken pot shots at financial aspects of Mr. Roosevelt's administration when he was governor of New York.

Gov. Lehman is out for the nomination for the United States senate seat left vacant by the death of Dr. Royal S. Copeland, but may be persuaded Senator Wagner are the only two Democrats given a chance of beating Thomas E. Dewey, New York prosecutor, whom the Republicans are expected to draft for governor.

Senator Wagner, however, prefers to run for the senate again. He is Farley's choice, but is reported to be asking why he should be drafted for a job he does not want while Gov. Lehman gets his way without argument.

Other possible Democratic nominees are Congressman James M. Mead of Buffalo, and Attorney General John J. Bennett.

G. O. P. Has Troubles, Too.

In this unsettled situation alone is a condition without precedent. Delegates to both party conventions were named at the primaries on Tuesday, along with congressional and local nominees, while the heads of the tickets were undetermined.

In this and other respects, the Democrats are not the only ones having troubles. The Republicans have made no effort to "build up" another candidate in case Dewey will not run. Nor are they set on nominees for the United States senate.

Congressman Bruce Barton appears to be a leading candidate for one of the senate nominations, but nothing definite has been decided.

Further, they are having trouble keeping peace between liberal and conservative elements within the party. Many conservatives find most distasteful the several coalitions with American Labor party candidates.

With either Gov. Lehman or Senator Wagner running, it is pointed out, Dewey or any other Republican nominee would be without labor support. Dewey had labor with him in his fusion ticket race for district attorney alongside Mayor F. H. La Guardia. Both the C. I. O. labor party and the state federation of labor have promised endorsement of either of the two Democrats.

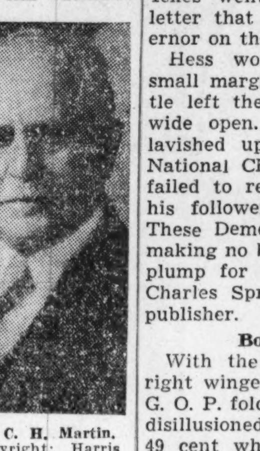
Roosevelt Purge Backfires on Democrats in Oregon

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Portland, Ore., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The Roosevelt purge has backfired in Oregon with results exceedingly unpleasant to the Democrats and correspondingly encouraging to the Republicans.



Gov. C. H. Martin. [Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

Oregon was the scene of the President's first undertaking to purge his party of an official obnoxious to him. This was before the President came into the open in this undertaking, when he was still professing to preserve neutrality in intraparty contests. The purge then was being conducted by the "elimination committee," consisting of Harry L. Hopkins, Thomas G. Corcoran, Harold L. Ickes, and other subordinates, theoretically without the knowledge and approval of "the chief."

Disasters Follow Purge Victory.

The purge was highly successful in Oregon and but for subsequent disasters it would have continued as an undercover operation of the "elimination committee."

Thus it falls out that of only two victories for the purge, one was scored by Mr. Roosevelt in a congressional district where he defeated John J. O'Connor and the other by the "elimination committee" in the Oregon primary to choose the Democratic candidate for governor. Purging the party of independent senators proved wholly beyond the power of either "the chief" or his subordinates.

Gov. Charles H. Martin, a two fisted, fighting retired major general of the regular army, who as a congressman a few years ago the Democrats were proud to call their own, was a candidate for renomination.

Arrayed against him from the start were the C. I. O., the left wing Democrats, the Socialists, communists, and other radicals who resented his obstruction of the tactics employed in the longshoremen's and lumber mill strikes that paralyzed business, dependent on the shipping and lumber industries for months.

Radicals Line Up for Hess.

The radicals lined up in support of Harry L. Hess, chief opponent of Gov. Martin in the primary. John L. Lewis gave Hess his blessing, and the indorsement of the Roosevelt administration soon thereafter was forthcoming.

Gov. Martin had quoted the President as remarking to him that "We would make a good pair." Through the White House secretariat the President repudiated this utterance. Then Hess' campaign manager obtained from the White House the judgment that "Gov. Martin is no New Dealer." And finally Secretary of the Interior Ickes went to bat for Hess in a letter that definitly placed the governor on the Roosevelt black list.

Bolt of Democrats.

With the bolt of the Democratic right wingers and the return to the G. O. P. fold of thousands of farmers disillusioned of New Deal policies by 49 cent wheat, the election of Mr. Sprague may be regarded as highly probable. The most optimistic Democratic leaders I talked with privately conceded Hess no better than a fifty-fifty chance. Biggest sensation recently was the Democratic Portland Journal's indorsement of Sprague. That made the repudiation of Hess by the Democratic press of the state virtually unanimous.

From these Democratic defections and the turn of the tide generally toward the Republicans, State Treasurer Rufus C. Holman is benefiting prodigiously as the Republican nominee for United States senator against the Democratic candidate, Willis Mahoney. The Republicans, however, are far less confident of beating Mahoney than Hess. The impartial judgment I sounded is that the Republicans will elect the governor; the Democrats the senator.

Two years ago Mahoney came within 5,500 votes of beating Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican leader of the senate, probably would have defeated him had it not been for a slight defect in the Mahoney political record.

Mahoney Defeated in 1934.

In 1934 Mahoney was defeated by Gen. Martin for the Democratic nomination for governor and in the election he opposed Martin. That earned him the defection of Martin's friends two years ago. If the grudge still persists it might, of course, compass his defeat this time.

The state's representation in the house at Washington is composed of two Democrats and one Republican. The best chance the Republicans stand of gaining a member is in the wheat-raising second district east of the Cascade mountains where Republican Candidate U. S. Ballantine is giving Democratic Congressman Walter M. Pierce a hard battle.

Less favorable is the chance of Republican Candidate Homer Angell to defeat Democratic Congresswoman Nan W. Honeyman in the Portland district. Republican Congressman James W. Mott is assured of reëlection in the Salem district.

PROTEST PLACING OF TWO PARTIES ON STATE BALLOT

Protests were filed in Springfield yesterday attacking petitions seeking to place candidates on the November ballot under the separate auspices of the Illinois Labor party and the Communist party. The latter slate is designated "Independent," but its senatorial candidate, Morris Childs, is secretary of the Communist party in the state.

The protests, alleging that the petitions failed to comply with the law, were filed with Secretary of State Hughes. They will be considered next Thursday by the election certifying board, composed of Hughes, Attorney General Kerner, and State Auditor Barrett. It was expected the board would recognize the protests as valid. If this is done the ballot will list only the Republican and Democratic nominees, and perhaps a third ticket backed by the Prohibitionists—unless they also are challenged.

Protests against the Labor party slate, which is headed by Frank W. McCulloch of Evanston, were filed by Warren Wright of Jacksonville and Glenn M. Harvey, Springfield. Edgar W. Schulz, commander of a Springfield post of the American Legion, filed the protest to the "Independent" petition.

A YOUNG MOTHER HEADS WOMEN'S CLUBS OF G. O. P.

Mrs. James R. Arneill Jr., an attractive young mother from Denver, yesterday was chosen first president of the newly organized National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs of America. Her election culminated a two day conference of the federation in the Palmer house. More than two hundred delegates from twenty-three states attended.

Miss Marion Martin, assistant chairman of the Republican national committee, will continue as director of the organization.

"We hope to have 500,000 active members by the 1940 election," Miss Martin said. "We will use our units to collect, analyze, and disseminate information concerning governmental and political affairs, to promote the election of the Republican party's nominees, and in general to insure the principles of freedom, equality, and justice which have been imperiled in the last few years."

Mrs. Arneill is 30 years old. She is the wife of a physician, and has two children. She has spent only four years in active politics, having organized the Independent Coalition of American Women in Colorado in 1936.

NEW TRIER G. O. P. WOMEN GET THEIR MAN—IN OFFICE

Good Public Servants Only Goal of 1,400.

BY MARCIA WINN.

The Women's Republican Club of New Trier says it has no political pull, no ax to grind, no patronage to grant, no patronage to seek. But:

Mrs. Edward B. Hall, president of club. [Mathew Francis Photo.]

It has 1,400 paid up members in the north shore township of New Trier alone. In an off political year its membership doubled. It is recognized as a formidable political force, its indorsement alone being enough to elect a candidate in the township.

You may scoff at this. Others have. After all, the skeptics say, what can a group of women do?

As They Go, So Goes Township.

Refutation of the scoffers is a simple matter of arithmetic. Candidates indorsed by the New Trier women carry the township by a vote of usually 2 to 1. The others don't stand a chance.

In the last April primary there were five outstanding instances of this. In five cases the New Trier indorsement differed from the regular Republican indorsement. In each of those five cases the New Trier indorsee carried the township.

Organized eight years ago as the Republican Women's club of Winnetka, the club set forth a single goal: The securing of better candidates to run on the Republican ticket. It has stuck to this.

"When we have outstanding candidates willing to serve our community we must, and we do get out and work for them," Mrs. Ira C. Keller of Winnetka, former vice president, explained.

Nominated Woman Legislator.

"We nominated Mrs. Bernice Van Der Vries to run for the state legislature. We are proud to keep her there. Her fine work is well known.

"Together with an independent men's group we drafted Henry Gardner to serve this township on the county central committee. He's right there — and was renominated in April."

Its indorsements are made in great secrecy. That is, a candiadtes' committee, its members unknown, does all the work. It investigates a candidate's life, works, and "dark closets" to the nth degree.

Then, two weeks before election day, the indorsements are made public and sample ballots distributed to every home in the township, which includes the villages of Glencoe, Winnetka, Wilmette, and Kenilworth.

The club's organization is just about foolproof. It has a precinct chairman in each of New Trier's forty precincts. Each precinct chairman has a worker for each block. Each village has a membership chairman.

From Oct. 1 to Oct. 10 a membership canvass is held. Workers go to every house, obtaining lists of all residents and their political party affiliations. Next, they see that all Republican residents are registered.

Before each election a political information bureau is set up in Winnetka. On election day workers check the polling places, marking off the voters as they appear. In midafternoon they telephone all laggards and rout them out.

Unite Opposing Factions.

"We have a united party in our township," Mrs. Keller says, "and formerly we had several bitter factions. In our quiet way we are trying to better conditions and are succeeding in large measure.

"It's the same old story of door to door work, gaining your influence and your power through an interested, hardworking membership."

Mrs. Edward B. Hall of Winnetka is president. Mrs. Rollin D. Wood, Mrs. Walter Buchen, and Mrs. John P. Hooker, all of Winnetka; Mrs. Lewis B. Ermeling of Wilmette, Mrs. Walter Marks of Kenilworth, Mrs. Alfred Taylor, and Mrs. Bruce MacLeish, both of Glencoe, are vice presidents. Mrs. Hill Blackett is membership chairman.

YARDSTICK AND COSTS OF GOVERNMENT.

For years a small minority of the people of the United States have advocated public ownership of railroads and public utilities. They have believed that the profits in providing these essential services are very large and that substantial savings for all the people may be had under public ownership and management. Some of the leaders, not always frankly, have promoted public ownership of these lines of business as a step in the complete socialization of industry.

Until recently the earlier popularity of this movement seemed to wane. For a period the development of effective state control over rates and standards of service and the disappointing results obtained in many places where utilities were operated by local governments appeared to have stopped most of the agitation. With the development of the communist party in the United States the public ownership and operation of public utilities came once more into the foreground. But nothing in the past history of municipal ownership is comparable to the socializing of the utility business brought about during the last six years under the stimulus of the government at Washington.

Previously who sold you the power to light your home and what he charged for it was a local question. Each city decided for itself whether it wanted the electric light business to be a city hall activity or privately owned. In many municipalities it was voted upon and rejected. Elsewhere it was approved. In some cities it is felt that municipal ownership has been highly beneficial, but not infrequently the good showing is due to fictitious bookkeeping. Generally the municipally owned utility is financed by bond issues. The charge for capital is not always reckoned as a part of the power cost. The loss of tax revenue when the utility is publicly owned is also not taken into account. Thus, what the power user in M. O. cities saved in his light bill he more than made up for in his tax bill.

The present national administration has sought to make power not a local but a national issue. The government has itself undertaken giant power projects involving the expenditures of billions of dollars of public moneys. Grants and loans have been made to communities to induce them to purchase power from the government and to sell it to their citizens. There have been additional federal grants of money to small communities for the establishment of electric light plants using Diesel engines.

If the people of any city desire to transfer to their politicians the supplying of electric light and other services they should have the right to do so. We have no objections. But we do object strenuously to what the government is doing. The services rendered by private companies generally are good and the rates are generally moderate. The 21 million families whose homes are wired for electricity pay less than ten cents a day for home lighting, to run ice boxes, washing machines, curling irons, room heaters, and clocks. They pay an additional amount indirectly for the power used to produce goods and services for them. This additional amount equals eleven cents a day on the average for each family in the United States.

All the power costs taken together, all the revenues for electricity, do not exceed twenty-one cents per day for each family, and that includes the cost of power to turn the wheels of industry, to illuminate stores and offices, to operate street cars, and light the streets. Keep that twenty-one cents in mind and compare it with a dollar a day which is the average amount each American family will have to pay to the government on account of its expenditures. The federal government costs the average family five times as much as is charged for electricity by all the power companies.

And the federal government, which cannot pretend that its activities contribute as much to family living comforts for its dollar day as the utilities do for twenty cents, is doing everything it can to ruin the utilities. If the services we get from the federal government could be reduced to the price level of electric light service the depression would be solved.

AFTER A SCORELESS WEEK-END.

Scientists are always holding meetings and reading papers, but we don't recall ever having read anything which threw light on the psychology of fish. Do they strike because they're hungry or because they're angry? Indeed, is there any reason to suppose that a fish is capable of anger? When a bass strikes at a plug does he think it's a minnow or is he annoyed at the ineptitude of the man who thought it looked like a minnow?

We bite; and if the psychology of fish were better understood, they might, too.

How about it, Mr. Becker?

RHETORICAL FURY.

Almost every day for a month the cables have carried quotations from furious speeches and editorials of central European origin. It is not easy to see how people can get that way, but they do, and central Europeans are not the only victims of this disease.

"Maryland, My Maryland" was written by James Ryder Randall, a Marylander, in April, 1861. At the time he was teaching in a Louisiana school. He wrote his superheated verses when he learned of the bloodshed which accompanied the passage of the 6th Massachusetts infantry through the streets of Baltimore on the way to Washington in the first days of the civil war. Four of the soldiers were killed and thirty-six were wounded. The casualties among the civilians were probably twice as many, but the precise figures were never ascertained.

Randall's rhetorical fire was not quenched by any consideration of the legalities or the facts. He was mad, and he didn't care who knew it.

"The despot's heel is on the shore," he observed, and he demanded that his fellow Marylanders "avenge the patriotic gore that flecked the streets of Baltimore."

He got madder as he went along. Pretty soon [stanza VII.] he was saying:

I see the blush upon thy cheek,
Maryland!
For thou wast ever bravely meek,
Maryland!
But lo! there surges forth a shriek
From hill to hill, from creek to creek;
Potomac calls to Chesapeake,
Maryland, my Maryland!

The climax was still to come. Stanza VIII. prepared for it with the following observations:

Better the fire upon thee roll,
Better the shot, the blade, the bowl
Than crucifixion of the soul,
Maryland, my Maryland.

With that for a flying start, Randall really began to burn up the track. Maryland wasn't going to stand for such treatment. No, indeed.

Huzza! She spurns the northern scum;
She breathes! She burns! She'll come! She'll come!
Maryland, my Maryland!

The moral is for writers and speakers. When they feel that kind of rhetoric coming on the remedy is an extended vacation with frequent cold baths. Unfortunately it is a remedy which seldom has been adopted. It may be worth recalling that many of the largest slave holders in the south continued to favor preservation of the Union until the war began, but their patriotic common sense was swept aside by the rhetoricians and their fury. Incidentally, Maryland didn't come; Lincoln succeeded in preventing her from seceding.

Rhetoric sometimes is the useful servant of statesmanship, but quite as often it is the master. It is doubtful, for example, if Mr. Roosevelt has advanced the cause of the victims of misfortune in this country by hurling imprecations at the heads of unnamed economic tories, princes of privilege, etc., etc. That kind of high-pressure language as a rule produces nothing more than correspondingly hot language in retort. It reduces the possibility of rational action and thereby discourages the adjustment of differences.

A RETURN TO BALANCE.

The Republican gains in the Wisconsin primary election can only mean that the voters are beginning again to be influenced by their intellects rather than their emotions. The Republicans, who were in a bad third place in Wisconsin's three party system four years ago, and in second place two years back, outstripped both Progressives and Democrats, to total approximately 44 per cent of the vote cast.

The Republican vote was about 60,000 greater than it was two years ago. The Democrats polled 17,000 fewer, and the Progressives about 18,000 fewer than two years ago.

Pierpont J. E. Wood, Wisconsin national committeeman, described the Republican victory as proof that the people are thinking clearly and patriotically. It is obvious that many who have voted in the Progressive and Democratic primaries in several recent elections voted this year with the Republicans.

The Democrats are tiring of being pushed around by a President who has never concealed his preference for companionship with the radical third party. Loss of La Follette strength is attributed to a growing opinion that he is concerned chiefly with his own political successes and to fear of the extreme theories of some of La Follette's political associates.

Alexander Wiley, Republican nominee for the senate, and Julius P. Heil, party candidate for governor, are both able men who have demonstrated by the successful management of their own affairs the ability to serve their state in a broader field.

The primary victory is reassuring, but it is not enough. It must be consolidated by winning the election on Nov. 8.

There is nothing that would be a more encouraging example to the rest of the nation than a restoration of Wisconsin to the principles of sound Republican government.

Editorial of the Day

FUTURE POPULATION AND FUTURE BUSINESS.
[Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph.]

Business executives who achieve success are always alive to the demands upon their organizations not only today and tomorrow, but also the probable demands upon them ten, twenty, or thirty years hence.

They must forever be readjusting their businesses to such future demands, otherwise the changes which are sure to come will catch them off their guard, unprepared, and consequently the victims of the inevitable losses.

What business will be in the future will depend in no small degree on what the population and character of the people living in this country will be.

Will the population be larger, smaller, or about the same?

Experts figure that the population of continental United States is now around 130 millions. By the year 1950 it will have reached a peak of 140 to 145 millions.

After that, what? These experts think that the total population will not go above 145 millions; that it will remain stationary at about that figure, then slowly decline.

The character of a stationary population necessarily changes. There are a larger proportion of the people who are in middle life or beyond, fewer who are very young. It is [illegible] that this [illegible] from now the number of persons who are 65 years old will be double the present number.

Business must change to suit customers. Schools, colleges, homes will see gradual changes; smaller enrollments in the lower grades, larger in the high schools and colleges, and the babies of today become the youth of that other period.

Can business continue to grow with a population changing as above indicated? The answer is yes, if business is alert. The growth will come not from a larger number of customers, but from high standards of living, demanding new and ever increasing luxuries which are now unknown.

The level of incomes will force changes also. Business must anticipate these changes and cater to them.

Thus as long as the earth revolves and America remains as it is there will be many people and many wants. It is the job of business to find out what the people want and supply them.

JAPAN'S PRICES RISE

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO.—The people of Japan are feeling the effects of the long drawn out war with China in rising commodity prices, despite frantic efforts of the government to keep the cost of daily necessities low.

Prices on almost all products are climbing. Figures published by the statistics section of the municipal government show an average increase of almost 20 per cent compared with last year. Foodstuffs, housing materials, lighting and heating, and clothing all have gone up at least 20 per cent. Some products, such as benzine, gasoline, copper, and steel cannot be bought without filling out a permit and even then it is highly unlikely such requests will be approved.

Of 141 key products under investigation the price of fifty-nine rose during the last thirty days, fifty-seven remained unchanged, and only twenty-five dropped. The only article which was lowered in price was muslin and this was through compulsory government regulation.

On the Ginza, Tokio's State street, merchants are gradually raising prices despite the fact that the government has thousands of inspectors checking figures to prevent profiteering. Any one who has been in this city for any length of time cannot fail to notice the boost in quotations, in some cases as much as 50 per cent.

Shoes which cost 20 yen [about $6] a few months ago have been marked up to 30 yen. The same is true with most lether goods, although the government has recently released millions of dollars, worth of lether which had been kept in warehouses.

Strangely, the price of woolen suits made from imported cloth has not risen very much, although the government has stopped all further importation of such cloth. Some tailors explain that this is because they fear government reprisals. Others point out that people will not pay more for suits from imported cloth than they pay at present. A Japanese woolen suit costs about $20, one made from imported cloth $40 and up. This is a stiff price for most Japanese.

The price of tobacco, which is a government monopoly, has been upped on an average of 20 per cent for cigarets and as much as 40 per cent for cigars. Foodstuff quotations also are rising steadily, although meat and eggs have not been affected as much as vegetables.

The masses do not seem to be disturbed by the rising cost of living. Many of the workers, especially those in industries manufacturing products for the army, have been earning what to them are fabulous wages. A workman who formerly made barely 100 yen [$29] a month is paid as high as $300 if he possesses fair technical skill. On the other hand, thousands who were employed in factories manufacturing products which the government has restricted or banned entirely, have lost their jobs. Even so, one rarely sees a beggar.

The theaters, particularly the motion picture houses, are jam packed. Comedies are the most popular numbers on programs. Thousands stand in line for hours every day to watch Eno-ken, the king of comedians. Week-end excursions are so popular that the government has found it necessary to discourage them.

A lot of people take the government's efforts to impress the nation with the urgent need of economizing with a grain of salt. Even government officials, apparently aware that the country is not as hard up as some leaders would have the people believe, are cracking jokes at far-fetched schemes for self-sufficiency that have been hatched by overzealous people.

Recently as one means of economizing on lether, shoe manufacturers were urged to try salmon skin. A few shoes were made and a pair was presented to Foreign Minister Ugaki. It was hoped that by having the general wear them "in conformity to the national policy," an example would be set.

Gen. Ugaki liked the idea of manufacturing shoes from the skin of salmon caught in Japanese waters but the plan to have him act as a manikin did not appeal to him.

"I want to wear salmon skin shoes," he slyly admitted, "but just suppose what would happen if, on calling on a friend, his cat or a rat ate up one of my shoes. It would cause my host no end of embarrassment—to say nothing of what it would cause me." [In Japan people remove their shoes on entering homes.] So Gen. Ugaki is still wearing imported lether shoes.

Conditions among Japan's farmers, who comprise 44 per cent of the population, have improved tremendously in the last few months. In a good many communities farmers are beginning to repay long outstanding debts to banks and landowners.

The main reason for the improvement of the usually miserable plight of the agricultural populace is the fact that although most crops are normal, prices are much higher.

Rice, which has been from time immemorial an all important crop with more than half the entire arable land planted with it, has not been adversely affected by the recent floods, the rice bureau of the ministry of agriculture and forestry has announced. It estimates this year's crop will not be below normal despite pessimistic earlier forecasts.

Truck farmers who benefited by the government Hypothec bank's liberal loan policy, which has enabled them since last year to use fertilizer more freely and to obtain extensions on payment of old loans, have recently started making repayments.

According to the Hyopthec bank, repayments of old loans for the first six months of this year totaled $22,000,000. There was also a contraction of $15,000,000 in new loans in comparison with the first half of 1937.

According to the ministry of agriculture and forestry, the war in China has not caused adverse changes in the economic condition of the rural districts despite the tremendous drain on man-power caused by the call to arms. The supply of farm labor, it is pointed out, has been sufficiently covered by mutual aid arrangements adopted by the farmers. The higher prices of agricultural products, particularly rice, have brought in unexpected profits.

Although there has undoubtedly been betterment in the farmer's plight, he still faces many vexing problems. Most of these problems may be traced to rapidly changing industrial conditions and to the inherent weakness in the agricultural structure.

Farm debts have multiplied many times in the last twenty-five years and the amount is estimated at roughly $300 per household as compared with $40 in 1911. The total amounts to almost 2 billion dollars. The cause of this heavy indebtedness is due simply to the poverty of the farmers. Each year the farming population increases by several hundred thousand but the land remains the same size.

A RULE OF LIFE.

THE question "Is life worth living?" has been answered in the affirmative by an overwhelming majority. In fact, if obliged to do so, we will fight for existence even against insurmountable odds. Regardless of the arguments of philosophers on the futility of being, with most of us their conclusions fail to register, as we find too much joy and happiness in our everyday tasks.

But we desire to be hardy, to have our bodies function in perfect order, which means freedom from pain, with strong, responsive muscles. There is little pleasure to be had when organs have failed and mental faculties have fled. No one has any quarrel, therefore, with the grim reaper for gathering those who, after a useful and productive life, have disintegrated in mind and body. While Moses estimated man's length of days at three score years and ten, he lived to be 120. Abraham attained the age of 175 and Joshua 110. Even now we find occasionally individuals in their nineties, or even past the century mark, who are comfortable and happy. But these are exceptions and any one who has rounded out the span of 100 years will find not only his name but his picture in all the newspapers.

What are the qualities that make for longevity? In the first instance, heredity, which implies the possession of sound structures transmitted from healthy parents, is the most potent factor. Physicians encounter this relationship repeatedly—one in his eighth decade, for example, may relate that not only his parents but his grandparents all attained the age of 90.

Occupation certainly must be considered, as anything that interferes with rest or overtaxes the physique will deplete that intangible thing we call reserve and shorten one's days. Physicians, as a rule, do not live as long as clergymen or members of the legal profession.

Again, there is the element of environment. If the home is comfortable and devoid of bickering and strife, relaxation is more wholesome. Then, too, the subject of food looms large. Regardless of the power of digestion and the soundness of sleep, intemperance in eating may wear away the foundation stones of a stalwart constitution.

It is said of the aged English jurist, Lord Mansfield, that he ascribed his good health to early rising. Others may lay large claims to water drinking; still others to the ingestion of raw foods. I recall one of these oldsters who took a daily dose of tannin; another who used far more sugar than most of us could stand; still another who never touched the body with water, using benzoated lard as a cleansing agent. But there is no panacea in any one of these fetishes.

The healthiest individuals after all are those who are busy, who keep themselves occupied. In this very fact we recognize the influence of the mind over the body. For idleness always brings discontent with a stream of complaints, because one has nothing better to do than to worry and fuss about himself. If we are intellectually alert and physically active we may assume that the liver, the heart, the lungs, and the kidneys are participating in a game in which, as members of a team, they are contributing their part to victory.

But there is a limit to what the body can perform. Minor defects are likely to develop when parts of the machine are driven too hard. If a person is conscious that he has to force himself in order to complete the day's assignments, to summon extra exertion—mental or physical—such a one is drawing upon his nervous energy with a signed blank check. Sooner or later nature will fill in the amount, bringing on physical bankruptcy.

But good health can be wrecked by too much concern about oneself. Thomas Addison described the man who was constantly weighing himself, checking his diet, looking at his tongue, and wondering about his "innards." His very attitude of doubt, of introspection, brought on a languishing illness. He who is constantly anxious about himself destroys his relish for life.

WHEN NOSE IS RED.

Mrs. J. L. writes: What causes a young person's nose to be red all the time? I have a 15 year old daughter who is troubled in this manner.

REPLY.

Gastrointestinal disturbances may be the dominant factor; for example, too much meat or sweets or both. Constipation should also be thought of. Make certain that there is no nasal or focal infection.

CELLULITIS, PHLEBITIS EXPLAINED.

Mrs. H. writes: What is the difference between cellulitis and phlebitis?

REPLY.

Cellulitis is characterized by inflammation of the tissue beneath the skin overlying the muscles. Phlebitis is inflammation of the walls of a vein.

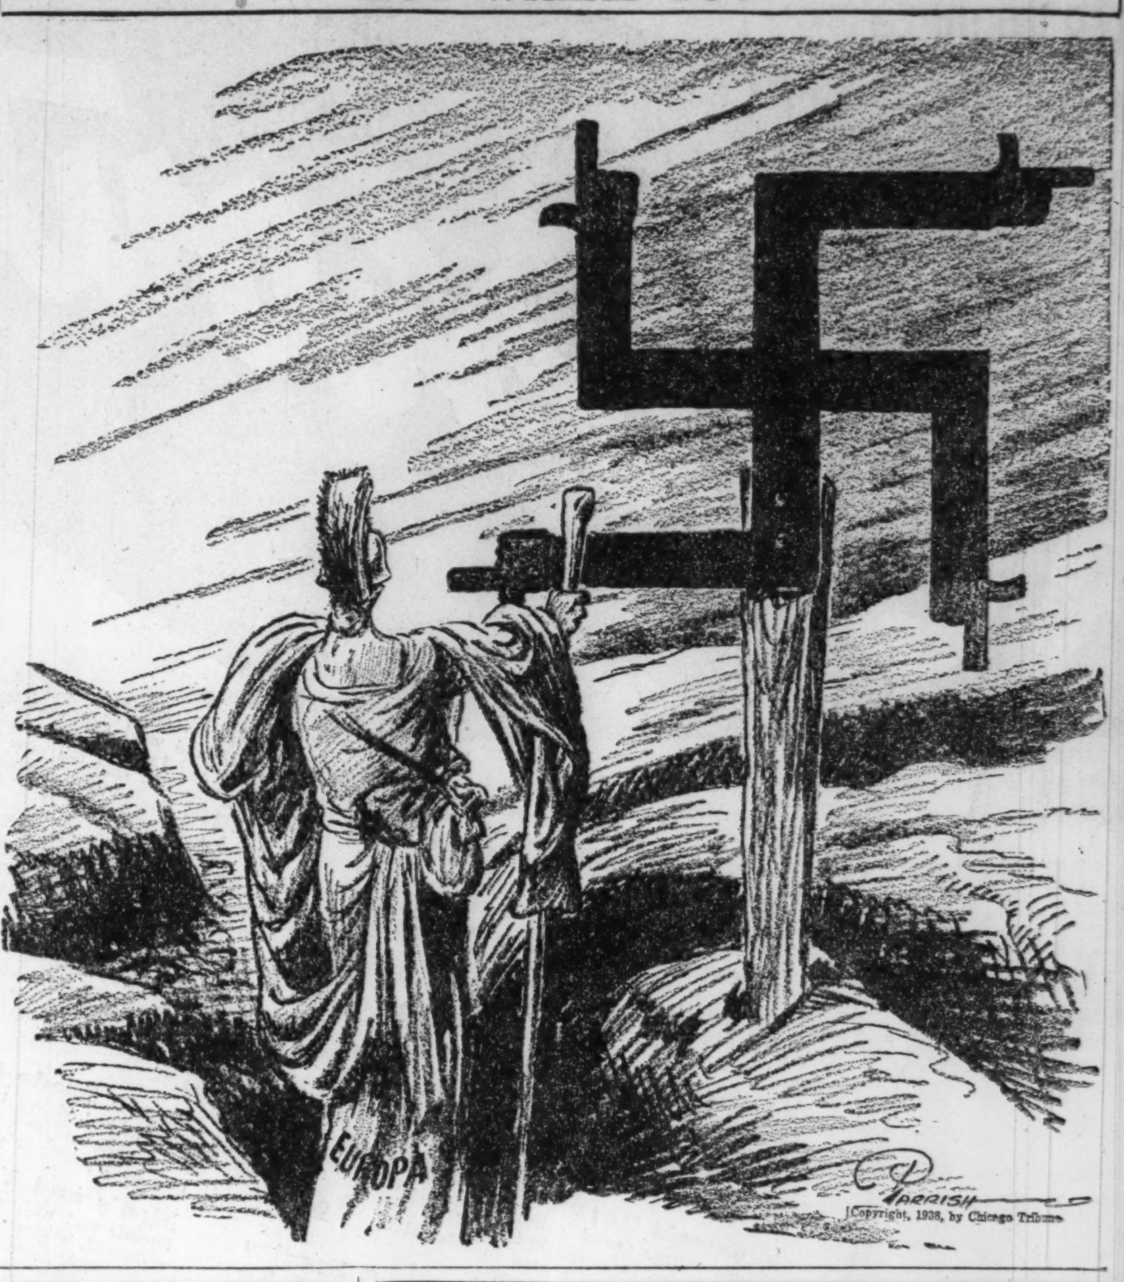
PHYSIOTHERAPY EXPLAINED.

T. T. writes: What is physiotherapy?

REPLY.

Physiotherapy is the treatment of diseases by physical means, such as heat, massage, hot and cold water, exercise, rest, muscle manipulation, and various electrical currents.

BUT WHERE TO?



FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

TAX DEED.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—About a year ago I purchased a lot on a quit claim deed with the agreement that I was to assume all back taxes. I had a tax search made and have found that the 1928 taxes were sold to an outside party and a tax deed was issued to same party in 1933. The information that I would appreciate is:

1. Is there a standard rate of interest that I have to pay in order to buy the bill?

2. Can he refuse to sell me this bill?

3. Can he get possession of my lot and will I lose out completely? O. H.

1. Ordinarily the holder of a tax deed insists on getting not only his advances and penalties, but also an amount estimated to equal what it would cost to set aside his deed in court proceedings. In substance, he is in a position to name his terms.

2. He could name the terms on which he will quit-claim his interest.

3. In general, the tax deed is merely a cloud on the title, rather than a title in itself, but if the property is vacant and the tax deed holder pays the taxes for seven years this might give him a title.

DOWER RIGHT.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Where husband and wife both make wills and husband dies first and a guardian is appointed for the surviving widow on account of incompetency, [1] can the guardian elect under the statute that the widow shall renounce under the will and claim dower?

2. In event dower is so claimed, what effect has such an election on the will of the widow if this will was made when she was wife and presumably competent? Both parties have always lived in Illinois where husband's will is probated. C. A. R.

1. He probably can.

2. Dower is a one-third life interest, hence it would terminate with her death and she would have no power to control the property by will.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DELINQUENT TAXES.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to know if a property [1] can or [2] will be sold for nonpayment of taxes as long as that property is still in Probate court. Please give me your opinion in this case. P. S.

1. Yes.

2. Depends on whether there is any bidding at the tax sale. Under depression conditions the professional tax buyers have practically ceased their activities.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WILL SHOULD BE FILED.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—How soon after death is a will read? A lawyer has had full charge before death. E. S.

Illinois law makes no provision for formal reading of a will. The will should be filed in the office of the clerk of the Probate court and should be there, accessible to all parties. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORE THAN WHEAT IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Riverside, Ill., Sept. 22.—I was much interested in the dispatch by Mr. Henning regarding North Dakota and the inference that North Dakota is risking her agricultural future on wheat. There is another side to this story.

I was raised in South Dakota. As associate editor of the Dakota Farmer, published at Aberdeen, I made many trips to North Dakota in search of farm feature stories. For years I have noted that North Dakota is much more than simply a wheat growing state.

Did you know that last year there were produced on North Dakota farms almost 2 billion pounds of milk and that the 90 creameries of the state made about 44 million pounds of butter? Did you know that one of the oldest dairy breeding circuits in the United States has been functioning for years at New Salem, N. D.? Did you know that for more than twenty years the most intensive trials in beef pasture investigations in the country have been carried on at Mandon, N. D.?

On Jan. 1, this year, there were 1,220,000 head of cattle on North Dakota farms and more than 500,000 dairy cows. Last year North Dakota farmers sold nearly 25 million dollars' worth of cattle, hogs, and sheep.

North Dakota is second among all states in the production of flax and in some years the state has harvested more than 4 million acres of corn, flax, oats, and barley. Last year the sales of sheep from North Dakota farms totaled about 3 million dollars.

HOWARD BIGGAR.

VILLA PARK'S DRAINAGE TROUBLES.

Villa Park, Ill., Sept. 21.—I am writing about stream pollution as it relates to Villa Park, which was one of the original group of municipalities forming the Salt creek sanitary district. All of the others withdrew by petition to court. This leaves the sanitary district operating one sewage treatment plant which serves only a part of our municipality and was overloaded as long ago as 1930, according to a survey by the state sanitary water board.

Despite the inadequacy of the plant, the trustees of the Salt creek district have made no effort to enlarge or rehabilitate it so that sewage may be adequately treated. Consequently, all efforts to correct this situation have been blocked because the municipal government of Villa Park is without jurisdiction.

This situation could be corrected at once if the court [Du Page county] would appoint village trustees as trustees of the sanitary district, without pay. This would enable the village trustees to proceed with plans to enlarge and rehabilitate the sewage disposal plant.

Will you please print this in order that the public may be informed on the extent to which an influence wholly outside the jurisdiction of Villa Park can block a progressive development of importance, not only to every citizen of Villa Park but also to every one in the Salt creek basin below?

C. I. REED,
Chairman, Committee on Water and Sanitation, Villa Park Board of Trustees.

THE FARMER AND THE C. I. O.

Solon Springs, Wis., Sept. 22.—The C. I. O. and the national administration, through strikes and relief, make it possible for multitudes of people to live in idleness, either complete or in part, the latter the half idle "workers" on worthless or semi-worthless "projects."

But agriculture, since the farmer is neither striking nor on relief, is the only industry that is running full time. Accordingly, farm product prices are relatively low, while those of mills and factories, where production is at a minimum, are relatively high. The farmer receives less than he should for what he sells and pays more than he should for what he buys. He is crushed between John L. Lewis on the one hand and Harry Hopkins on the other, with the President saying: "Boys, God bless you both!" The farmer is the willing worker, the adherents of the C. I. O. the balky horse. The farmer is pulling three-fourths of the load.

There can be no prosperity in this country until these strikers and others who now are supported in idleness by the government are told [like the farmers] to earn their own living.

JOHN A. SIMPSON.

AN OPTIMISTIC LOT.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—In spite of the fact that the street has been torn up all spring and summer, Jeffery avenue property owners are an optimistic lot.

They believe that by the time the fall renting season rolls around in 1954 widening and repairing will have progressed to such an extent that apartments will once again be accessible to inspection.

Meantime they are dickering for the services of some master mind magician who can stalk into vacant apartments and bring forth out of his silk hat enough greenbacks with which to pay taxes, to say nothing of other fixed charges which must necessarily continue regardless of vacancies or reduced income.

What price WPA? H. M. W.

JUSTICE FOR HUNGARY!

Chicago, Sept. 18.—If the artificers of peace at the so-called peace conference in 1920 utterly disregarded the real historical facts concerning democratic Hungary and showed no mercy toward her while she stood prostrate before inferiors, THE TRIBUNE certainly stands out as a shining example of one seeking to fight for the truth. The Tribune's excellent article on "The Move to Regain Hungary's Lost Lands Expected," published on Sept. 9, 1938, as well as the accompanying map [How Treaties Divided Hungary] arrest the attention of all those who believe in democracy and truth. Justice must be accorded to Hungary.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY JOSEPH CERUTTI.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON—Two radio stations, said to be the biggest of their kind in the world, are being completed at Ryanna, on the Shannon estuary in Ireland, and at Hatties Camp in Newfoundland, in preparation for the trans-Atlantic air service between London and New York.

When finished the Shannon and Hatties Camp stations will provide the most elaborate radio service ever devised for aircraft purposes, it is stated. All planes will be in constant communication with their land bases. Both stations will provide:

Medium frequency transmission and reception.

Directive high frequency transmission and reception for point to point communication.

High frequency transmission and reception for aircraft on one of a number of different frequencies, used according to the season, time of day, and distance, with facilities for instantaneous wave change.

High and medium frequency Adcock direction finders.

High frequency landing approach beacons.

In addition, there will be extensive facilities for the reception of meteorological reports.

Arrangements have been made for the transfer of point to point communications to the submarine cables, in case of any disturbance of long distance radio communication.

An outstanding feature of the service will be the use of high frequency direction finders, capable of giving bearings up to 1,000 miles. Use of the direction finding apparatus in the airplanes will enable pilots to pick up high powered broadcasting stations, and in particular, to obtain the bearings of ships.

For this purpose the Ryanna base is to be linked up with the postoffice ship station at Burnham, where information as to the positions of vessels in the Atlantic will be assembled and plotted before each flight.

FREE PRESS ONLY BAR TO DICTATOR, WARNS GANNETT

Minton Seeking U. S. Gag, Says Publisher.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Only a free press stands between American citizenship and dictatorship, Frank Gannett, publisher of the Gannett newspapers, declared in a radio speech broadcast here today.

Frank Gannett. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

Gannett replied to attacks by Senator Sherman Minton [D., Ind.] in what he described as Minton's efforts to gag the press.

"The printed word has dethroned kings and despots," said Gannett. "It is still the one greatest maker and molder of public opinion. While the press is free, and only while the press is free, is there democratic self-government anywhere in the world today.

Cites Censorship Perils.

"In Germany, Italy, and Russia no citizen has any idea of what is going on in the world. The only information he gets is what the government wants him to have. A censor tells the newspapers what to publish and what not to publish, so that in his ignorance the citizen will support the government in power."

Gannett declared that Senator Minton advocated similar conditions for the United States in introducing his bill providing fines and imprisonment for any one knowingly printing an untruth. Mr. Gannett decried the necessity for such a law, pointing out that present statutes hold publishers accountable for untruths in both criminal and civil actions.

"You have a right to know what is behind Mr. Minton's efforts to gag the press," he said. "Some of us have seen him in action. He succeeded to the chairmanship of the infamous Black committee of the senate which overrode constitutional guarantees against search and seizure by stealing the private telegrams of citizens.

Assails Abuse of Power.

"Mr. Minton, when he became head of the Black committee, attempted the same abuse of power. He sent his inquisitors to the New York office of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, of which I am chairman. They came with an illegal dragnet subpena, calling for all our books and correspondence.

"The committee's offense was that it had helped to mobilize public opinion against packing the Supreme court and against the bill to give the President unlimited power to reorganize and dominate all executive departments of the government.

"We defied Mr. Minton and his threat to send us to jail. Then his own colleagues refused to grant his request for more money to pursue his inquisition. Next he proposed an investigation of the press as a whole and the senate ignored that. Finally he introduced the bill to intimidate the press.

Bill Hooted Down.

"To the credit of the intelligent American people this bill was promptly hooted out of the court of public opinion.

"Again and again the free press of our country has risen to great heights in defense of our liberties and our democracy.

"It was the support of the press of America that brought to a successful conclusion the fight against the proposal to pack the Supreme court. It was the press of America that stopped the plan to undermine our constitutional form of government by transferring to the President vast powers that should rest with congress. It was the independent and fearless press of America that resisted the attempt of the President to purge from congress those members of his party who refused to be rubber stamps.

"Only a free press stands between the American people and one-man rule such as today holds in subjugation millions of hapless, helpless people, their minds in prison, their bodies enslaved, their lives in chains, and their souls in darkness and despair."

SERVICE TODAY TO RECALL OLD CHURCH DISPUTE

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

A controversy that rocked the Christian church to its foundations 1,600 years ago will be recalled today in Chicago when the Most Rev. Mampre Calfayan, primate of the Armenian Apostolic church of North and South America, inducts Archdeacon Nubar Arabian as pastor and archimandrite of the Armenian church. The ceremony will be held in the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, 201 South Ashland avenue, at 2:30 p. m. [An archimandrite in the Armenian church is comparable with an abbot.]

Archdeacon Nubar Arabian.

The controversy was between two Christian theologians, Arius and Athanasius, and it split the Christian world just as Emperor Constantine was endeavoring to unite it. The rift was caused by Arius and his followers, who declared that Christ is not quite the same as God; that there was a time when Christ did not exist. Athanasius, a youthful deacon, prevailed over Arius in a council at Nicaea, Asia Minor, which had been called by the emperor. The Nicene creed in its primitive and complete Armenian form will be the central affirmation of today's service.

The letter "i" in a Greek word—homousion or homoiusion—in the creed was a storm center. If the "i" was left in the word it meant that Christ was not quite the same as God; left in it meant that Christ was "of the substance" of God.

BEAT 2 WORKERS OF CANDY PLANT IN 9 DAY STRIKE

The beating of two employés of the National Candy company, 329 West Superior street, where a strike has been in progress for nine days, was being investigated yesterday by the Chicago avenue police. The victims of the attack were Bernard Zamost, 3540 Fifth avenue, a shipping foreman, and Frank Johnson, 3514 16th place, an engineer. According to the police about 80 to 200 employés of the company are on strike seeking recognition of the Candy Workers' union, local 351, a unit of the Bakery Workers' union. Several days ago five engineers walked out in sympathy, it was said.

NEW MEXICO WPA CHIEF OUSTED IN DEMOCRATIC ROW

Political Meddling Charged by Hopkins.

Santa Fe, N. M., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Harry L. Hopkins, national WPA administrator, jumped into the fight for political control of New Mexico today by firing Fred G. Healy, state WPA administrator. Hopkins' action surprised state Democratic leaders, here for the opening of the state convention Monday.

Healy got his job a year ago when Lee Rowland, a political supporter of Gov. Clyde Tingley, was removed. Rowland's ouster and Healy's appointment supposedly were at the behest of Senator Dennis Chavez and Congressman John J. Dempsey, who are at odds with Gov. Tingley over control of the state Democratic organization.

Chavez Assumes Control.

When Healy was promoted to administrator from the job of assistant it was said that Hopkins named him because he was the choice of Chavez. Since then Chavez gradually has taken control away from the governor, so much so that John E. Miles, Democratic state chairman who is seeking the gubernatorial nomination, will go into the convention with 985 delegates, nearly a majority.

Tingley's supporters said that WPA workers were used to control party caucuses at which county convention delegates were chosen. Hopkins when he fired Healy said he did so because Healy had permitted local political interference with the WPA program, resulting in inefficiency.

In firing Healy and sending R. L. Nicholson here from Salt Lake City, Utah, to be acting administrator, Hopkins took no notice of a federal grand jury investigation of charges that graft was rampant in the WPA and that it was being used for political purposes.

Federal Judge Colin S. Neblett ordered the investigation and told the jury it was common rumor grafting had been going on for some time in the WPA and that nobody had done anything about it.

"Do not fail to indict any one because of his reputation or standing in the community," Judge Neblett said. He told the jurors that the government investigates a boy's theft of a letter from a mail box but does nothing about charges of maladministration of the WPA.

Healy was in Albuquerque today to attend a football game when he learned that Hopkins had announced his discharge in Los Angeles. He had nothing to say about the discharge. Neither had any of the Democratic leaders except Gov. Tingley. "See Dennis Chavez," was all Tingley would say.

Observers believe Hopkins' action was caused by the intraparty fight for control of the state rather than by the grand jury investigation. Tingley's first charge that WPA workers were being used for political purposes was made last spring in the Albuquerque city campaign. Investigators were sent to the state then, but no report of their findings has been allowed to leak out.

Tingley was mayor of Albuquerque and controled the city administration for sixteen years before he was elected governor. Last spring Chavez backed a slate of city commissioners opposed to Tingley's slate. The Tingley forces won narrowly and the fight spread to party caucuses, county conventions, and now to the state convention.

The 985 delegates pledged to Miles for governor also are pledged to the renomination of Congressman Dempsey, the state's only representative, who is seeking a third term. Chavez is serving the unexpired term of Bronson Cutting, which ends in 1941. Senator Carl Hatch, who is serving his first full term, will not have to run until 1943.

CHICAGO SUBWAY PUT UP TO ICKES BY HIS ENGINEERS

State St. Tube Approved; Changes Suggested.

The engineers declared firmly against the city's proposal to build subways in Jackson and Washington streets to carry west side surface cars through the loop. These, they said, should be abandoned.

Instead they offered two programs of construction to supplement the State street subways. They were:

1. Build a two track subway, similar to State street's, in Dearborn street from Adams street to Lake street, thence west in Lake street to a point west of Halsted street. There the tracks would ascend to the Lake street "L" structure.

2. Build a subway in Dearborn street from Congress street on the south to Lake street, then west to Canal street, then northwest in Milwaukee avenue to a connection with the Logan Square-Humboldt elevated lines near Paulina street.

Costs Are Discussed.

It was estimated by the engineers that, if the Washington and Jackson subway plans are abandoned, the estimated $32,000,000 the city had expected to spend [more than $17,000,000 of it Chicago's own money] would be enough for the State street and the No. 1 Dearborn street projects. If the State street and the No. 2 Dearborn street construction is tried, the board estimated the total cost at $37,910,000.

The engineers explained their opposition to surface car tubes. "The sums set up," they said, "can, in our opinion, be used more effectively in the initial step of developing a completely consolidated transportation system. . . . It is our opinion that a comprehensive system of transfer points from surface cars and buses to rapid transit lines will shift long haul passengers to rapid transit trains and greatly lessen the necessary surface car operation in the loop. We do not believe surface lines subways as planned can be integrated effectively in a rapid transit system now or in the near future."

Escalators Are Suggested.

The engineering board recommended that, in the loop subway stations, there be a cross mezzanine passage just below the level of public utility ducts and conduits. This mezzanine would be connected with the surface sidewalks by stairways. The subways, however, would be deeper—in the clay stratum under the loop—and the descent from mezzanine to track level would be by means of escalators.

Discussing their approval of the driving of tubes underground, the board stated that this would be less costly, that the work could be carried on regardless of weather, and that the method would hasten construction and keep it within the required time limits. The city's plan called for tunnel boring in Jackson and Washington streets and an open cut in State street.

The report recommended that underground connections be established at the mezzanine level between the State street and Dearborn street subway stations, to facilitate interchange of north and south trafic with that for the west side.

Comment on Highway.

In regard to the plan for extending the proposed Dearborn street tube south to Congress street, the board said this recommendation was made because "we believe there is a need for a major highway to the west side from the lake front. The basic recommendation of the Burnham plan for Chicago's development designated Congress street as such an improvement."

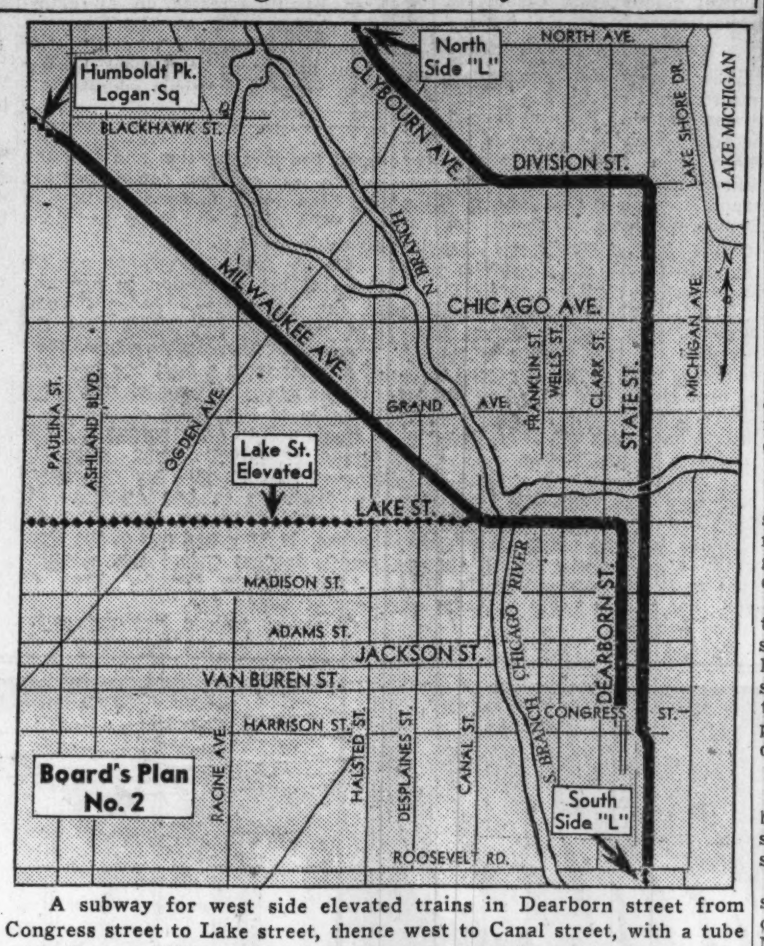
The engineers said they had included the costs of escalators and other construction in their estimates. They pointed out, however, that the city had not included costs of shoring up buildings that might be endangered by the driving of the tubes, nor of moving utility ducts. The city has contended that the property owners should protect their buildings and that utility corporations pay for the necessary removals. The board suggested that the city show ability to care for costs if court decisions on these points were adverse.

Members of the reporting board are Col. Henry M. Waite, former chief city engineer of Cincinnati, chairman; Robert Ridgway and H. M. Brinckerhoff of New York, and Joshua D'Esposito of Chicago. All are familiar with subway construction.

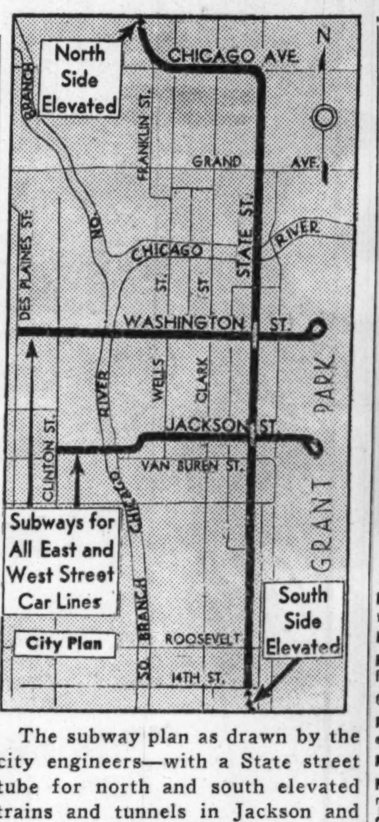
Ald. James R. Quinn [50th], chairman of the council committee on local transportation, said he knew little about the report, but that he was sorry the surface lines subways had been eliminated.

U. S. Experts Favor Changes in Subway Plans

If the city wishes to keep the cost of the subway at $32,000,000 the board suggests that this plan be followed—with the State street subway extending to Clybourn avenue and Halsted street and with a subway for west side elevated trains extending from Dearborn and Adams streets to Lake and Halsted streets.



A subway for west side elevated trains in Dearborn street from Congress street to Lake street, thence west to Canal street, with a tube extending up Milwaukee avenue, was suggested in another plan. The State street subway for north and south elevated trains would be extended north to Division street and west and northwest to Clybourn avenue and Halsted street. This plan is estimated to cost $37,910,000.



The subway plan as drawn by the city engineers—with a State street tube for north and south elevated trains and tunnels in Jackson and Washington streets for west side surface cars. The PWA engineers rejected the proposed surface car subways. The city engineers estimated the system they proposed to cost $32,000,000.

A STREET FIGHT FOR OLD NAME UP TO CITY FATHERS

2 Groups Press Claims to Crawford Ave.

Within a few days a city council committee will vote upon two claims to the name "Crawford avenue." One claim is that of 1,567 owners of abutting property who want that name restored to what is now Pulaski road. The opposing claim is made by the forty property owners on a block long street, Haussen court.

Crawford avenue, so named since 1863, lost its name by council action in 1933. The change was brought about by Polish-Americans to honor Gen. Casimir Pulaski, American revolutionary war hero. A leader of the movement, Miss A. Emily Napieralski, said at that time:

"My purpose is to bring about a closer brotherhood of man."

Aldermen Shake Fists.

However, five years later—last Thursday—fists were shaken by opposing aldermen in the council committee on streets and alleys. During these years the Crawford Avenue association has spent $23,000 in its efforts to restore the old name to the eighteen mile thoroughfare.

After losing a court battle to prevent the change, the association supported a legislative measure to enable them to restore the old name. In July, 1937, a bill was passed at Springfield making it possible to change a street name by means of petitions signed by 60 per cent of the abutting property owners. The city council with such a petition on record would have to order the change.

The association engaged an independent survey company to circulate the petitions. This task occupied nearly a year and cost $7,200. The first petition was filed with the city July 11, but the required number were not submitted until Sept. 7.

Haussen Court Claim Filed.

Between these two dates, on Aug. 17, the Haussen court property owners filed their petitions. Haussen court, 3900 west, runs between Milwaukee avenue and Wellington street. It is within Ald. Walter J. Orlikoski's ward, the 35th.

The new law states that "no name shall be assigned to a street if it is already in use to designate some other street."

Ald. Thomas J. Terrell [29th] blocked advancement of the Haussen court group's petition in a heated session of the committee. At his insistence, Ald. Terence F. Moran [16th], the chairman, agreed that the committee will consider both claims at a meeting this week.

"The Haussen court petitions are a cheap trick to thwart the wishes of business men who have suffered economic losses ever since the name Crawford avenue was taken away from them," Ald. Terrell said.

O. F. Duensing, director of the Crawford Avenue association, said that business men and other property owners will continue efforts to restore the name. The association has subscribed $8,000 for possible use for a memorial to Gen. Pulaski and will gladly coöperate in "any reasonable" movement to memorialize the war hero, he said.

Crawford avenue was named for Peter Crawford, pioneer Chicagoan, who settled on a farm at what is now Ogden avenue in 1841.

Evanston Rejects Proposal for New High School Hall

Evanston voters yesterday rejected a plan to build a new $525,000 auditorium in the Evanston Township High school. Only 1,170 of the 28,000 registered voters cast ballots. The school board planned to ask the Public Works administration to pay part of the cost. A proposal to build an addition to the Leydon Township Community High school, to cost $108,000, was defeated, 399 to 362, in a township referendum yesterday.

TWO SWEPT INTO DAM SPILLWAY IN BOAT; ONE SAVED

De Pere, Wis., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—A young man drowned and his sister escaped death here today when their motor boat was swept through a spillway and was pounded to pieces in a torrent below the Fox river dam.

The two, Harold McCabe, 30 years old, and his sister, Irene, 32, were cruising on the flooded river in their new boat, which was powered by an outboard motor.

Boat Carried Through Spillway.

As they neared the dam the engine stopped. They had no oars. The current, moving swiftly because six floodgates were open, carried them to the dam.

Just before the small craft shot through the spillway, McCabe strapped their one life preserver about his sister's waist. The two emerged safely through the spillway but were thrown from the boat when it was pounded to pieces on rocks below the dam.

Sister Swims to Bridge.

Miss McCabe swam to a railroad bridge abutment thirty yards downstream, where rescuers pulled her to safety.

She said she had seen her brother swimming ahead of her, but no trace could be found of him or his body. Miss McCabe incurred a few scratches and bruises.

FACES DIVORCE, ANNULMENT AND BIGAMY ACTIONS

Both of John Stritesky's wives want to get rid of him. Mrs. Rose Stritesky, the first wife, filed suit for divorce in Superior court yesterday. Mrs. Anne Stritesky, the second, asked an annulment of her marriage in Circuit court.

Stritesky, who lives at 1924 50th court, Cicero, was arrested Aug. 26 on a bigamy warant obtained by Rose. Stritesky said he left her in 1930 after nineteen years of married life. He wed Anne in 1937 thinking that seven years' absence from his first wife made their separation legal, Stritesky declared. He will be arraigned Thursday on the bigamy warant in Felony court.

Large New York Advertising Agency seeks affiliation with growing Chicago Agency

AN UNUSUAL opportunity is offered for a small but successfully operating Chicago advertising agency to affiliate with one of New York's larger agencies. We have been in business more than 20 years—which is significant in a business noted for rapid demises. But more significant is the fact that we have tripled in size during the last six years and that 1938 will be far and away the biggest year in our history.

We have solid reasons, based on actual correspondence and personal contacts with important advertisers, for believing that our Middle-West business could be substantially increased through affiliation with the right Chicago agency. We are prepared to discuss a basis for affiliation that holds every promise of developing in Chicago an organization which, in time, should challenge in size our New York organization.

Ours is a distinctive type of agency service and our Chicago affiliate will be aided, with our executive manpower and in every other way, both to sell and deliver this service.

One of our principals will be in Chicago this week to conduct preliminary conversations. A letter briefing your organization's history and present-day activities will aid him to save your time and ours. Your letter will be considered confidential and treated accordingly.

HUNT IS PUSHED FOR 2 NAMED IN PRIGNANO KILLING

2 Prisoners Tell Story of 1935 Murder.

In the underworlds of Chicago and St. Louis, Mo., police squads yesterday sought the slayer of State Representative Albert J. Prignano. Two men who have confessed a part in the murder and have named the trigger man as Michael Genovese, known as a gambler, dice sharper, and general hoodlum handyman, were aiding the police in the search.

Prignano was shot six times in front of his home at 722 Bunker [now Grenshaw] street the night of Dec. 29, 1935, in what appeared to be a robbery. The three men who assaulted, robbed, and killed him fled on foot when their automobile stalled.

Seek Link to Politics.

In custody are Michael Novak, alias Novack, a burglar serving a term in Joliet penitentiary, and Henry Szelangowski, an ex-convict from Missouri. They told of taking part in the robbery of Prignano, but declared his death was arranged by Genovese and another man.

Novak and Szelangowski told police that the unusual arrangements for the robbery, coupled with the unexpected murder, convinced them that they had been used as tools in a planned assassination. Because of this police believe that Prignano's murder may be connected with politics of the so-called bloody 20th ward, of which he was Democratic committeeman.

They said the robbery was plotted by Genovese in a north side saloon he operated in December of 1935. The fourth man in the scheme, they said, was Jim de Angelo, described as head of the Italian American Citizens club at 1914 North avenue.

Surprised at Shooting, They Say.

"These two divided up the proceeds of the robbery and gave us each $150 from Prignano's wallet and $200 each from the sale of his ring," said Novak. "But the shooting was not in our books. We were surprised when Genovese began shooting while Prignano pleaded for mercy.

"Then too it looked funny when De Angelo told us he would provide a hot [stolen] car, gloves, and clean guns. That's the sort of thing for a murder, not a robbery. We didn't like it when they always talked together in Italian."

Novak and Szelangowski knew Genovese in St. Louis. Genovese had often been arrested there, but never convicted. At one time he ran the dice game in the casino of a popular night club.

For the last four or five years he had been in Chicago. A month before the Prignano killing he and De Angelo were arrested in the latter's club for questioning in the slaying of Joseph Scaffido and Angelo Kleronomos, engaged in the illicit alcohol racket. Police could not link them with the killings.

SCIENCE SPEAKS OF FURNACES, AND IT'S NOT HOT AIR!

Take These Tips Before Turning On Heat.

When autumn sends its chill through the house you descend to the basement for the ceremony of lighting the first fire of the season.

You fill the spacious firebox with fuel and touch it off. As the fire begins to roar you look with pride at the big furnace that stands between you and the fury of winter.

You are beginning to regard it with genuine affection, when suddenly from upstairs come howls of rage. You hear running feet. The door to the basement pops open.

"Shut that thing off," shouts the little woman. "Then come up here and see what you've done."

Grilles Emit Clouds of Dust.

Disturbing things are happening upstairs. From each of the warm air grilles are rising little clouds of soot, ashes, and dirt. A smoky haze hangs in the air. The fumes are getting thicker every minute, and it's all your fault.

It really is. There are several important things that should be done before the season's first fire is lighted. But you didn't do them. You didn't think they mattered—if you thought at all.

But these preliminaries to furnace firing are important enough to engage the attention of some of the world's finest heating engineers. The work they have done and the studies they have conducted at the University of Illinois during the last twenty years is credited with vastly increasing the efficiency of home heating plants.

Early surveys and experiments by Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard, president of the university, caused the furnace industry to change its code of installation radically. Changes were made also in the furnaces themselves.

Some Hot Air Furnace Tips.

Studies at the university are concerned largely with warm air furnaces, which greatly outnumber the two other principal types. In Illinois alone there are 933,000 homes heated by warm air, 6,000 that use the hot water system, and 31,000 that are heated by steam.

Cleaning of the warm air ducts and grilles is one of the most important steps. If these passages are clean, no dirt, ashes, nor smoke can be carried through the house. Moreover, air passes more freely through clean pipes.

All joints should be examined to make sure they are air tight. One layer of asbestos paper will seal them effectively. If the joints inside the furnace housing are not tight, smoke and ashes from the fire box will be drawn in. Loose joints outside the furnace will permit basement fumes and dust to be drawn in and carried throughout the house.

Don't Overlook the Grate.

Grates of all types of furnaces should be examined for worn or broken parts. By replacing them in time fuel will be saved and interruption of heat during cold weather will be avoided.

The ash pit should be cleaned thoroughly and kept clean throughout the winter. This increases the heat and helps save fuel.

The water pan in warm air furnaces should be inspected and it should be kept filled throughout the winter. Humidity [moisture in the air] is important both to comfort and to protect furniture and finishings from drying during the winter.

Humid air is another thing that saves your fuel. When the air is moist it doesn't have to be so warm to provide comfort. Moist air at 70 degrees gives the same comfort that dry air does at 75.

Always remember that the cold air grilles that draw air into the furnaces for heating are just as important as the warm grilles that return it from the furnaces. If cold air grilles are covered by rugs, the efficiency of the furnace and the circulation of air in the room are interfered with seriously.

Air Intake Also Important.

Circulatioin of air is necessary to heating and the minimum area of cold air intake must be at least equal to the warm air output.

Another point to remember is that the pipes or ducts that carry the heat should be bare. University of Illinois engineers have discovered that unless eight thicknesses of insulation are used, the covering will absorb heat that should go into the house.

And finally the fire hazard should be kept in mind. If the furnace top is less than twelve inches from overhead joists, a sheet of metal should protect them from the heat. Under no circumstances should the furnace top be closer than six inches to combustible material.

For houses heated by hot water or steam, radiator coverings are important. It has been found at the University of Illinois that sheathing that covers only the wall side and the top of the radiator are best. The front, the ends and the bottom should be left open.

Some Paints Cut Heat Output.

Paint is important, too. Metallic paint, strangely enough, cuts down the output of heat. Bronze, gold, silver and aluminum coatings should be avoided. Regular oil paint is best.

If these precautions are taken before the first fire is lighted, your winter heat will be cleaner and more effective and you will have it with less trouble. All these suggestions have been tested in the University of Illinois warm air research residence, where heating methods are tested under actual conditions. The research residence was built in 1924 and the findings made there have turned the attention of the entire heating industry to the university.

One of the most important of the studies conducted there is that of scientific furnace firing to conserve fuel. This will be explained in detail in another article to be published soon.

Ready for New Year

Mrs. Miriam Begun, 85 years old, of the Orthodox Jewish Home for the Aged, blesses candles in preparation for Rosh Hashanah, starting tonight.

The Jewish New Year 5699 starts at sundown tonight, opening a period of solemn, holy days for Jewry everywhere. Rosh Hashanah, as the New Year is called, is the most significant period of the entire year for Jews.

The holiday is comparable to the Christian Lent or Holy week in its religious depth. Temples will be filled, and many Jewish business places will be closed during the observances. All Jewish homes will ceremoniously observe the traditional rituals.

Rosh Hashanah perpetuates the tradition that the world was created 3,761 years before the beginning of the Christian era.

At 8 o'clock tonight Rabbi Morton M. Berman of Temple Isaiah Israel, 51st street and Greenwood avenue, will talk on events of the Jewish year now ending—5698. At 10 a. m. tomorrow he will talk on "One More Year of Civilization."

QUESTION FATHER IN MYSTERY ROPE INJURIES TO BOY

County highway police of the Homewood station yesterday were holding for further questioning Ivan Tomes, father of Harold Tomes, 16 years old. The youth was found near death from strangulation Friday in their home on Turnpike road, near Cicero avenue in Crestwood.

The youth's neck bore rope marks and at the Oak Forest infirmary it was said that he appeared to be suffering from the effects of strangulation. He told physicians he had taken some aspirin and had lost consciousness.

The father told police he doubted that the youth had tried to commit suicide and thought the rope marks might have been caused when Harold's sister, Bernice, 6 years old, lassoed him during a game. Police were investigating this explanation of the father, who is a laborer at the Chicago postoffice.

GRANT $392,467 WPA FUNDS FOR SMOKE SURVEY

Will Give Work to 500 for a Year.

A scientific survey of smoke conditions and abatement in Chicago has been authorized by the Works Progress administration in Washington.

Word to that effect was received last night by Frank A. Chambers, city smoke inspector, from Senator James Hamilton Lewis. The senator telegraphed Chambers that the WPA had approved a grant of $392,467.

Two Schools to Coöperate.

Chambers said that the survey this sum will make possible will employ 500 professional and clerical men and women for one year.

The investigation, which will touch every home, apartment building, store, and factory in Chicago, will be made in coöperation with the Armour Institute of Technology and the Lewis institute. Chambers expected that work would be started within two weeks.

Plan 8 Point Program.

The survey will be based on an eight point program. These cover the density and quantity of visible smoke; the collection of samples of smoke solids, such as soot, ash, and dust, in the atmosphere; the determination of noxious gases in the air; the development of records of fuel and refuse burning installations; the compilation of legislation pertaining to air pollution; the indexing and abstracting of scientific literature on air pollution; an analysis of the effect of smoke on violet rays and sunlight, and the preparation of exhibits showing the proper use of fuels and the prevention of smoke.

The Armour and Lewis institutes will provide office space for the workers. Their technical stafs will help.

NASH WILL CLOSE ITS AUTO PLANTS; C. I. O. IS BLAMED

Pickets Attempt to Block Moving of Machinery.

Racine, Wis., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Uncertainty of production due to the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers attitude caused the Nash Kelvinator corporation to announce today that all of its automobile plants in Wisconsin would be closed Monday. The company has been operating automobile plants in Racine and Kenosha and a body plant in Milwaukee.

Eighteen hundred employés will be thrown out of work in Milwaukee and 1,200 in Kenosha. Eight hundred more had been employed until Aug. 20 in the Racine plant preparing the 1939 Lafayette car for display. On that date the company announced suspension of operations here and its intention to produce all automobiles in Kenosha. C. I. O. union pickets have prevented the removal of machinery from the Racine plant to Kenosha.

Labor Troubles for Year.

C. I. O. labor trouble has beset Nash plants in the three cities since last November when negotiations for contracts were started. The decision to close the Racine plant and consolidate all automobile production in Kenosha, it is said, was due to inability to operate the Racine plant profitably. By producing all Nash and Lafayette cars in Kenosha the company expected to save $300,000 annually and, when business conditions improved sufficiently, to operate both plants.

The company's decision to close all Wisconsin plants was announced today by R. A. De Vlieg, general works manager of the Nash Motors division. New car production has been delayed too long, De Vlieg said, and until the company was certain when it could start regular production it could not continue present operations in Kenosha and Milwaukee.

Dispute Over Moving Machinery.

De Vlieg met with C. I. O. officials yesterday in a final attempt to settle a dispute over removal of machinery from the Racine plant to Kenosha where it is needed for the manufacture of Lafayette cars. The committee, he said, refused to recommend to the workers any proposal that would enable the company to go ahead with production, despite previous knowledge that such a refusal would force a complete shutdown.

When the company first announced its intention to close the Racine plant and remove tools and machinery to Kenosha, C. I. O. pickets were placed around the property with the announced intention of preventing removal of any machinery or parts. A company truck sent to the plant to get a load of fenders for 1939 models was denied admittance.

Unions in Controversy.

"The company will build Lafayette cars in Racine or it won't build them any place," boasted Charles Truckey, head of the union. When announcement of the plan to move all production to Kenosha was made the company said as many Racine workers as could be used would be employed. Leaders of the C. I. O. in Kenosha said the men would not be permitted to work in the plant because plenty of Kenosha plant employés were idle.

The Nash Motor company was consolidated with the Kelvinator corporation Jan. 5, 1937. The Nash division enjoyed the best year in 1937 since 1929 and sold 70,500 cars. Plants in Racine and Kenosha and the body plant in Milwaukee operated at capacity.

WORLD'S RAREST STAMP OFFERED AT PRIVATE SALE

Kenmore, N. Y., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Ernest C. Jarvis, widely known stamp dealer, said today he had been authorized to offer for sale the world's rarest stamp. It is the rare British Guiana from the collection of the late Arthur Hind of Utica, N. Y. Mrs. Hind placed a price of $37,500 on the stamp. "The stamp is the only one in existence," Jarvis said. Hind obtained the curio at a Paris auction in 1922. His winning bid was £7,350 [about $34,000], topping that of the late King George V. by £50. The stamp was found by a British Guiana schoolboy in 1872, who sold it to a friend for 6 shillings.

MRS. ROBERT B. UPHAM JR.

In a charming garden ceremony at 4:30 o'clock yesterday at the Lake Forest home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Forgan, Miss Margaret Louise [Babbie] Forgan was married to Robert B. Upham Jr., son of Mr and Mrs. Robert B. Upham of Chicago. The wedding took place on the 82d anniversary of the wedding of the bride's great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Meeker, which was Chicago's first church wedding.

Yesterday's bride wore her mother's wedding gown, which was worn also by her sister, Mrs. George B. Farnam [Nancy Forgan], last June, and carried a bouquet of stephanotis. Mrs. Warnam, as matron of honor, and the eight bridesmaids wore hoop skirted frocks of aquamarine taffeta and carried bouquets of pink roses. The Rev. Herbert E. Prince of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest read the service.

After the reception, Mr. Upham and his bride left for a three weeks' wedding trip. They will be at home in Lake Forest after Oct. 15.

$1,000,000 SUIT OVER QUINTS SET FOR THIS WEEK

Dr. Dafoe Will Attend Trial in Chicago.

Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, the little Canadian physician who attended the birth of the Dionne quintuplets, will arrive here tomorrow as a defendant in a $1,000,000 lawsuit which is scheduled for trial before Federal Judge Barnes Tuesday or Wednesday.

Dr. Dafoe and twelve other persons and corporations were sued by Ivan I. Spear, Chicago promoter, on the charge that all conspired to interfere with a contract between Spear and Oliva Dionne, father of the quints.

Plan to Exhibit Quints.

The contract provided for the exhibition and exploitation of the five famous babies. It was to have extended from May 31, 1934, two days after their birth, until Dec. 31, 1934. The concern having charge of the exhibition was called the Century of Progress Tour bureau, but it had no official connection with the Chicago world's fair management. Presumably the quints were to have been exhibited at the fair.

Oliva Dionne, the father, signed the contract with Spear at Orillia, Ont., on May 30, 1934, after the promoter had flown there from Chicago.

Spear insists that he would have had exclusive rights over the babies, including picture rights. He paid Dionne $100 at the time the contract was signed and arranged for expenses plus a drawing account for Dionne against his share of proceeds from the exhibition.

70 Per Cent to Promoter.

Under the contract the tour bureau would have received 70 per cent of the proceeds; Dionne, 23 per cent, while the remaining 7 per cent was designated for Father Daniel Routhier, then Dionne's parish priest as well as his personal manager.

Spear charges that the defendants conspired to induce Dionne to break the contract. On July 26, 1934, an Ontario court appointed four guardians for the quints: Dr. Dafoe, the late W. H. Alderson of Ontario, George Kenneth Morrison of Ontario, and Oliver Dionne, their grandfather.

The defendants contend that this appointment nullified the contract. In addition, the defense insists, the contract was invalid because it was not signed by Mrs. Dionne, mother of the quints.

FLAGS A STREAM TRAIN; PREVENTS CROSSING CRASH

Traveling at a mile a minute clip, passengers on the Rock Island railroad's Rocket wondered yesterday afternoon why the streamlined train slackened speed suddenly and stopped about three miles north of Peoria. It was a country road crossing.

Last night Carl Nelson, Chicago station master of the railroad, disclosed the reason. R. F. Clark of Peoria saw a truck stalled in sand on the crossing. Realizing the streamliner was due any minute, Clark ran down the right of way toward Peoria, and flagged down the speeding train which stopped 200 feet from the crossing.

DIES OF HEART ATTACK.

4 JURORS PICKED FOR CRABB TRIAL IN PERJURY CASE

Pekin, Ill., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The first four jurors were sworn in today for the trial of James W. Crabb, 22 years old, on a charge of perjury in connection with the fatal shooting of his bride.

They are Joseph Lusher of Dillon, unemployed; Christ Staker of Morton, gas station operator; Lester Smith of Washington, gas station owner, and S. R. Springer of Hopedale, a farmer.

When court adjourned at noon until Monday Judge Henry J. Ingram ordered the four locked up. He announced he will keep the jury locked up during the trial.

CLERK DIES IN SHOE STORE.

August Felten, 48 years old, 3001 Belmont avenue, collapsed and died yesterday in the shoe store at 4806 Milwaukee avenue, where he was a clerk.

Arise, Ye Sufferers of Hay Fever, and Dry Your Eyes!

The annual hayfever season is over for 98 per cent of its sufferers, medical experts said yesterday. There is still some pollen in the air, however—yesterday's count in Chicago was only nine granules per cubic yard—and some persons highly sensitive to ragweed may sniffle and sneeze for several more days.

GOPHERS SEIZE HUSKIE PASSES TO WIN, 15 TO 0

Guard Runs 77 Yds. for Touchdown.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 24.—Minnesota's mighty men, still powerful, although slower afoot, and possessing an alert defense that nullified Washington's vaunted air attack, defeated the Huskies, 15 to 0, today in the intersectional inaugural of the season.

Fifty thousand watched the battle, frequently interrupted by rest periods for the players sweltering in summer heat. Throughout the teams played slowly, as might be expected, and, also probably because it was the first game of the year, each had difficulty holding the ball.

The collapse of Washington's air game before the brilliant play of Minnesota's secondary and linemen, and frequent fumbles, in which Washington led the Gophers, 6 to 3, contributed to Minnesota's easy conquest.

Interceptions Lead to Scores.

Minnesota ran Washington an even race in fumbling in the first half. Each committed three errors. But while the ball passed from hand to hand as if Houdini were the runner, the inaccurate aim of Washington's passers continually invited disaster. Perhaps, however, Minnesota deserves more credit for anticipating these passes. In any event, the Gophers intercepted five of the 16 Jimmy Johnston and Dean McAdams threw.

The first interception led to a field goal by George Faust, Minnesota quarter back, which sent the Gophers from the field at the intermission with a 3 to 0 lead. Another by Bob Johnson, defensive guard, gave Minnesota its first touchdown. Johnson rumbled down the field 77 yards after intercepting Johnston's pass. That touchdown late in the third period definitly determined the Huskies' fate.

In the last quarter after McAdams' fourth down punt had been partly blocked and had gone out of bounds on the Huskies' 30 yard line, the Gophers, led by Larry Buhler, jammed through to their final score. Fittingly, it was Buhler who plunged the final yard even as he had ripped the Husky line to keep the assault under way a minute earlier.

Moore Sets Pace.

Buhler and Wilbur Moore, varsity right half, were the howitzers in the infrequent flashes of Minnesota power. Buhler gained 78 yards in 14 times he carried the ball and Moore, iron man of the back field, advanced 117 yards in 17 attempts. Moore's gains generally were made on a reverse play inside the weak side tackle, the play Minnesota has used as its best weapon in recent years.

Harold Van Every, triple threat in the Minnesota backfield, starred only as a kicker, but his long punts, two of which rolled dead inside Washington's 5 yard line in the second half, held the Huskies in control.

Washington held the whip in the first period, however. In this fifteen minutes the Huskies threatened four times. Inept handling of the ball assisted the Gophers in defending their goal line. The third of these opportunities was lost when Lloyd Phelps, junior half back who nad started with the shock troops, lost the ball to Moore on Minnesota's 19 yard line. Moore yanked the ball out of Phelps' grasp at the sidelines, and touching it last before it went out of bounds, was given possession.

Minnesota Star Wins Her 10th 1938 Tourney

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Patricia Jane Berg, the Little Miss Business of golf, yesterday won the forty-second championship of the United States Golf association by defeating Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C., 6 and 5, in the thirty-six hole final match at the Westmoreland Country club.

An enthusiastic gallery of 3,000 saw the Minneapolis red head square accounts with the North Carolina housewife, who defeated Patty in last year's final at Memphis by a 7 and 6 count. It was the first time in the forty-two year history of the U. S. G. A. that the champion and runner-up of a preceding year had battled each other in a championship match.

Finalist a Third Time.

Miss Berg, who will celebrate her 21st birthday in February and who matriculates at the University of Minnesota next month, climaxed by yesterday's victory one of the briefest and most spectacular national careers in golf. Four years ago Patty was an unknown to big league competition when the national came to her home town. She made her mark by going to the final against the great Glenna Collett Vare, losing the final by only 3 and 2. Last year she attained a finalist's rôle again, only to encounter Mrs. Page.

At the start of the 1938 tournament season Patty, daughter of a Minneapolis grain broker, prepared for this national by opening a campaign which saw her win nine out of twelve tournaments before the big show opened at Westmoreland last Monday.

Throughout the week Patty played the crowd pleasing golf of the tournament, golf overshadowed only by Mrs. Page's magnificent semi-final performance of matching men's par for eleven holes. Yesterday Patty was two under par for the thirty-one holes she required for her victory. For the last seventy-three holes she played, the sturdy Minnesotan whacked eleven strokes off of par.

Even at First Turn.

Last year Patty was three down at the ninth and as many in arrears at the eighteenth. The 1937 twenty-seventh found Mrs. Page seven up. Yesterday the serious little red head, doing a double quick up the Westmoreland fairways in rain trousers, yellow sweater, and brown tam, had to win the ninth to stay even at the turn. She adjusted that in the incoming nine, by taking the tenth, twelfth, and fourteenth, while losing the thirteenth to Mrs. Page's birdie. Patty matched women's par of 79 for the morning round, while Mrs. Page took an 82.

The out nine in the afternoon saw Patty go into a five up lead with a medal score of 37 to her opponent's 41. A birdie at the twenty-eighth and a par on the twenty-ninth left Miss Berg 7 up going to the thirtieth green, whereat Mrs. Page defeated her last year. She was denied the pleasure of reversing her 7 and 6 defeat at Memphis, however, when Mrs. Page won her only hole of the afternoon round to prolong the match to the thirty-first. There Patty, five yards short with her tee shot, chipped up to four feet and holed out for the half she needed to end it all.

Patty Wins on Greens.

The story of the final match probably rests in the putting total for the day. Miss Berg took fifty-one shots on the thirty-one greens, while Mrs. Page, who outplayed Patty from tee to green in the morning round, required sixty-one. Patty took thirty-one putts in the first eighteen to Estelle's thirty-seven.

Yesterday's triumph topped off a week of some of the most remarkable scoring ever seen in a national golf event. Patty won her first match, 10 and 8, by taking ten straight holes from Mrs. Myron Davy of Washington, D. C. She had to come from behind to defeat Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., in the second round Wednesday morning, and that afternoon was extended to her greatest fight by young Eva Shorb of Canton, O. Four down to the Ohioan at the turn, Patty fought back for a 1 up decision. Three down to Dorothy Traung of San Francisco, co-medalist with Mrs. Page, at the end of six quarter-final holes, she won the next three and went on for a 5 to 3 victory. She won a hard fought semi-final from Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., by shooting a 77, two under par. Yeseterday's cards:

First indication of Mrs. Page's putting difficulty came on the first green, where she blew a second putt of four feet to lose the hole. A grand third shot at the third gave her a yard putt for a birdie and she got it down to square the match. She missed a five-foot try at the fourth

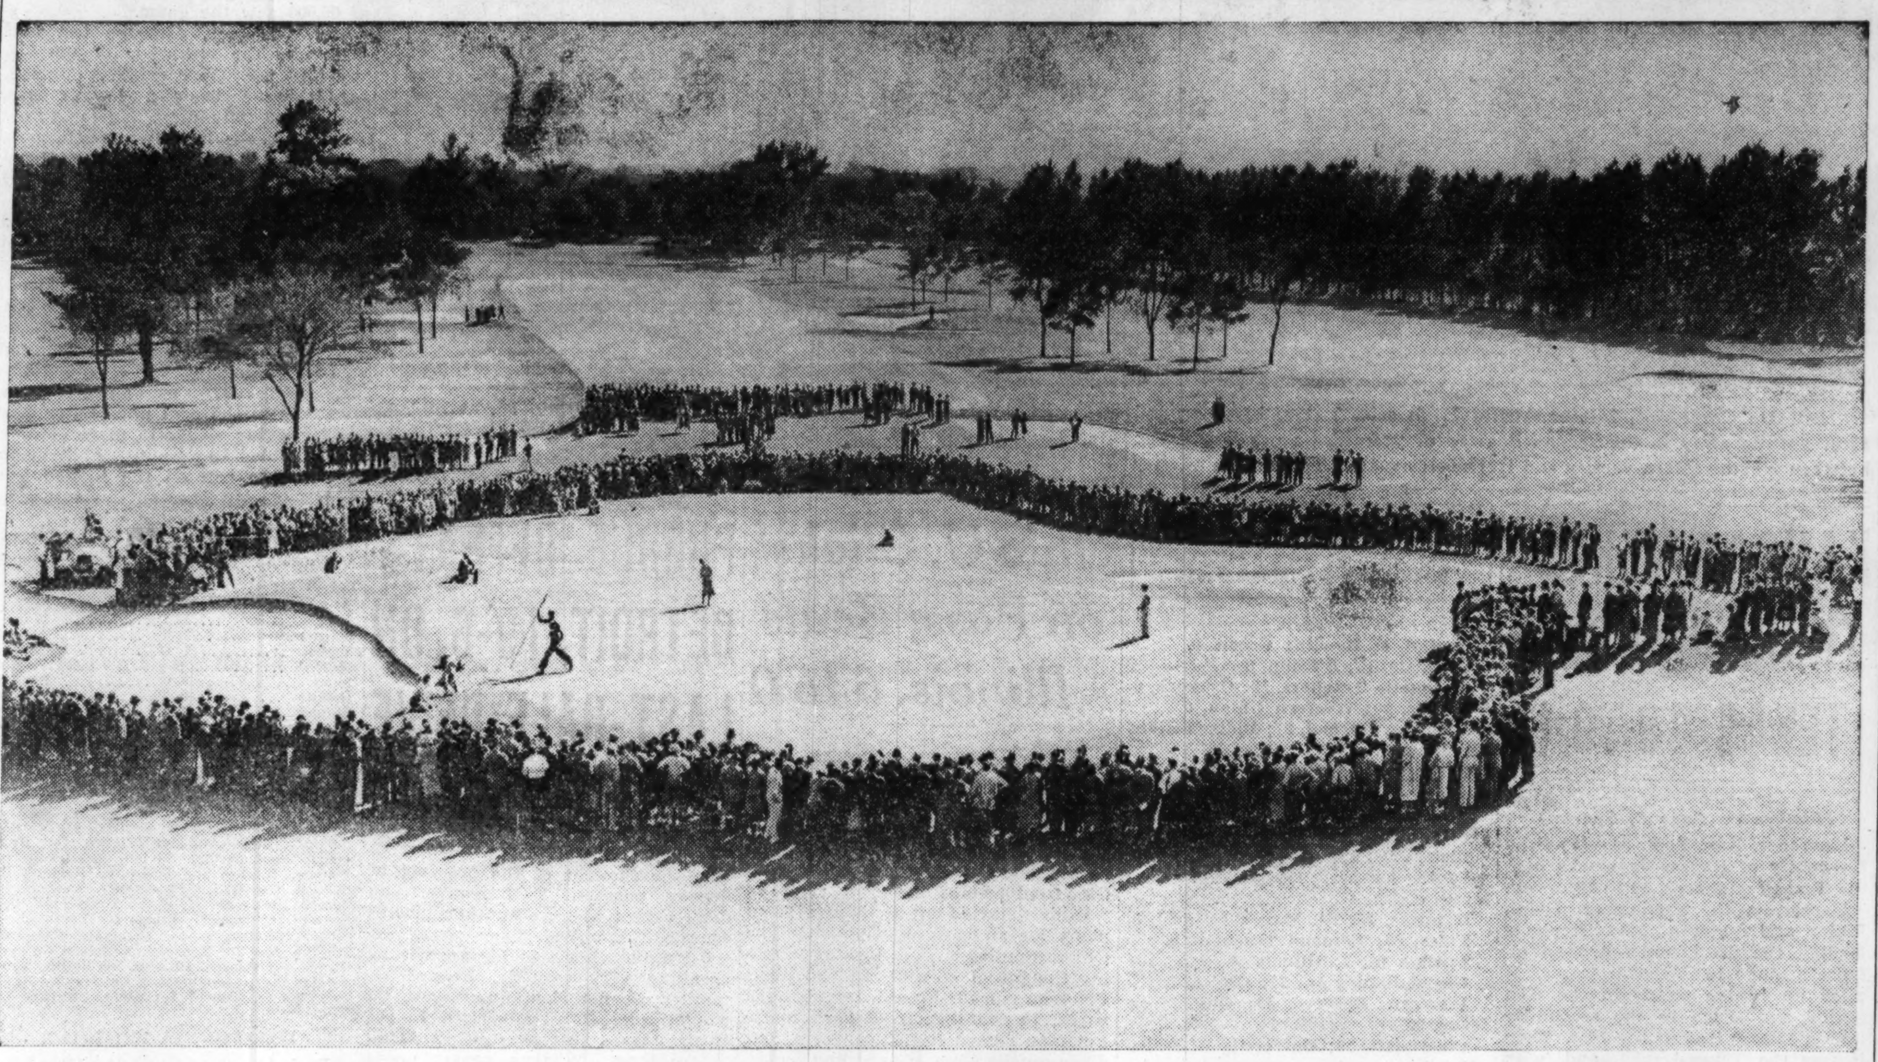
PATTY GETS REVENGE IN NATIONAL WOMEN'S GOLF



Scene on the ninth green at Westmoreland Country club in the afternoon round for the national women's golf title between Patty Berg of Minneapolis and Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C. Miss Berg won the crown, 6 and 5, gaining revenge for the 8 and 7 defeat handed her by Mrs. Page in the 1937 national final.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Donald Budge, making probably his farewell appearance in Forest Hills stadium, scored an easy victory over his old pal Gene Mako in the final of the national tennis tournament today. The scores were 6-3, 6-8, 6-2, 6-1.

The triumph, which was never in doubt, completed Budge's sweep of the world's major tournaments this season—the Australian, French, British, and American. The record has not been approached before.

Another California star, Alice Marble, joined Budge as a two time champion at Forest Hills as she overwhelmed Nancye Wynne of Australia, 6-0, 6-3, in an unexciting women's final. Miss Marble, winner also in 1936, was too much for the tall visitor, who was so nervous she could not control the simplest strokes.

It's an Anti-Climax.

The men's final was something of an anti-climax for the crowd of 14,000. Mako realized he didn't have a chance of beating the player who has been his doubles partner since their school days, and so did the crowd after the first few games. Mako just did the best he could, and that was remarkably good at times.

The only thrill came when Mako captured the second set, 8-6. He played brilliant tennis to do it. Budge was so good, however, that he was able to make 18 more errors than his steady opponent and still win. He scored 58 outright winners, 10 of them on service aces.

Indulge in Clowning.

Once it became apparent that today's final was no contest, the two friends indulged in refined clowning. Once Budge let Mako take the first 3 points against his service, then scored five straight placements as Mako called upon the crowd to witness his embarrassment.

After their match they joined forces again to defeat J. Gilbert Hall and Harry Hopman in a doubles exhibition, 6-2, 6-3.

PURDUE DEFEATS DETROIT, 19-6, ON LAST HALF DRIVE

BY HOWARD BARRY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 24.—Jack Brown and Mike Byelene turned a sluggish football game into a good show this afternoon as Purdue beat Detroit, 19 to 6, before an opening day crowd of 21,000 in Ross-Ade stadium.

After a dull, scoreless first half, Brown's fumble midway in the third quarter gave the alert Titans a chance to drive seventeen yards to the goal. Almost at once Brown redeemed himself by getting away on a 58 yard run for a touchdown.

With the score tied, 6 to 6, Byelene then became the chief showman. He had gone into the game billed as the eventual successor of Cecil Isbell as a pass tosser and he lived up to advance notices by throwing the ball to Jack Krause for 29 yards and a touchdown shortly before the end of the third quarter. It was as cool and neat a job of passing as any one could ask.

He Can Run, Too.

After Jim Nesbitt's attempt for the extra point had been blocked, Allen Shackleton picked up the ball and ran across the goal line to bring the score to 13 to 6. But Byelene wasn't through yet. He showed that he could run as artfully as he passed by breaking through the line of scrimmage for 22 yards and a touchdown late in the fourth quarter. Ted Hennis' try for the extra point went wide, leaving the score 19 to 6.

In addition to Byelene and Brown, Lou Brock, Ted Hennis, Jim Nesbitt, and Tony Ippolito worked smoothly in their back field assignments. The line men forced Detroit to resort to passes for most of its gains. Thus the Purdue board of strategy, which had been looking forward to its Big Ten campaign with considerable foreboding, was feeling greatly reassured tonight after getting a line on what the boys can do under fire.

On the night before the game, Coach Mal Elward had been asked

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 24.—The orange and blue bedecked Illini stumbled over their own fumbles today while inaugurating their 1938 football season. They fumbled many times and one of the blunders was sufficient to send them into an unexpected 6 to 0 defeat before a peppery Ohio university eleven built around the tireless 148 pound Monk Montgomery.

The Monk was an actor in all except a few minutes of the one hour of struggling, most of which was tame and ragged because of the inability of Illinois to click. The Monk threw passes for his own team, he intercepted some of twenty-six passes attempted by his foes and was otherwise busy in helping to slow down whatever other kind of attack the Illini attempted. But the Monk's high spot was a pass he tossed to Jim Snyder for the lone touchdown after Ralph Bennett had presented Ohio with a fumble on the Illinois 28 yard line in the third quarter.

A Few Threats by Illinois.

Illinois, slowed down by its errors and possibly by the alertness of the Bobcat defense, made a few threats, but it never was actually hammering at the enemy goal. Early in the battle the Illini were on Ohio's 29 yard line, but fumbled. After the Ohioans had gone into the lead the Orange and Blue put on one drive of more than fifty yards, only to lose the ball on downs on the 21 yard line. Then in the fourth quarter they were at the 27 yard line as the result of a fumble by Montgomery, but this was wiped away on another of Illinois' six fumbles.

If there is any consolation in statistics, the Illini can credit themselves with at least a moral victory. They made fifteen first downs, five on passes, against one first down by Ohio, this on a penalty. They gained a total of 205 yards to 59 by their foes. [illegible] Illinois futile advance were accounted for on

ROUT CARDINALS AND REMAIN TWO GAMES BEHIND

Hartnett Drives Out Home Run.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Cubs yesterday kept apace with the Pirates, two games back, when they administered a terrific trimming to Lon Warneke and other Cardinal refugees from the New England hurricane. The Cards, who escaped the eastern storm by airplane, found things just as gusty in Wrigley field as they were blown over, 9 to 3, in a fifteen hit whirlwind which included a triple and three singles by Billy Herman, a homer and a single by Gabby Hartnett, a triple by Carl Reynolds, and three singles by Stan Hack.

The Chicagoans now have eight games to play, today and tomorrow against the Cards; Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday against the Pirates, and next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday against the Cardinals in St. Louis. Other than the games they will play with the Cubs, the Pirates have five with the Reds, whom they whipped yesterday, 4 to 1.

Find Missing Punch.

There was something more cheering than just victory in yesterday's conquest. The quantity and caliber of the hitting were a source of great promise. Until they broke loose with thirteen hits in the second game in Philadelphia Friday the Cubs had not made as many as ten hits in one game since Sept. 8. Then to tear loose with fifteen hearty smacks right after a thirteen hitter was really somethin'.

The success was the fifteenth in the last eighteen played and the victory was checked up as Vance Page's No. 5, although two pitchers succeeded him. The first of these was Larry French, who went in in the sixth with one run in and two on base. Poor Larry cast one pitch and it was smacked by Mickey Owen for a triple. Charley Root hastily was summoned and went the rest of the day without being bruised at all.

Hack Starts Forays.

Hack, pretty much of a bust in the first three games of the Philadelphia series, carried on nobly the awakening which transpired in the Philly final. The Cubs made three scoring forays yesterday and each of them was launched by Hack. On each occasion Stan singled and scored. Hack was backed up in each instance with hits by Herman, who also scored after his first three hits. In the eighth, after Hack had reached first on an error and had gone out stealing, Herman made his fourth and only wasted hit.

The Cardinals piled up eleven hits, including four in a row by Johnny Mize. Six were off Page, including three in the sixth; one was that painful experience of French's, and the others were off Root, two singles in the seventh and two in the eighth.

Catch Up to Warneke.

The Cubs busted through in the third and here's the way they did it: Hack singled to left after Page had opened the inning by fanning. Herman singled to center, putting Hack on third. Cavarretta bounced to Mize, who threw to the plate too late to get Hack. The runners advanced on a passed ball, after which Galan was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Reynolds flied to Med-

DE CORREVONT IS STOPPED AS N. U. FROSH LOSE, 32-0

Held to Eight Yards Gain by Varsity Eleven.

Northwestern's football team rolled up a 32 to 0 victory over a stubborn freshman eleven led by Bill De Correvont, former Austin High school star, before a record crowd of 20,000 in Dyche stadium yesterday.

The crowd, by far the largest ever to witness the annual varsity-frosh contest, was drawn by the prospect of observing De Correvont in his debut against college competition. Although his performance failed to match his prep school rampages, it probably could be marked down to the inexperience of his teammates. On most of his efforts the varsity linemen poured in on him before he could get started.

Gains Eight Yards.

De Correvont carried the ball nine times for a gain of sixteen yards but was thrown for an eight yard loss on one occasion. His longest run was one of twelve yards and came on a kickoff return in the last quarter. He got away for eleven yards early in the game after taking a lateral pass from Ira Kepford, half back from Muskegon, Mich.

After the freshmen had held the varsity scoreless in the first quarter, runs by Jack McGurn and Jack Ryan carried the ball the length of the field, McGurn plunging over from the 2 yard line for the first touchdown.

Ryan Goes Over.

The varsity produced another touchdown early in the third quarter on runs and passes by Ryan, McGurn, and Bernie Jefferson, Ryan going over for a touchdown on a ten yard run. The varsity added two more touchdowns in the last period, the first on a twelve yard dash by Oliver [Red] Hahnenstein, sophomore half back, and the second on a short plunge by Jay Laskay after a thirty yard pass, Paul Soper to Bob Daly, had placed the ball in scoring position.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—A sluggish Notre Dame varsity had its hands full defeating the freshmen, 20 to 0, today. The first and second frosh teams held the first two varsity elevens scoreless during the first 26 minutes of play.

The second team, led by Bill Hoffer, Ben Sheridan, Max Burnell, and Joe Thesing, marched 77 yards to a touchdown late in the second quarter, Sheridan going over right tackle for the touchdown. Thesing missed the extra point attempt.

The third team got the second varsity touchdown, Milt Piepul, full back, scoring from the 8 yard line in the third period after a thirty-four yard march. Paul Morrison kicked the point. The No. 1 team returned to action in the fourth period and marched sixty-six yards to score on Stevenson's five yard sweep of right end. Stevenson's place kick was good.

CHICAGO VARSITY WINS.

Chicago's varsity football team defeated the reserves, 13 to 7, in a practice game on the Midway yesterday.

Capt. Lew Hamity scored the first varsity touchdown on a short plunge following a sustained march. The second, set up on a pass from Hamity to Sollie Sherman, was made by Ed Valorz. The reserves' touchdown was scored by Wally Ottomeyer.

Coach Clark Shaughnessy, who rejoined the squad after scouting Bradley Tech in its victory over St. Louis university Friday night, reported that he was much impressed with the Bradley line and said the Maroons will find Bradley a tough foe in Stagg field next Saturday.

BUCKEYES LOSE RABB.

Columbus, O., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Johnny Rabb, counted upon as Ohio State's regular full back, reinjured his knee during practice this afternoon and probably will be lost for the season.

He was carried from the field, given emergency treatment in the Ohio stadium training quarters, and then rushed to University hospital, where X-rays were taken. Pending examination of these prints, it is impossible to determine the seriousness of his injury.

BADGERS USE VETERANS.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Veterans held down nine positions in the starting lineup today as Coach Harry Stuhldreher sent Wisconsin through a two hour offensive scrimmage with the freshmen in an attempt to arrive at a first string lineup for the opening game with Marquette next Saturday.

N. U. FOOTBALL GOES ON DISPLAY

Lawrence, Kas., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The University of Kansas Jayhawks beat the Texas Longhorns, 19 to 18, today.

Kansas, with Sophomore Ralph Miller and Veteran Max Replogle leading the drive, unleashed an offense strange to Jayhawk teams. It piled up twelve points in the first period and seven in the second to take a 19 to 0 lead at the half. Then it was the Texans' turn, and, with Beefus Bryan and Wallace Lawson alternating, they scored once in the third and twice in the final quarter.

Kansas Opens Up.

The Jayhawks started their drive on their 49 yard line. With Miller running and passing, they advanced to the Texas 18. Miller drove to the 5, and two plays later he passed to End Dave Shirk for a touchdown. Soon after Lawson of Texas was driven far back while trying to pass. He uncorked a long pass, which Miller caught on the Kansas 10. He ran ninety yards for a touchdown without being touched.

In the second quarter Max Replogle broke through tackle on the Texas 43, and he traveled to the 1 foot line, from where Hall plunged over. Chester Gibbens' drop kick for the extra point was good, and it meant the ball game.

Early in the third quarter the Longhorns drove seventy-seven yards for their first score. A fifteen yard pass, Bryan to John Peterson, was the scoring play. A forty yard drive brought the second Texas touchdown early in the final period. Lawson plunged over from the 1 yard line.

Texans Make Final Bid.

The shadows were long when the Texans made their final bid. From the Kansas 26, Lawson whipped a pass to Bob Moers, who took the ball while racing over the goal. Just forty-five seconds remained as Sophomore Bob Evans trotted on the field to try for the extra point. His kick missed, and it was Kansas' ball game. The lineups:

TEXAS CHRISTIAN WINS.

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Davey O'Brien, Texas Christian's 150 pound quarter back, threw two passes—one good for 65 yards and the other 47—to beat Centenary, 13 to 0, today before 10,000.

O'Brien threw his first touchdown pass ten minutes after the opening kickoff. The toss traveled thirty-two yards, Don Looney, end, taking it on the Centenary 33 and continuing on to the goal. O'Brien kicked the extra point. Midway in the second period O'Brien shot a pass to Johnny Hall, who stepped over for the second T. C. U. touchdown.

CITADEL SCARES GEORGIA.

Athens, Ga., Sept. 24.—(AP)—A band of cadets from the Citadel nearly upset Georgia's football new deal right at the start today but the home team finally scored a 20 to 12 decision. Making their first start under Coach Joel Hunt, the Bulldogs clicked in the third period to come from behind.

NORTH CAROLINA WINS.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina Tar Heels came from behind to defeat Wake Forest, 14 to 6, in a Southern conference football game under a hot sun here today. About 14,000 saw Carolina's brilliant sophomore passer, Lalanne, sparkplug his team to victory.

KENTUCKY WINS, 46-7.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 24.—(AP)—University of Kentucky's sophomores were impressive on offense today to defeat Maryville college of Tennessee, 46 to 7, in the Wildcats' opening game under a new coach. Coach Ab Kirwan, a Kentucky alumnus, developed both a spectacular attack from the air mixed with smooth running plays to overwhelm lighter Maryville.

Tulane Upset by Clemson in Opener, 13-10

New Orleans, La., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Clemson defeated Tulane, 13 to 10, today in a season's football opener upset that stunned more than 12,000 who had expected an easy victory for the promising green wave. Too many seniors with too much experience spelled the difference as the Tulane youngsters floundered.

Tulane scored a touchdown, point from placement, and a field goal for all of its points in the second period. Clemson punched over a touchdown in the third period, but failed to add the point. The Tigers won in the fourth when Banks McFadden, full back, found nearly every Greenie out of place and sprinted through them twenty-one yards for a touchdown.

VANDERBILT WINS, 20 TO 0.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Vanderbilt took advantage of three breaks to score three touchdowns and defeat underrated Washington university, 20 to 0, today before 5,000.

LOUISIANA STATE ELEVEN UPSET BY MISSISSIPPI, 20-7

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 24.—[U. P.]—Mississippi's lightly regarded eleven upset Louisiana State, 20 to 7, tonight.

Parker Hall's pass from midfield in the first period started Ole Miss' scoring. Murphy took in the ball on the 18 yard line and went across for the touchdown. Whittington kicked the point.

Hall paved the way for the Rebels' second score in the third period when he returned Bussey's punt to the Tiger goal line. Schneller rammed through center for a touchdown and Whittington again kicked the extra point.

Late in the third period Bisbing picked Stell's fumble out of the air and outran the L. S. U. secondary fifty-seven yards for the touchdown. The Tigers' passes failed to click and they resorted to line plunges to get their lone touchdown, Bussey cutting through the middle of the line for the score in the fourth quarter.

the eight of twenty-eight passes they completed. Ohio completed two passes, one for the touchdown. And Ohio fumbled only once.

Illinois started out as though it had plans for an early touchdown. The Ohioans pulled a quick kick after taking the initial kickoff. In two plays Peterson ripped through for nineteen yards, to the Illinois 40 yard mark. Peterson passed to Castelo for a first down on the Ohio 48 yard line. Peterson threw another pass, this one to Mazeika, and although Mazeika was unmolested, he dropped the ball, Mohler recovering for Ohio on his 41 yard line. The remainder of the period was negative except for another 15 yard charge by Peterson, which brought the Illini only as far as their 35 yard line.

Illinois Gets a Break, But . . .

In the first few minutes of the second quarter the Illini hurried Montgomery into a poor kick. The punt traveled only a few yards and rolled out of bounds on Ohio's 29 yard line. The Illini never had a chance to convert this break into a few points. Bennett started a wide swing around his left end, but he fumbled when jolted by an enemy tackler and Shafer recovered for Ohio on his 38 yard line. Toward the end of the period Illinois tried to connect with the goal by way of the air, but Phillips missed three successive passes.

The third period, in which the Ohioans reached the Illinois goal without much loss of time, took a menacing turn for the Orange and Blue when Peterson fumbled and Iwucz recovered for Ohio on its 31 yard line. The first play was a pass, but it didn't find a receiver. Montgomery then sailed a pass straight down the middle of the field and Purvis, standing almost on his goal line, stole it from the intended Ohio receiver. Purvis ran it out to the 17 yard line before being downed and the Illini thought they were out of danger.

Repeat Fumble and It Costs.

An instant later the Illini repeated their fumbling play and this time the Ohioans cashed in on the gift. Bennett, trying to get around end, fumbled when tackled by Iwucz. Wertman captured the loose ball for Ohio on the Illinois 28 yard line. One play served Ohio's purpose. Montgomery heaved his pass to Snyder, who cut a twenty yard circle into the right corner of the end zone for a touchdown. During his six point sprint Snyder ran around Brewer, the only Illini close to him. Montgomery missed his placement for the extra point. The Orange and Blue attack immediately began to click for the first time, but the Ohio goal wasn't threatened during the period.

Illinois carried its late third period drive into the fourth quarter, Wehrli tearing through the line for fifteen yards after threatening to pass. On the next play Rettinger sprinted through for thirteen yards to Ohio's 25 yard line. The Illini tried to go the rest of the distance on passes, but they failed and Ohio took the ball on downs.

Opportunity Knocks Again.

Later in the period an Ohio fumble bid the Illini to a touchdown drive, but they didn't respond. The ball slipped from Montgomery's hands and it was recovered by Rettinger on Ohio's 27 yard line. Ten fresh orange helmeted athletes were rushed into action. A pass, from Peterson to Brewer, netted four yards. Peterson went around right end for five yards. After Rettinger had failed to gain, Brewer ripped through for a first down on Ohio's 16 yard line. Peterson picked up six more yards, but the big drive ended suddenly when Purvis fumbled and Parker recovered for Ohio on his 22 yard line.

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Rutgers passed the first test of a new football régime with flying colors today, handing a 20 to 0 defeat to Marietta college of Ohio. One of the largest opening day crowds in Rutgers history, estimated at 7,000 watched the Scarlet eleven present Harvey Harman, its new head coach, a one sided triumph.

what he thought of the prospect of finding passers. "Of course, you don't expect to have another Isbell," some one remarked.

Giving emphasis to his answer by speaking very casually, Elward remarked in his slow quiet way, "I wouldn't be at all surprised to see Byelene pass just as well as Isbell before long. What a passer needs first of all is coolness. A fellow who gets rattled is no good at all. In the second place he must be able to hit his target the moment his man breaks."

In making that scoring pass this afternoon, Byelene fulfilled those requirements perfectly. Two Detroit men were storming in on him but he retreated coolly, held the ball till the last possible split second, and then let it go just as Krause broke away from the Titans who were covering him.

The speed Brown showed in racing to his touchdown was another item which should cheer up Purdue followers. It was a real old fashioned end run in which he sped far out until he had outdistanced his immediate pursuers, then he cut right down the sideline and outran every member of the Detroit secondary who was trying to head him off.

Purdue Gains 226 Yards.

Purdue gained a total of 226 yards on rushing to Detroit's 67. Detroit threw nineteen passes and completed six for 87 yards and Purdue threw eleven passes and completed two for 67 yards. It might be pointed out, however, that most of Purdue's passing was done before Byelene entered the game. After the Boilermakers had gone into the lead, they didn't take many chances on interceptions.

Purdue had the ball on its 27 yard line when the ball got away from Brown. Pavelec recovered for Detroi on the Purdue 17 yard line. Fegan passed to Murphy for three yards, after which Palumbo went around end to the Boilermaker 5 yard line. Palumbo was stopped at center. Then McDermott went off tackle for the touchdown. Chesney's place kick was wide.

Purdue took the ensuing kickoff on its 35 yard line. An attempt at end and a five yard penalty against Detroit put the ball on the 42 yard line. Then Brown got away on his 58 yard run for a touchdown. Petty's place kick failed. A few minutes later Barritt fumbled and Morningstar recovered for Purdue on the Detroit 29 yard line. Nesbitt's pass to Byelene failed. Then Byelene passed to Krause, who caught the ball as he crossed the goal line.

The alert Shackleton then made his dash for the extra point after Nesbitt's kick was blocked. Late in the fourth quarter Byelene returned a punt to the Detroit 25 yard line. Brown made three yards at tackle. Then Byelene squirmed through several Detroit tacklers and ran for a touchdown. Hennis' place kick was wide.

A "Red Hot" First Half.

The first half, which was played under a blazing sun that sent the temperature into the midsummer range, consisted of a succession of scoring chances that failed, due sometimes to aggressive line play on the part of the defense, sometimes to penalties against the offense, and other times to sloppy passing. Detroit's clever quick kicks drove Purdue back on the defensive several times, one of these going from the Detroit 21 yard line to the Purdue 5 yard line.

The Boilermakers missed one particularly good scoring chance in the second quarter. Detroit had the ball on its 37 yard line when a pass from center went wrong and rolled back to the 13 yard line, where Thursby recovered for Purdue. Winchell hit center for a yard, Byelene cut through tackle for six, and Nesbitt picked up one more at center. On fourth down Petty's place kick was low.

ALABAMA JOLTS BEST U. S. C. TEAM IN 5 YEARS, 19-7

Mosley Throws 2 Passes for Touchdowns.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Making a determined bid for another Rose Bowl appearance, the University of Alabama's football team today marched and passed to a 19 to 7 victory over what was rated as the best University of Southern California eleven in five years. A capacity crowd of 65,000 saw the game.

Herky Mosley, Alabama left half back was the sparkplug of the visitors' offense. His consistent punting, off tackle smashes and accurate passing were outstanding. Mosley threw passes for the first two touchdowns in the second period. Half Back Slemons caught Mosley's toss on the goal line for the first touchdown.

Alabama took the ball on its 20 yard and marched to its second touchdown in thirteen plays, a drive featured by an 18 yard pass, Mosley to Blackwell, and another Mosley pass to Blackwell in the end zone.

Alabama's third touchdown came in the fourth quarter. Hal Hughes intercepted Ollie Day's pass and ran twenty yards to the goal line. Later Boswell, playing safety in place of Mosley, fumbled Day's punt. Al Krueger fell on the ball on the 1 yard line and Day went over on the first play for the Trojan touchdown.

Alabama gained 152 yards from scrimmage to the Trojans' 20 and made eight first downs to four.

CALIFORNIA WINS, 12-7.

Berkeley, Cal., Sept. 24.—(AP)—After being beaten for three periods, California today smashed its way to a 12 to 7 victory over the St. Mary's before 50,000.

The Gaels, who dominated the play for most of three periods, went into a 7 to 0 lead a few minutes after the second quarter opened. Sophomore Mike Klotovich recovered a fumble on the Bear 21 yard line late in the first quarter, and off tackle smashes put the ball on the 2 yard line as the quarter ended.

On the first play of the second period, Klotovich went around California's left end for the touchdown, and Mike Perrie place kicked the extra point. This advantage stood up until California scored twice in the fourth quarter.

The Bears charged 80 yards down the field on nine line plays and a 22 yard pass, Vic Bottari to Bill Elmore, for their first touchdown. Dave Anderson cracked the center of the line for the final 10 yards.

A poor punt by Jerry Dowd, Gael captain, set the stage for the winning touchdown. California put the ball in play on its own 45 yard line. Straight power thrusts, after fake spins, with Bottari and Louis Smith and Anderson alternating, put the Bears on the 4 yard line, where Bottari lateraled to Smith who scored.

It took De Paul university only five plays to assert its superiority over the Ripon college football team yesterday afternoon in De Paul field. When the final gun sounded and all De Paul's substitutes had seen action the score was 38 to 0 for the Demons.

Bill Hinckley supplied the first touchdown with an eleven yard slash through the line. He came back a few minutes later and scored from the 4 yard line. O'Keefe, who missed his first try for point after touchdown kicked the extra point this time.

Ed Norris took the leadership in De Paul's attack at this point and before the half was ended put together a number of gains for the Demons' third touchdown. The touchdown play itself was from the 3 yard line, but a thirty-seven yard sprint preceded it. Norris also made De Paul's last touchdown in the fourth period on an eighteen yard dash around end.

Wally Malinowicz who plowed over from the 1 yard line in the third period and Tom O'Brien who made the longest touchdown run of the day, a forty-two yard jaunt around right end, completed the scoring.

DARTMOUTH RUNS UP 46-0 VICTORY AGAINST BATES

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Dartmouth Indians, as impressive as they were last season when they escaped defeat, opened their football campaign today by riding over a courageous but inexperienced Bates team for a 46 to 0 victory.

The Indians used their varsity lineup for only twenty minutes. During that brief interval the regulars accounted for three of Dartmouth's touchdowns.

Bob MacLeod, captain and sparkplug of the Dartmouth team, accounted for most of the yardage before making two scoring plunges from Bates' six yard line early in the first period. When he and his mates returned for their scoring tour of duty in the third quarter Bill Hutchinson shook himself loose after splitting his right tackle and end, and reversing for a 46 yard touchdown run.

Oregon, Under New Coach, Beats Washington State

Pullman, Wash., Sept. 24.—[U. P.]—Oregon, playing its first game for Coach Tex Oliver, today got away to an impressive start in the Pacific Coast conference by defeating Washington State, 10 to 2.

35,000 See Panthers Roll Over Mountaineers.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Pittsburgh's Panthers crushed West Virginia, 19 to 0, before 35,000 spectators today. Picking up from where they left off last year as the No. 1 football team of the nation, the Panthers drove over touchdowns in the second, third, and fourth periods without resorting to a single bit of their famed trickery. So powerless were the Mountaineers that they were held to a total net gain of two first downs and seventy-three yards.

Pitt's backfield, consisting of Marshal Goldberg, Hal Stebbins, Dick Cassiano, and Johnny Chickerneo, failed to riddle the Mountaineer defense at will, but leveled off with drive after drive that rocked the enemy back on their heels.

Goldberg scored two of the touchdowns, bucking over each time from the 2 yard line. The third Panther touchdown came in a freakish way as the ball squirted from Frank Goodell's arms on the goal line into those of Joe Rettinger, one of Pitt's second stringers.

NAVY WINS, 26 TO 0.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Navy's green football team stripped off its mask of mystery today and matched bright new uniforms with a bright new style of play to trounce Williams and Mary, 26 to 0, before a crowd of 16,000.

The Middies, a powerhouse eleven last season, mixed power-play and deception with a deluge of passes and used nearly their entire squad in trouncing the Indians, first foe of the season. Using the game largely as a test of the new style of play, Navy sent three backfield aces, Len Cook, Geep Gillette, and Ulmont Whitehead, onto the field to pass and punt from the start. They gave the Middies a 13 to 0 lead at the end of the first period.

Cooke did the heaving, with Wood and Whitehead doing most of the receiving. William and Mary found Navy's pass defense on its toes and was able to complete only six of seventeen aerials attempted.

ARMY, 32; WICHITA, 0.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Army's backs, operating with smooth efficiency behind a stalwart line, romped to five touchdowns and a 32 to 0 triumph over Wichita university in the opening game of the football season today.

The Shockers were more shocked than otherwise by the victory that opened Capt. Bill Wood's tour of duty as Army coach. Strong in the center of the line, the invaders' flanks were turned and their tackles pierced by Huey Long, John Schrader and Jim Dubuisson, a trio of Army trail backs.

Wichita threw a scare into the crowd of 5,000, including the corps of cadets, by marching to the Army 14 yard line on six plays after taking the kickoff. That was their only definite threat.

SOX LOSE, 8 TO 7, TO BROWNS; THEN TRIUMPH, 3 TO 2

Three Homers and Four Errors Beat Lyons.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The White Sox and St. Louis Browns split a double-header here today, the Browns winning the opener, 8 to 7, and the Sox the second, 3 to 2.

In the first game, Teddy Lyons was beaten on errors and home run pitches. Mel Almada, Mel Mazzera, and Harlond Clift hit the home runs. Clift's was his 34th of the year and came with a mate on base in the fifth to wind up a four run rally.

FIRST GAME

Errors, four of them, and a single by Clift accounted for two Brownie runs in the first inning of the first game. Appling drew an error on Almada's roller. Berger booted Mazzera's grounder. Clift singled and Kreevich let the ball get through him, Almada scoring on the hit and Mazzera and Clift advancing on Mike's error. Kress flied to Walker and Sewell let Walker's perfect throw get by him, allowing Mazzera to score. Walker was charged with the error.

Radcliff walked, advanced on Lyons' single, and scored on Berger's single in the second inning, but Alamada's homer, his fourth of the year, nuulified that run in the Browns' half.

Mazzera's sixth homer, a drive which traveled 425 feet into the center field stands, gave the Browns a 4 to 2 edge in the fourth. The Sox had scored in their half on a pass to Appling, Walker's infield single, and Sewell's fly to Bell.

A single by Almada, a double by McQuinn, Mazzera's single, which scored both runners, and Clift's thirty-fourth homer of the year netted four runs in the Browns' sixth.

Berger tripled to open the eighth and scored when Kreevich hit into a double play following Clift's error on Owen's roller. The Sox came within one run of tying the count in the ninth on passes to Appling and Walker, singles by Radcliff, Sewell, and Owen, and Mills' error.

SECOND GAME

A double by Appling and a triple by Meyer gave the Sox a 1 to 0 lead in the second inning of the second game, but it didn't stand up long because of Appling's two base wild throw of Clift's roller, passes to Grace and Kress, and Sullivan's infield out, and Heffner's single which netted two runs in the Browns' half.

Singles by Kuhel and Steinbacher and Radcliff's infield out tied the score in the fifth.

The Sox then scored the winning run after two were out in the seventh when Steinbacher doubled, Radcliff drew an intentional pass, and Appling singled to center.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Buck Newsom and Emil Bildilli will oppose Johnny Whitehead and Harry Boyles of the White Sox in tomorrow's double-header. Newsom will be trying for his nineteenth victory, a right smart record with a club that is in seventh place, but was last place most of the year.

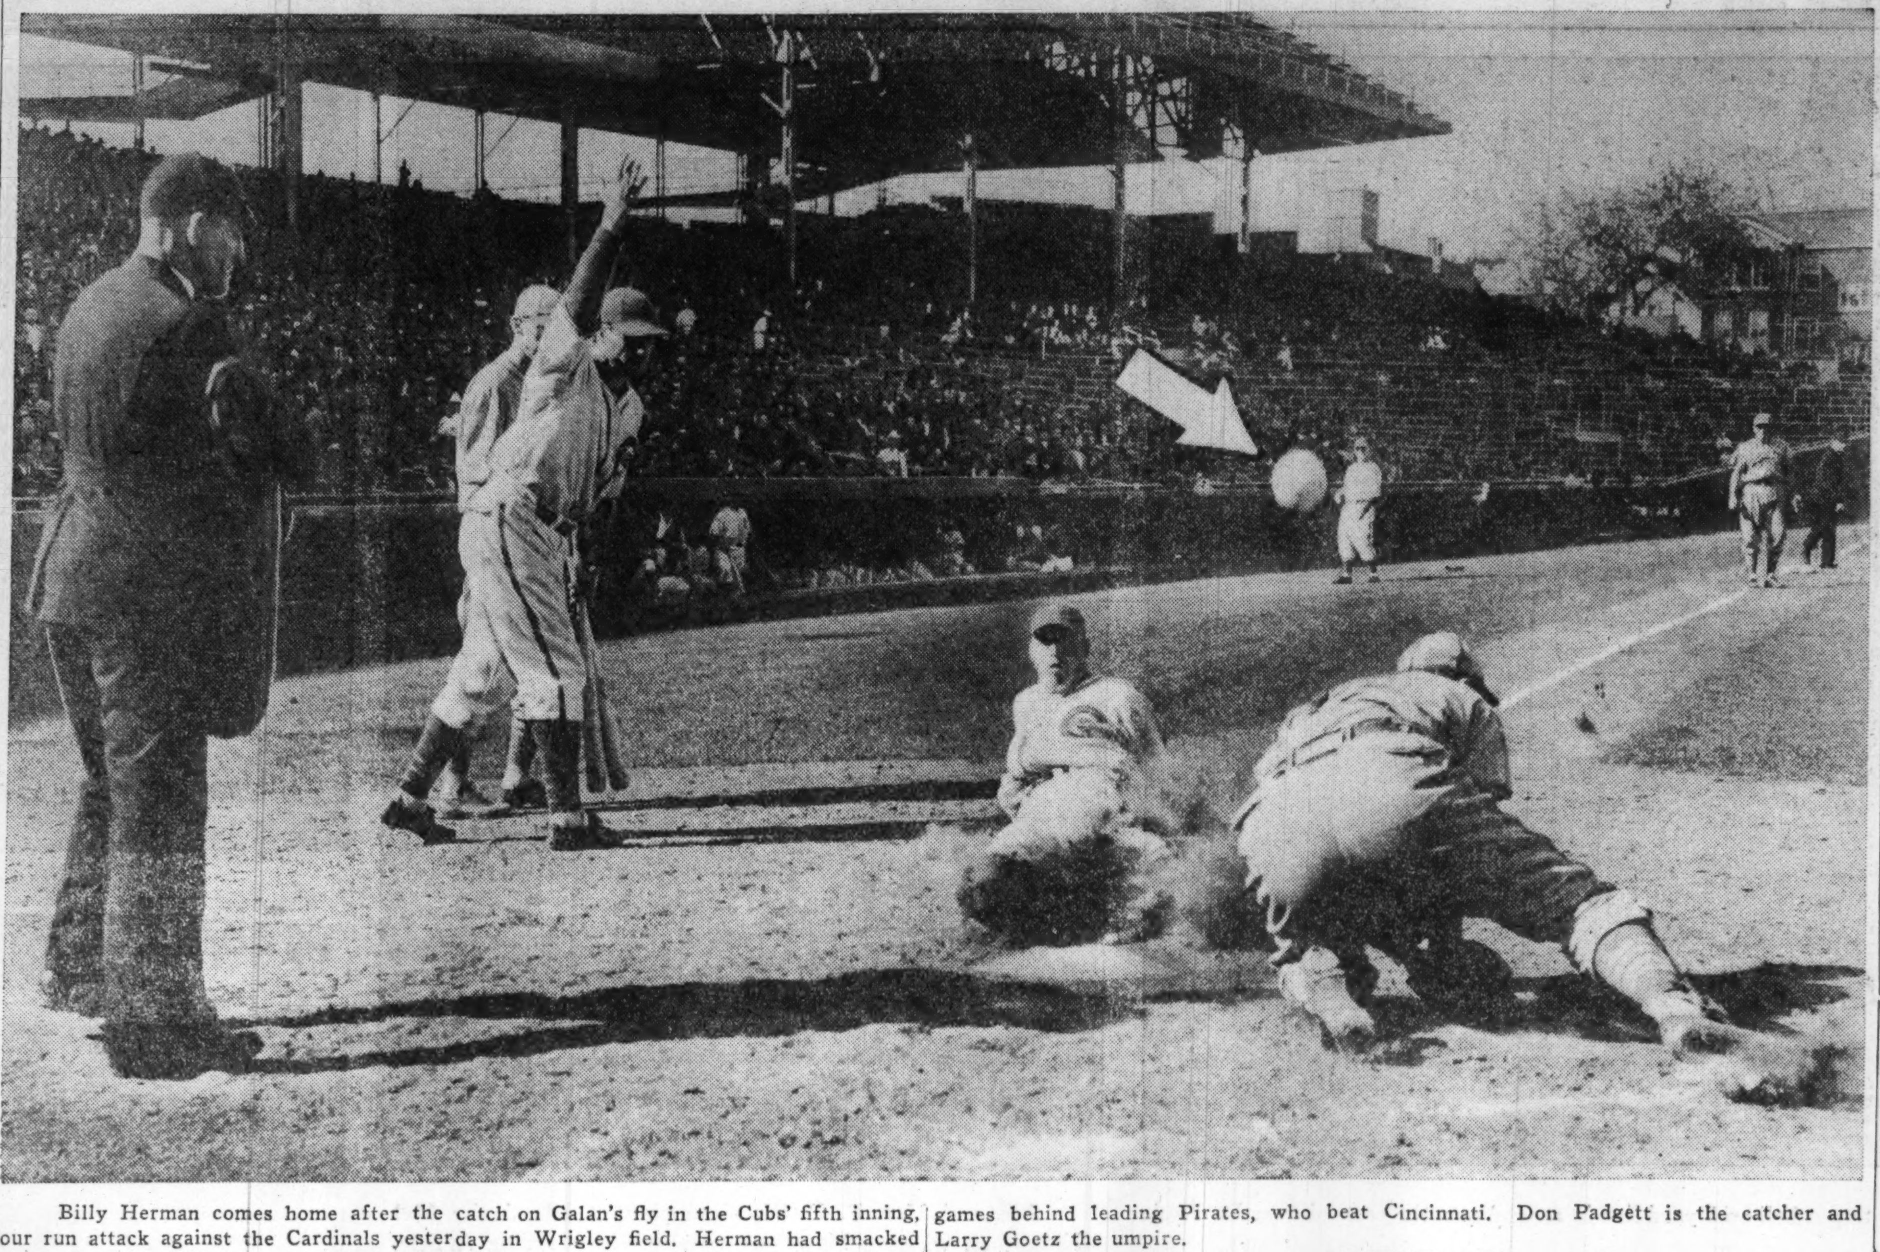
IT'S A CUB VICTORY, BUT DOESN'T HELP ENOUGH



Billy Herman comes home after the catch on Galan's fly in the Cubs' fifth inning, four run attack against the Cardinals yesterday in Wrigley field. Herman had smacked a triple to get in scoring position. The Cubs went on to win, 9 to 3, but remained two games behind leading Pirates, who beat Cincinnati. Don Padgett is the catcher and Larry Goetz the umpire.

North Central Eleven Routs McKendree

North Central scored a pair of touchdowns in the second and third quarters and added another in the fourth. Meanwhile the Cardinal line was holding McKendree completely in check.

NORMAL BEATS ELMHURST.

Illinois State Normal, undefeated in the Illinois Intercollegiate conference last year, started off another clean football slate yesterday by defeating Elmhurst college, 7 to 6, at Elmhurst, in the season and conference opener for both schools.

Myron Heintzman blocked a punt in the second quarter and ran thirty-five yards for the State Normal touchdown, then caught a pass for the extra point. Elmhurst had taken the lead earlier in the period when Henry Bucholz passed ten yards over the goal line to Don Rosback. Jack Eiszner's kick for point was wide.

WESLEYAN 19; CARBONDALE, 0.

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—A hard driving sophomore back, Bob Morrow of Chicago Heights, took the spotlight today as Illinois Wesleyan opened its 1938 football season with a 19 to 0 victory over Carbondale Teachers. Morrow led the way as Wesleyan moved six times to the enemy 10 yard line, capitalizing on three of its scoring opportunities. Morrow also was a bulwark in the Titan defense which held Carbondale without a first down. Carbondale failed to threaten and did not get inside the Titan 40 yard line. Wesleyan made twelve first downs.

AUGUSTANA WINS, 13 TO 0.

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The Augustana football team beat Iowa Wesleyan, 13 to 0, today. Gierum, new full back, scored both the touchdowns. Maroney kicked the only point after touchdown.

Wesleyan threatened to score just as the first half ended, driving to the 18 yard line. Tangorra, quarter back, and Lenc, end, played especially well for Augustana. Hudsenpiller gained most of the Iowans' yardage on center plunges.

MACOMB, 0; PARSONS, 0.

Macomb, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Parsons college of Fairfield, Ia., and Macomb Teachers' college sweltered to a scoreless football tie today in the opening game of the season. Parsons drove to the 4 yard line in the third quarter, but Macomb braced. Later Macomb marched to Parson's 14 yard line, but was halted and Bob Kraushaar's attempted field goal failed.

CHARLESTON WINS, 6-0.

Charleston, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Wayne Austin plunged one yard for a touchdown in the third quarter today to give Charleston Teachers of Charleston a 6 to 0 football triumph over Central Normal of Danville, Ind. It marked the opening game for Charleston and the coaching debut of Harold C. Ave, who replaced Gilbert Carson.

WESTERN STATE WINS.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Illinois college got only one first down today as Western State Teachers' eleven of Kalamazoo romped to a 28 to 0 victory.

COALS AND MILLS HOPE TO SETTLE SEMI-PRO TITLE

The Spencer Coals, defending champions in city semi-pro baseball, will meet the Chicago Mills in a double-header that may settle the 1938 crown today. The first game will start at 1:30 p. m. and will be played at 4200 North Central avenue.

Al Nusser and Bob Malstrom, both of whom have victories over the Coals, will pitch for the Mills this afternoon. The Coals will rely on Bill [Lefty] Stevens, who beat the Mills twice last year, and Mike Yaros, wick, Herman scoring. Hartnett also flied to Medwick.

Cubs Keep on Pirates' Heels; Beat Cards, 9-3

Double plays squelched the Cards in the fourth and fifth innings after which the Cubs really went to work on good old Lon. Hack again got production under way with a single to left, this time with nobody out. Herman tripled to right, Hack scoring. Cavarretta fanned, but Galan flied to Medwick, Herman scoring. Reynolds tripled to center and was safe at home when Padgett dropped the throw in after Umpire Goetz had called Carl out. Hartnett, a bit sore, perhaps, because Warneke had been dusting him off, slammed his No. 8 homer over the left field rail. Henshaw replaced Warneke and Collins and Jurges singled. Then Henshaw struck out Page.

Cards Get Tough.

The Cards in the sixth got tough for the first time and did their day's scoring. Stu Martin opened with a single to right. Herman made a fine running catch of Pepper Martin's foul, but Medwick singled to center, putting S. Martin on third. Mize socked his third straight single, S. Martin scoring. Manager Hartnett called in Larry French to pitch to Padgett, who bats left handed, whereupon Manager Gonzales sent Owen up to bat for Padgett. Owen socked French's first and only pitch for a triple to right center, scoring Medwick and Mize. French promptly was replaced by Root. Gutteridge grounded out to Herman, and Myers flied to Cavarretta.

In their end of the sixth the Cubs matched the three runs the Cards made. For the third time Hack started the run making. He beat out a bunt to Henshaw, whereupon Herman beat out a bunt to Mize. When Mize threw the ball into right field Hack took third and Herman second. McGee replaced Henshaw and Demaree, batting for Cavarretta, singled to center, scoring Hack and Herman. Galan singled to right, putting Demaree on third, whence he scored while Galan and Reynolds were sinking in a double play. Hartnett lined to Stu Martin.

DE PAUW DEFEATS FRANKLIN, 13-0, IN LAST HALF

Greencastle, Ind., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—DePauw university defeated Franklin college, 13 to 0, in an Indiana conference football game this afternoon. Both touchdowns came in the last half.

DePauw's first touchdown followed a series of line plays that put the ball on the 1 foot line where Scott scored on an end run. Schiach's kick for the extra point was wide. In the last period, Montooth, substitute half back from Rushville, Ill., put the ball within scoring distance on a long run. Scott then ran over from the 17 yard line. This time Schiach's kick was good.

IF—

The Cubs' chances of winning the pannant grew one game slimmer yesterday as both they and the Pirates won. If the Pirates win four of their remaining eight games, the Cubs must win seven out of eight to take the pennant. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Pittsburgh	88	62	.587

If the Cubs win all eight of their games, they will win the pennant, regardless of what Pittsburgh does, since three of the Chicago victories would be defeats for the Pirates in their series which opens in Wrigley field Tuesday. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Pittsburgh	89	61	.593

It All Depends on Pirate Set, Says Hartnett

"It all depends on that series with the Pirates, now."

This was the unanimous sentiment of the Cubs as they filed into their dressing rooms, following their rout of the Cardinals yesterday.

They had expected trouble from Lon Warneke and they were relieved by the thought of having removed Lon from further reckoning in the series, but they realized that their task still is far from completed.

Manager Gabby Hartnett sounded the keynote for the ensemble when he stepped from his sodden uniform into the shower. "Let's treat each game as just another date on the schedule—if we win 'em and the Pirates drop a few, okay; if we lose 'em, it's just too bad; but the Pirates, win or lose, will know they've been in a battle."

Vance Page, although forced from the mound by the threat of a Cardinal uprising in the sixth, received only praise from his burly leader. "Nice going, Vance," was Gabby's greeting when he entered the dressing room to find his starting pitcher garbed for the street. "Don't worry, you'll get another chance at these guys before the season's over."

It was Page's first appearance since he was spiked by Johnny Mize in the eighth inning in a game in St. Louis on Sept. 8. That was the day Bill Lee took over to start his string of thirty-seven and a third scoreless innings.

Both the Cards and Cubs were unanimous in the declaration that the new bleachers were death to sluggers because of the background's similarity in coloring to that of a baseball. That was before the game, however.

Bob Weiland, the big lefty, who got his major league start with the White Sox, will pitch for the Cardinals in the second game of the series in Wrigley field today. His opponent will be Clay Bryant.

Scenes reminiscent of the late season days of 1935 were enacted before the game. Autograph hounds, who follow nothing but the winners, were massed four deep at either end of the Cubs' dugout and along the runway to the dressing rom an hour before the contest started.

Pitcher Clare Bertram and Outfielder Joe Cavosie from the Cub farm in Moline were in uniform. They expect to get a free trip to Catalina next February. They arrived in charge of Frank Hearn, president of the Moline team.

Foxx's 48th Homer Beats Yankees, 7-6

New York, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Jimmy Foxx hit his forty-eighth homer of the season in the ninth inning today to give the Boston Red Sox a 7 to 6 victory over the New York Yankees.

The drive broke a tie and dealt Red Ruffing his seventh defeat of the year. He has won twenty-one games. Jim Bagby, who relieved Joe Heving in the sixth and yielded only two hits the rest of the way, received credit for the victory. Score:

BAUERS CHECKS REDS; PIRATES TRIUMPH, 4 TO 1

Cincinnati Is Held to Six Hits.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates held their two game advantage in the National league pennant race today by whipping the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 1, behind Russ Bauers' six hit pitching.

With the big scoreboard in left field carrying an inning by inning report of Chicago's triumph over St. Louis, the Pirates bore down heavily after singles by Billy Myers and Wally Berger and a fly into deep center by Ernie Lombardi had given the visitors their only run in the first inning.

Pirates Gain Lead.

The Pirates took the lead in the second inning with three runs and added another in the eighth.

'Arky Vaughan walked in the second inning, went to second on Gus Suhr's single and moved on to third when Pep Young forced Suhr. Lee Handley dropped a single into right, scoring Vaughan. Young scored from second on Todd's single, and Handley came home a moment later on Bauer's long fly.

With two out in the eighth Myers booted Lloyd Waner's bounder, Brother Paul walked and Rizzo singled to give the Pirates their final run.

Bauers Fans Four.

Bauers struck out four and issued only two passes in winning his twelfth game against thirteen defeats. He was never in danger after the first inning, yielding one hit in each of the second and fourth innings and a pair in the fifth. Pittsburgh got ten hits which, with four errors by the Reds, kept Johnny Vander Meer in jams most of the way as he lost his tenth game against thirteen victories. Score:

GIANTS WIN TWO.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The New York Giants took undisputed possession of third place in the National league today by sweeping a double-header from the Bees, 9 to 8 and 2 to 1, clinching each game in the ninth.

In the opener the Bees outfumbled the New Yorkers, five errors to three and that was the margin of victory for the Giants, since Dick Errickson's misplay, coming between singles by Alex Kampouris and George Myatt sent the winning run across in the final inning.

In the second game Mel Ott hit his thirty-fourth homer of the season in the ninth to break up a pitching duel in which Cliff Melton took the decision over Lou Fette. Melton allowed five hits, Fette six. Score:

LEADING ARTICLE, SMART TRICK WIN AT HAWTHORNE

Shining Heels' Drive Fails by Head.

Leading Article, sprint star from the stable of Dr. B. P. Woodson of Temple, Tex., and Smart Trick, owned by Morris Vehon of Chicago, captured the John C. Schank Memorial and the Autumn Handicaps at Hawthorne yesterday afternoon.

A crowd of 18,000 watched them win the two $2,500 races and cheered enthusiastically when they reached the winning post, because both were stoutly backed favorites. Smart Trick came from behind to register her triumph. Leading Article drove into the lead early in the Schank Memorial and stayed there after successfully shaking off a final desperate challenge from the long shot Shining Heels.

The camera had to be called into action to separate Leading Article and Shining Heels. Smart Trick was so much better than her rivals that the result wasn't even close when the juvenile struggle ended.

Stretch Drive Fails.

Both Smart Trick and Leading Article were the high weights of their fields. Two veteran riders, T. P. Martin and Melvin Knight, rode the two horses to their triumphs.

Until the field hit the lower bend Leading Article was enjoying a three length advantage. At that stage his rivals closed in on him. The stiffest challenge came from Shining Heels. Had the latter started his drive a trifle earlier, he might have been successful, for he was wearing the winner down in the final stages.

Leading Article lasted, however, running the first half in :47 3-5 seconds and the three-quarters in 1:14 2-5. It was the fastest race run at Hawthorne in the last two weeks. In the betting Leading Article paid $7.00 to win, $4.60 to place, and $3.40 to show. Shining Heels paid $10.00 to place and $6.00 to show. Mr. Blaze which raced prominently all the way to take down third money paid $4.40 to show.

Smart Trick by Four Lengths.

Smart Trick was rolling up her second stake victory of the Chicago season when she captured the Autumn handicap. She won the Prairie State stakes at Washington park a month ago.

She was much the best of her company and after Jocky Martin had given her orders to start moving on the last turn she never left the result in doubt.

Her margin of victory was four lengths over Bala Ormont, owned by Friedberg and Axton of Louisville. Matchup was third, a length and a half back of the leaders. The time for the six furlongs over a track that was very dull was 1:15 1-5 after the first half mile had been run in :48 4-5 seconds.

Miss Baker Fades.

There had been a heavy plunge on Miss Baker. She had fine early speed but when headed dropped back rapidly. She finished fifth and was losing ground all through the late stages.

In the betting Smart Trick paid $6.00, $4.20, and $3.20 across the board. Bala Ormont paid $4.20 to place and $3.00 to show. Matchup was at $4.00 to show.

As a result of her victory under top weight impost of 117 pounds Smart Trick stacks up as the best juvenile now racing in this racing sector.

Betting for the afternoon totaled $418,109 with $57,374 wagered on the last race. This made the eighth the heaviest betting event of the day.

E. J. Morey of 746 Penn avenue, Aurora, had a profitable trip. By picking six winners and two seconds in the first seven races Morey won the $500 Hawthorne rating contest.

Magic Hour Wins Belmont Park Feature

He didn't have to beat any of the year's best 3 year olds to capture the mile and five-eighth endurance test. Roseretter, from William du Pont Jr.'s Foxcatcher farms, was second, a half length behind the victor and Hal Price Headley's Dah He third. The favorite, W. M. Jeffords' Jolly Tar, came in fourth while Lucky Omen and Anaflame, the latter coupled with Magic Hour in the betting, completed the field.

Cravat Reported Injured.

Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, the advance favorite, was scratched and it was reported the colt had been injured when he slipped and fell in his stall. Stagehand, the 3 year old champion, and other top-flight racers, were not eligible for the stake.

Magic Hour, ridden by Johnny Longden, who seeks the American riding championship this year, raced the long distance in 2:45 flat. He had to ride hard at the finish to stay in front of the fast closing du Pont filly.

The race was worth $16,880 to Phipps as his 5 to 1 shot came in. Roseretter's second earned $2,666 for du Pont. Dah He's share was $1,333 and Jolly Tar picked up $450.

Mrs. Mars' Filly Wins.

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Dinner Date won a claim to consideration in naming the year's 2 year old champion by outrunning ten other juvenile fillies to take the thirty-second Matron stakes and $16,700. Dinner Date outlasted Ciencia, from Robert Kleburg's King ranch, to win by a head in a two horse race. The winner never had more than a half length advantage as she ran six furlongs in 1:13 2-5. Headley's Airacuda beat out Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twist for third money.

A Close Finish in Hawthorne Sprint

C. Y. O. NINES TO MEET TODAY FOR STATE CROWN

St. Roman of Chicago's southwest side and St. Peter of Quincy, Ill., will clash this afternoon at Comiskey park for the C. Y. O. state baseball championship. The game will start at 2 o'clock.

The St. Roman nine is the C. Y. O. Cook county winner, and St. Peter recently won the C. Y. O. downstate championship. The Chicago squad has a record of twelve victories and two defeats for the season, and St. Peter has won eleven contests and lost one.

MISSISSIPPI STATE WINS.

CARDINALS PLAY PACKERS TODAY IN MILWAUKEE

Teams Meet in Buffalo on Wednesday.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

The Green Bay Packers and Chicago Cardinals play the 31st game of their 17 year old series today in State Fair park in Milwaukee. The 32d game will be played Wednesday night in Buffalo, N. Y.

Extra premium is placed on victory today by the proximity of the second clash between these two western division championship contenders. Neither can afford worse than a split in the two engagements if it is to remain a contender. Each must make its chief bid for victory today before it has lack of practice, possible injuries, a long train ride, and the usual reaction after a hard game to contend with in Buffalo.

Each Wins and Loses.

Both teams enter the game with a victory over the Cleveland Rams and a defeat at the hands of the Bears in two National league starts. Of the two, the Packers have the more impressive record. They outplayed the Bears in the mud, only to lose by a safety on two bad passes from center, and whipped the Rams, 26 to 17, on three touchdown passes and two field goals.

Cleveland kept the Cardinals backed down to their own goal line throughout their game a week ago last night. The Bears were able to do more scoring against the Cardinals than they were at Green Bay last week. On the basis of these performances, Green Bay appears to have whatever edge there is in today's contest.

The Packers, however, played an inspired game against the Bears. Such exhibitions generally are followed by a letdown. Should the Packers succumb to this normal reaction they are likely to go east for Wednesday's game with all the pressure on them. Only steady and errorless football can be counted as insurance against the improved Cardinals.

Passes, Kicks to Decide It.

Passing and kicking probably will be the most important factors in reaching a decision today. Both teams have excellent aerial attacks, the best, perhaps, in the western division. Green Bay has superb punting. The Cardinals' kicking against the Bears was good, but all their trouble in Cleveland was traced to the failure of punters. The return of suitable weather for practice led to long sessions for Cardinal punters this week and Coach Milan Creighton hopes the kickers will respond accordingly.

While the Packers and Cardinals are battling to rise above the .500 mark in the western division race, the New York Giants will tackle the surprising Philadelphia Eagles and Cleveland plays in Washington in the eastern division.

scrimmage and Jay McDowell, Huskie end, recovered on Minnesota's 14 yard line. McDowell immediately made amends when, on an end around play, he fumbled and then lost the race for possession to Larry Buhler.

Moore charged around Washington's right end, breaking away from two defenders for 13 yards. Van Every then passed to Faust for a first down on Washington's 22 yard line. It was the only pass Minnesota completed this afternoon in five attempts. Moore and Van Every hit the line for 9 yards, but Elmer's bad pass from center was recovered by Buhler on Washington's 20 yard strip. Here, with two minutes of the half remaining, Faust stepped back to the 26 yard line, and, with Van Every holding, place kicked three points.

Later in the period a pass from Johnston to Miller for twenty-two yards and a lateral by the same pair for nine yards advanced the ball to Minnesota's 26 yard line. Johnston made it first down on the Gophers' 23 yard line. On the next play, disaster again stalked the Huskies. Johnston passed into the flat on his left and there was Bob Johnson, Gopher guard, who had come across to reënforce the secondary. Bob gathered the ball and galloped down the sideline. At midfield Frank Garretson, Washington quarter back, had a setup shot to tackle the runner, but Johnson pushed him into the sod with a mighty stiff arm.

Kick Sets Up Score.

Buhler, Van Every and Faust crashed the Huskie line for eight yards. Then Buhler fought through Washington's left guard and was downed on the Huskie 7 yard line. Franck, who had replaced Moore with Van Every moving to right half, went wide around Washington's left end for three yards. Van Every slid off right guard and went to the one yard line, from which point Buhler crashed over left tackle for the touchdown. Faust's attempt for the point went to the left of the uprights.

Minnesota made nine first downs by rushing, one by passing. Washington made seven first downs by rushing and three by passing. The Gophers gained 249 yards from scrimmage and 14 yards on one pass in five attempted. The Huskies gained 86 yards by rushing and 87 yards in five successful passes in 16 attempts. But Washington had five passes intercepted.

Three Story Streamlined Parking Lot

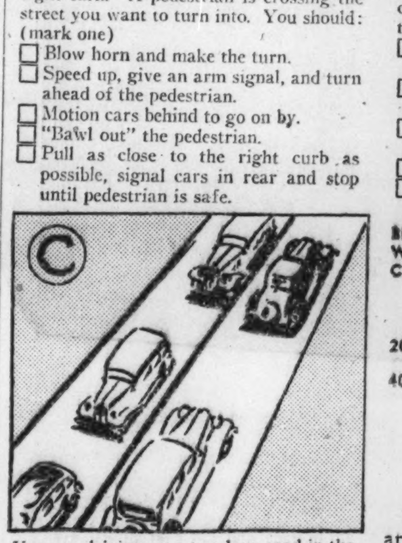
This modernistic pair of parking decks is being considered by the Detroit council for construction in Cadillac square, a downtown plaza. It would accommodate 1,000 automobiles on upper levels and also form a roof to shelter street car and bus loading on the ground level. James B. Steep, Detroit engineer, who presented the idea, said it would cost $400,000 and would return a revenue of $120,000 a year to the city.

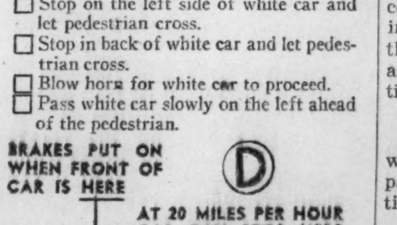
Test Your Driving Knowledge

You are entering an intersection on a green signal light and want to make a right turn. A pedestrian is crossing the street you want to turn into. You should: (mark one)
- ☐ Blow horn and make the turn.
- ☐ Speed up, give an arm signal, and turn ahead of the pedestrian.
- ☐ Motion cars behind to go on by.
- ☐ "Bawl out" the pedestrian.
- ☐ Pull as close to the right curb as possible, signal cars in rear and stop until pedestrian is safe.

The white car is stopped to let a pedestrian cross at the intersection. You are driving the black car. You should: (mark one)
- ☐ Speed up and pass white car on the left ahead of the pedestrian.
- ☐ Stop on the left side of white car and let pedestrian cross.
- ☐ Stop in back of white car and let pedestrian cross.
- ☐ Blow horn for white car to proceed.
- ☐ Pass white car slowly on the left ahead of the pedestrian.



You are driving on a two-lane road in the open country. There are no speed signs. You should (mark one)
- ☐ Drive fast enough so that no other cars will have to pass.
- ☐ Drive not over 50 miles per hour
- ☐ Drive at a speed that is reasonable under the conditions of the road, trafic, your car and the weather
- ☐ Drive at about the same speed as the other cars on the road
- ☐ Drive not over 40 miles an hour unless the road is straight for 500 feet ahead.



If your car could stop from a speed of 20 miles per hour in the distance shown in the top part of this picture, mark on the bottom part how far you think it would take to stop from 40 miles per hour.

This quiz is a part of a standard drivers' license test recommended by the National Safety council. Illinois is now preparing its application and examination rules. If you're sure you know everything about trafic, try the quiz on your back seat driver, your husband, or your wife. Don't look now, but the correct answers, as furnished by the safety council, are at the end of the Voice of Trafic on this page.

STATE HIGHWAY PATROLS.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., Sept. 19.—Many taxpayers of the various states that have highway patrols wonder just how much these patrols are doing to reduce highway accidents before they happen. In many states these patrols are costing a half million dollars a year. They concede that they are effective in most cases in handling other major crimes when committed.

It would seem that an effective positive program to prevent highway accidents would require that patrol officers warn and arrest at all times those who violate the rules of safe driving. This would be a much more positive program than simply investigating accidents after they have occurred. The driver's license is an aid to the officers in doing something before the reckless driver causes an accident. This program would mean that the patrol officers would stop and warn some drivers and arrest a few others each day in their work.

The state highway patrol cars should be an example of good driving to every driver on the road. The writer has not found this always the case in driving through several states.

This positive program of accident prevention would mean that all state employés, politicians, friends, and others would conform to the same rules as private citizens. G. H. P.

WHY NOT HARRISON STREET?

Chicago, Sept. 21.—There is not a chance in thirty years for construction of the proposed Congress boulevard. Now is a very good time for everybody concerned to get sensible and move that proposed boulevard south to Harrison street, which can be widened to 132 feet [same as Michigan avenue] for about a third of the cost of Congress boulevard. The federal building at the southwest corner of Harrison and Canal streets was set back 66 feet from Harrison to provide for this widening.

TOUR ILLINOIS.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—THE TRIBUNE could do much for Illinois economically, politically, and socially if it were to encourage Chicagoans to tour downstate. There is much in scenery and much in historical associations in this state that is unfamiliar to you city dwellers. One reason for this unfamiliarity is that THE TRIBUNE's travel columns seem to prefer Michigan, Wisconsin, Canada, New Mexico, anywhere but downstate Illinois.

Chicago's annual motor travel expenditures are substantial. Downstate needs this business. We downstaters visit your lake cooled city as often as we can during the summer. Why don't you Chicagoans come down and see us in the fall? R. S. T.

POKEY SQUAD CARS.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Several times recently I've been driving in rush hour trafic on a through street when cars would become congested ahead. After several minutes I'd finally discover the trouble. A police squad car would be loafing along at 12 or 15 miles an hour and every motorist would slacken his speed before passing it. These police drivers ought to be instructed to keep up with trafic when they are on busy streets. H. S. SANFORD.

ON WINDSHIELD STICKERS.

Wausau, Wis., Sept. 12.—They say drops of water on rock eventually make an impression. If such is the case, I suggest that your hand signal illustration be printed on the opposite side of the Chicago vehicle license tag. Pasted on the windshield, it would be a constant reminder to all motorists of their obligations to following drivers.

SEES EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF GRADE FUNDS

BY HAL FOUST.

A more reasonable distributio[n] among the states of federal funds f[or] railroad grade separations is foresee[n] by John W. Wheeler, Indiana hig[h]way commissioner from 1933 to 193[?] who is now highway negotiation en[-]gineer for the Chicago, Burlingto[n] and Quincy railroad.

"A new method of allocation on [the] basis of greatest need is hoped for b[y] both highway and railway author[i]ties," he writes in a current bulleti[n] of the Illinois Road Builders' associa[-]tion. "When and if this chang[e] comes, there will be a great activit[y] in larger cities as it is in and nea[r] these that the greatest danger to li[fe] and limb and the greatest obstru[c]tion to highway travel exists.

Would Aid Separation Programs.

"Such a change in regulation[s] would allow the state highway d[e]partments to concentrate in separ[a]tion programs in metropolitan areas.

Under the present system, stat[es] are apportioned the federal allotme[nt] of railroad separation money on [the] basis of population, area, mileage [of] highways, and mileage of railroad[s]. This has resulted in states of larg[e] area, such as Texas and Wyomin[g] receiving funds for expensive stru[c]tures where there are only two [or] three trains and a couple of hundre[d] automobiles a day.

Entitled to Funds in Ratio.

"As it stands now," Mr. Wheele[r] writes, "a railroad is entitled to fun[ds] in a state on direct ratio of its mil[es] of track in the state to the tot[al] miles of track in the state. Thus [a] railroad with large mileage in a stat[e] although going through no larg[e] cities, might have large funds ava[il]able for separation and little nee[d] for such, while a road with sma[ll] mileage in a state, but operating th[at] small mileage in or in the vicinity [of] a large city would have great nee[d] for separations, but very little alloc[a]tion of funds for this work."

Congress this year cut the annu[al] appropriation for railroad grade sep[a]rations from $50,000,000 to $20,000,0[00] for 1940 and to $30,000,000 for 194[?]. For areas of dense population to r[e]ceive a larger portion of this mone[y] it has been suggested that states [in] the wide open spaces might in com[-]pensation receive a larger portion [of] the federal appropriation for lig[ht] trafic roads.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Chicago Automobile Trade a[s]sociation announces that it has p[ut] into operation a used car warant[y]. It is stated that the action was tak[en] to help promote safety and to pr[o]tect motorists who buy used cars fro[m] getting cars in poor condition. T[he] waranty states among other thin[gs] that the used car being sold "is gua[r]anteed to pass Chicago safety la[ne] tests and any work necessary to cau[se] the car to pass lane tests will be pe[r]formed without charge, provided t[he] car is brought in within five days [of] date of sale." Champion Patty Confesses That Her Putter 'Is the Guy'

BY MARCIA WINN.

A short, stocky young girl with a pug nose, freckles, and a crop of short red curls wisping out from under a brown beret, executed two minutes of mathematical goosestepping around a little white ball at Westmoreland Country club yesterday afternoon.

She squinted at it, peered at it, got down on her trousered knees to inspect it and then, armed with a little steel stick, knocked the white ball three feet into a depression in the green turf. Then, for the first time in five hours and sixteen minutes, Patty Berg of Minnesota, more formally known as Patty Jane, smiled a wide, gaminish grin. She was a champion—the new women's national golf champion—at the age of 20.

The champion she had just unseated, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C., who had interspersed her entire day with casual smiles and badinage, was beside her successor before the white ball had stopped bouncing in the cup. She placed a hearty kiss upon the little redhead's cheek and pumped her hand vigorously.

Crowd Streams After Her.

The brilliantly green golf course, a moment before so tensely still, then became raucous, fervid and hysterical as Patty Berg, who had won the championship final, 6 and 5, strode off to the locker room, the 3,000 spectators streaming behind her, to see her given the championship cup, an elongated silver soup tureen, and the ex-champion a silver punch bowl.

All, that is, except two elderly men. They gazed sadly upon one another. Quoth the elder: "Well, now that this has petered out, what are we going to do next week?"

With Patty, there was no doubt about next week. She is going to enter the University of Minnesota as a freshman. And until the spring quarter, at least, she will renounce golf for history. In the spring, she hinted, she will take a vacation and do a little light golfing. It'll be tournament time again.

Doesn't Know Why She's Good.

Patty can't explain why she is a good golfer. It isn't her height, for she is only 5 feet 2 inches. Nor is she the lean, sinewy type; somehow she tucks 132 pounds around her bones. Nor are her arms long. She has to have all her sleeves shortened.

"This year," she said diffidently, in a husky, eager voice, "I've just been immensely lucky."

"Why don't you say," interposed Mrs. Opal Hill of Kansas City, who first persuaded her to play golf some six years ago, "what I told you to? That 'I play damned good golf.'"

"Well," Patty began again. "I think the essential thing in golf is to be natural . . . what do I mean? Oh, just be natural in everything you do. You know, don't pretend. If you lose, say, 'well, that gives me another chance.'

Need Good Stamina.

"You have to have good stamina. I mean, be tough enough so you don't get worn out. My health always has been good. I sleep well and eat well. Being able to concentrate is important, too. I try to concentrate as clearly as I can . . . the crowds today? . . . Oh, of course, I knew they were there. You always do, but they don't upset me.

"But what I REALLY think matters is being able to practice and play a lot. A lot of girls don't have time."

And there, according to many observers, lies the scret of Patty Berg's phenomenal success. Practice. Patty started play when she was 14 years old. Her father, Herman L. Berg, a Minneapolis grain broker was teaching her young brother, Herman Jr. And Patty wanted to learn, too. She began to play, and she has never stoped. That explains why she didn't graduate from high school until last January. She was always too busy on the golf course.

Before the match yesterday, she practiced what she now admits is the most important point in the game—putting. And the practice must have been beneficial.

10 Titles in 13 Tournaments.

"My putter was the guy," she said after her victory.

Patty has won ten of the thirteen tournaments she has entered this year. Although she denies being a child of supersition, she still thinks it remarkable that she, born on Feb. 13, should have won yesterday on the 13th hole of the afternoon's play of her 13th tournament.

"Isn't that strange?" she said in delight.

On the course, Patty, a sturdy, boyish figure in tan bird's cloth trousers [two inches too long], a tan cardigan and a white sport shirt, wore a curious expression of dogged determination. At times, after occasionally missing a putt, she looked angry but she later denied it. "O, no," solemnly, "I never lose my temper. I just try to make up the loss on the next shot. If I did lose it, instead of missing just one shot, I'd miss four or five."

Rises to Emergency.

The hardest hole of the day for Patty?

"I think the eighth [of the afternoon]" she said, wrinkling her forehead, "where I had to sink that putt to halve the hole. It's the truth," she added gaily, "my putter's the guy today."

[To make the putt, an eight footer, Patty had to step into a sand trap to make her third shot from the side of the bunker.]

And for Mrs. Page?

Mrs. Page, 31 years old, wife of a tobacco accountant, Phi Beta Kappa, daughter of a university professor, and who plays, she says, for pleasure with little time for practice, smiled gallantly, wearily, as she shed wet clothes in the locker room, preparatory to receiving her silver punch bowl.

"They're all hard," she said, "when you're playing Patty!"

OLD WESTBURY DEFEATS ROSLYN IN HANDICAP POLO

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Old Westbury, national open polo champion, overcame a ten goal handicap to defeat Roslyn, 16 to 13, today. The victory put Old Westbury in the semi-final round of the Waterbury cup tournament.

Old Westbury virtually decided the contest in the third period when five goals were scored against one for Roslyn. Ivor Balding, who substituted for the injured Cecil Smith, made two goals and Mike Phipps one, all within the first thirty seconds of the chukker. Phipps scored seven goals and Balding six, for scoring honors.

MANHATTANS AND SCHWABENS MEET IN SOCCER

The second week of the soccer season finds a full schedule listed today. The chief attraction is the first meeting of the newly formed Manhattan Brewers and Schwabens. The Manhattan Brewers last year were the Maccabees. The Brewers have several new faces in their lineup. They include F. Salcedo and R. Williamson from New York; E. Begley and W. Rogles from St. Louis, and L. Fisher goalkeeper. The match starts at 2:30 p. m. with an opening game at 12:30 in which the Schwaben Reserves meet the Sparta Seconds. The games will be played at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue.

RUNS 102 YARDS.

Monmouth, Ill., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Monmouth High school lost to East Moline today, 22 to 6, but the high point of the game was a 102 yard run by Carl Johnson, Monmouth quarterback, who intercepted an East Moline pass in his own end zone and broke loose a touchdown.

PATTY BERG WINS NATIONAL GOLF FINAL, 6 AND 5

The champion squared it at the seventh, where Miss Berg was in the rough and then in a bunker and the champion went one up for the first time with two fine woods to the eighth, Patty catching another trap. Then Mrs. Page three-putted the ninth to lose that and send them into the back nine all even again.

Patty drew a conceded birdie at the tenth, where Mrs. Page hooked to a fairway bunker. A good chip shot earned Patty the twelfth with a birdie, but the titleholder took it back on the thirteenth, where the Minnesotan was trapped. Patty then went two up on the fourteenth. They halved the remaining holes, the sixteenth in two birdies, born of fine chip shots. Mrs. Page missed a four-footer for a win at the short seventeenth.

Birdie Takes Twenty-first.

They halved the nineteenth in par and the twentieth in birdies, after which Patty took the twenty-first by dropping a seven-footer for another birdie after Estelle had holed a thirty-foot try for a par. A fine chip by Miss Berg accounted for a winning par at the twenty-fourth and Mrs. Page lost the twenty-fifth to a bunkered second. They halved the next two, Patty chipping up smartly for hers. A twelve-foot putt fell for a Berg birdie at the twenty-eighth and she was seven up after the twenty-ninth, where Mrs. Page needed four to reach the green. Patty was trapped before the thirtieth and was out short, Mrs. Page getting down in two from the back fringe for a win. The match ended on the par four, 205-yard thirty-first, where Patty holed a four-footer for a birdie half.

HOLD HORSE SHOW TODAY FOR CHARITIES

A variety of competition in 21 classes is offered in the annual horse show today at Harms road and Highway 58, under auspices of the Town and Country Equestrian association for the benefit of the Mary Crane league charities.

Morning and afternoon sessions are scheduled. In the event of rain, the show will be moved to the indoor ring of A. B. Cameron's Forest View stable adjacent to the outdoor arena.

Today's program will set a record for number of entries, with approximately 250 competing. Leading exhibitors have been attracted by the three gaited and five gaited stake championships. In addition, classes for hunters, jumpers, roadsters, hunt teams, saddle horses, pairs, and horsemanship are listed.

A field of 34 is entered in the two classes for horsemanship sponsored by the association. The largest group of entries, 23 in number, will compete in the event for children's mounts.

Keen competition is promised when Mrs. Robert B. Frank's My Nu-Joy and Little Colonel vie for awards in the three-gaited saddle classes with Lucille Lorber's Queen's Fancy, Margery Lloyd's Fancy Rex, Irving Ellis' Dare Hightone, Duke Draegmyer's Dukes-Pride, Sherle Sass' King Fontaine, Ruth Phyllis Thompson's Brilliant Lad, and Paddy Price's Midnite Star.

Rubaiyat Wins Last Roosevelt Trophy Race

Nathaniel Rubinkam's 44 foot cruising cutter Rubaiyat, sailed by his brother, Henry Rubinkam, won the final race of the Commodore George Roosevelt trophy race yesterday off Belmont harbor. It was one of the fastest triangular races of the season and was sailed in three foot seas blown up by a 20 mile wind. The former Columbia Yacht club flagship sailed the twelve mile course in 1 hours 22 minutes and 44 seconds. Its corrected time was 1:16:14.

Warrior, Victor Milliken's 8 meter racing sloop, was runner-up with a corrected time of 1:17:18, followed by Otto Dreher's Lively Lady, in 1:18:03. Warrior is in the Chicago Yacht club fleet, and Lively Lady represents the South Shore Yacht club of Milwaukee.

The first three boats to cross the finish line were Rubaiyat, Betty Bro, and Baccarat, all flying the Columbia Yacht club burgee.

Fair Wind Has Mishap.

Part of the picked fleet of racing and cruising craft in the Roosevelt trophy race carried full canvas, while other entries hoisted reefed mainsails. Fair Wind, Commodore Wells A. Lippincott's Chicago Yacht club flagship, withdrew when a halyard parted.

Dr. Hollis Potter, chairman of the committee, said last night that Lively Lady's performance throughout the series indicated it will win the Commodore Roosevelt trophy. Official point scores will not be announced until later, he said. In view of Betty Bro's consistency, Commodore Potter added, it is probable the 36 footer will win the special prize for the cruising division runner up.

Aquila Performs Well.

Aquila, winner of the Eagle class race held simultaneously by the Chicago Yacht club on the same course, represented the Eagle class in the Roosevelt trophy race. In addition to defeating the four other thirty foot racers in its division, Skipper Hubert Ellis' sloop gave a creditable performance among the larger yachts on corrected time. Leeds Mitchell Jr. sailed his Star class sloop Shimmer against Mrs. Rosalie Karas' entry, Alcor, and was leading when the latter was forced to withdraw due to a mishap. It was being sailed by Bert Williams and William Coveney. Summaries:

Duck Hunters, Apply Now for LicenseStamps

BY BOB BECKER.

Duck hunters planning to be in the marshes on the opening day of the season should not wait until the last minute to buy their 1938 migratory bird hunting stamps, says the biological survey. Last year hundreds of hunters who made a last minute rush to the postoffice to get these $1 stamps were disappointed to learn that the local supply of stamps had been sold out. This was especially true in some small towns. Lacking this duck stamp [to be attached to the state license] some of the hunters weren't able to get their opening day of shooting.

Duck hunters living in the northern zone of states, including Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, and others, have only a few days to go shopping for duck stamps since their season opens next Saturday. Here in Illinois we have until Oct. 15 to buy duck stamps. The waterfowl season in the intermediate zone opens at 7 o'clock the morning of Oct. 15.

Sale Passes 750,000.

Last year the sale of duck stamps went beyond the 750,000 mark. This figure was higher than that of any previous year since the duck stamp system was inaugurated. Ninety per cent of the proceeds, as provided by law, are used by the biological survey, with other federal funds, for acquiring, developing, and maintaining refuges for migratory birds and other wild life. Already thousands of acres have been purchased in the United States by the survey with duck stamp funds and converted into waterfowl breeding and rest grounds. Every duck hunter who buys a $1 duck stamp in the fall is doing something to help his sport.

If all ducks on the continent could nest in the United States on these new marshes the problem of improving duck shooting would be simple. But with approximately 80 per cent of all waterfowl nesting in Canada's prairie provinces it has been necessary to go across the line and do a lot of work reclaiming and establishing breeding grounds for the mallards, pintails, teal, widgeon, mudhens, canvasbacks, and other species.

Nation-wide League of Sportsmen.

The organization working in Canada is Ducks Unlimited, a nation-wide league [not for profit] of sportsmen and conservationists whose membership dollars are setting aside big Canadian breeding areas for the birds, building dams to flood lowlands where ducks may nest, and otherwise increasing the annual crop of waterfowl. Every state has a Ducks Unlimited group active to make the sport of waterfowl hunting safe for the future. Sportsmen in the central states who want to know more about this successful and unusual program to help the ducks on their Canadian breeding grounds should write Harrison Kennicott, field secretary of the Illinois Ducks Unlimited, at 231 South La Salle street.

GILL BOWLERS SET HIGH SERIES MARK OF 3,252

Shoot Games of 1,034, 1,173, and 1,045.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Every week the high series for Chicago teams is raised a few pins and before long the city's experts will be flirting with the 3,300 mark for three games, judging by the scores being made. First the Mineralites of the Randolph league posted the best record, 3,195. Then came the Pabst Blue Ribbons of the Classic league with 3,247. And now the Joseph L. Gills, new members of the North End Traveling league, have the best series to date, a lofty 3,252 count.

The Gills established their record on games of 1,034, 1,173, and 1,045, which brought three victories over the Farwals and elevated them to first place with a standing of 7 won and 2 lost.

Joe Puccinelli set the pace with 713. Ray Leick was next with 672; Bill Hargadon contributed 647; Wally Freitag hit 636, and Lloyd Strouse trailed with 584.

The last session of the league saw Kruse Stations pile up 3,047 pins while handing the champion Birk Brothers two setbacks.

Randolph League.

The champion Birk Brothers and the Burlington Routes are the only undefeated teams in Randolph league at the end of the second week. These teams added three victories to their records while the Mineralites were dropping one out of three to the Union Printers and the Joseph Butlers were being swamped by the Budweisers. Eddie Zajac of the Butlers had high series of 672.

On South Side Alleys.

An interesting race is developing in the South End Traveling league in which Southwest, Highland, and Chicago Recreation teams are tied for first place at 5 won and 1 lost. Jim Garvey tops the individuals by virtue of a 702 series. . . . The Bleeker Brothers were the hottest of the Bruck Major leaguers with a 3,025 series. High individuals were Wally Barman, 650; Bill Marshall, 634; Fred Moll, 628; Bill Harber, 627; Harry Heermans, 626, and Roy Wagner, 620. . . . The Svendsen Decorators are now sole occupants of first place in the Stevenson Recreation Major league. They have won 10 of their 12 games. Bill Lenzen led the individuals with 682 at the last session. Next were Harry Sherman, 680; P. Biehl, 675; Jack Frye, 662; Art Myers, 635, and George Foster, 633.

Windy City Major League.

Quality Wet Wash shot only 2,792, but that total was good for three victories over the Pickwick Cameras in the Windy City Major league. As a result, the Quality Wet Wash five is the only undefeated team. The Whitecaps won three games from G. & W. Five Star and are in second place with a record of 5 won and 1 lost. Selvig of the Kralovecs was high individual with 694. Russell of the Soper Brothers and Pinc of the Budweisers were second with 661.

On North Side Alleys.

The first 3,000 series for the Gold Coast Major league was hung up when the Triangle Shirts collected games of 988, 1,054, and 1,029 for 3,071. Joe Heinreich contributed 720 and his brother, Frank, helped with 655. In one of the closest matches the Joseph L. Gills took two out of three from the Budweisers, their respective totals being 2,983 and 2,929. Joe Sinke had 647, Joe Puccinelli 631, and Lloyd Strouse 620 for the Gills. George Calder, 649, and Art Temple, 633, were high for the Budweisers. . . . Samuelson's Kids are out in front with 8 victories and 1 defeat in the Samuelson Major league. Ray Berg is doing the best work for the youngsters with a 201 average. Ed Mahannah's 204 is high for the league and one reason why the Irving Palm Taverns, recent junior league graduates, are tied for second place with the Wallace Coals, last season's runners-up. Leading individuals at the last session were: Lou Baumet, 627; Dan White, 613; Ed Mahannah, 603, and Harry Ledene Jr., 603.

Classic League.

The Power House Candy Bars are in first place with 8 won and 4 lost in the Sunday division of the Classic league. The Pabst Blue Ribbons, Baby Ruth Candies, and Ambrosia Beers are tied for second with 7 won and 5 lost. The Pabsts' 3,247 series is high thus far. Les Fuller leads the individuals with a 221 average.

In the Wednesday division the Monarchs lead with 9 won and none lost. The Baby Ruths and Pabsts are tied for second with 7 and 2.

Tonight the league will bowl in the Gold Coast Recreation, 1213 North Clark street.

GORDON SUFFERS LEG FRACTURE IN ALL-STAR GAME

X-ray pictures yesterday revealed Lou Gordon, veteran Chicago Bear tackle, suffered the fracture of his right leg in the Negro All-Star game in Soldiers' field Friday night. The fracture was just below the knee and will keep the former University of Illinois star out until mid-November. Gordon received the injury in the second quarter when he was blocked out of a play by Don Simmons, former Iowa player and brother of Oze Simmons, who was carrying the ball at the time.

ALLEGHANY HAS 29 MILLION LOSS ON STOCK SALES

Securities Are Sold to Chesapeake & Ohio.

The Alleghany corporation, top holding company in the former Van Sweringen railroad empire, had a loss of $29,612,125 from the sale of securities in the first six months of this year. This was disclosed in the company's earnings statement, released yesterday.

The loss on securities sales was in addition to a consolidated net loss after all charges of $441,897. This compared with a net loss of $65,900 in the first half of 1937.

Sells Stock Under Option.

The heavy loss on securities transactions resulted from sales of stock under option agreements to the Chesapeake and Ohio railway.

The C. & O. on Jan. 29 exercised its option to buy 215,000 common shares of the Erie railroad and 167,300 common shares of the Nickel Plate railroad. The option price for the two blocks was $5,065,475, compared with an aggregate cost to Alleghany of $34,677,600.

Shows Loss on Securities.

Alleghany's securities held as investments on June 30 had an indicated market value of $59,542,106, compared with market value of $64,201,417 on Dec. 31, 1937. Cost of the securities was $171,730,170. Securities of the Missouri Pacific railroad, carried at a cost figure of $79,690,013, had an indicated market value of $1,506,182 on June 30.

R. G. Le Tourneau, Inc., maker of construction machinery, reported a July profit of $180,946, compared with $232,824 in July, 1937. For the first seven months of the year the company had net profit of $853,459, or $1.90 a common share. This compared with $934,918, or $2.08 a share, in the first seven months of 1937.

RALLY IN BONDS FAILS TO REGAIN EARLIER LOSSES

New York, Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Bonds rallied moderately near the close today after early declines. Most of the list finished slightly lower despite the late upturn.

Pressure on foreign loans eased as a result of more hopeful cable news from Europe. German and Italian government obligations were lower.

United States governments showed final losses ranging from 2-32ds to 14-32ds on small offerings.

Rail liens were hard hit in the early trading and failed to take much part in the rally. Southern Pacific 4½s of '68 finished 3½ points lower at 42. Northern Pacific 4s lost 1¼ to 77¼, and Great Northern 4s of '46 were off 1 at 87. Utilities were mixed at the close.

Investors' Guide

Methods Change.

Until the last few years almost all borrowing by corporations in the United States was done through public sales of bonds or debentures. They were usually sold in small lots throughout the country.

You probably bought some of them. Your neighbor did. You at least had an opportunity to buy them if you wanted to and had the money.

The corporation needing money for expansion of its business or for paying off a maturing bond issue almost always followed a set formula in getting the money. Stockholders would approve a new bond issue. The company would sell the entire issue to an investment house or group of investment houses. These houses would then distribute the bonds among brokers for direct sale to the public.

Many bonds are still being sold in this way. An increasing proportion of corporate borrowing, however, is now being done in an entirely different manner. Nearly a third of all such borrowings during the first half of this year was done without giving the small investor any opportunity to take part in it.

Instead of offering securities for sale to the public the companies have arranged the loans privately. The persons lending the money were not you and your neighbor but insurance companies, trust companies, and other large institutional investors. Many of the most desirable securities have been sold in this way. You had no opportunity to bid for them, and did not even know the loan was being negotiated until you read the announcement of its completion.

What has caused this change? There are several contributing causes. One is that the banks and insurance companies have had difficulty in finding suitable places to invest idle money. They are going out in search of borrowers.

Another, and perhaps a greater cause, is the expense, delay, and red tape involved in getting a new issue of securities registered and approved by the securities and exchange commission. Since the securities act of 1933 became effective, it is estimated that almost one and one-half billion dollars have been borrowed by corporations through privately arranged loans.

Formerly, most companies found it more convenient to sell a new batch of securities to an investment house and let it shoulder the burden of selling to the public. The added problem of getting SEC approval has now made it simpler in many cases for them to deal directly with large investors.

WEEK'S PRICES OF COMMODITIES LITTLE CHANGED

Uncertainty Is Caused by European Situation.

Commodity futures, influenced by the European situation, moved uncertainly last week, but closed with only small net changes. Closing lower were copper, lead, tin, cottonseed oil, and cocoa. Small gains were made by hides, rubber, zinc, and silk contracts.

Export copper slumped after advancing to the week's peak of 10.65 cents a pound on heavy foreign buying. Prices yesterday ranged from 10.20 to 10.30 cents, compared with 10.50 cents a week earlier.

Increased domestic demand for copper was reflected in the boost of ⅛ cent a pound to 10⅛ cents in the spot price. Use of copper in this country in August increased 4,041 tons over July to 52,112 tons.

Two Mines Reopened.

Reflecting the pickup in copper buying, Anaconda Copper Mining company yesterday announced the opening of its Belmont and Steward mines at Butte, Mont., bringing reëmployment of about 1,400 men. The mines were closed in May in the face of small consumption and rising copper stocks.

Copper futures lost 0.30 cent a pound during the week. Lead contracts were off 0.03 to 0.04 cent. Spot lead, however, was marked up 0.10 cent a pound to 4.95 cents, East St. Louis. A like markup in zinc to 4.95 cents was made. Zinc futures gained 0.10 cent a pound. Tin was off ¼ cent in the spot market and lost 0.15 to 0.50 cent in futures trading.

Hides, cottonseed oil, and wool tops were the only futures traded yesterday. Hides futures at New York, closing unchanged to 0.08 cent higher yesterday, were up 0.20 to 0.35 cent from the preceding Saturday. On the Chicago Mercantile exchange hides were 0.10 cent higher to 0.05 cent lower for the week.

Rubber Contracts React.

Rubber contracts moved up ½ cent a pound early in the week, but turned downward to finish at losses of 0.05 to 0.07 cent. The spot price of smoked ribbed rubber sheets stood yesterday at 16.08 cents, same as on the preceding Saturday.

Rio coffee gained 0.07 to 0.08 cent a pound, and Santos contracts moved up 0.10 to 0.13 cent. Cocoa, however, eased 0.05 to 0.17 cent a pound.

WHAT'S WRONG with this picture?

TRYING to use a carpet sweeper without the handle is about as laborious as trying to find an apartment without the aid of Tribune rental columns.

Because the Tribune want ad section is Chicago's most convenient and comprehensive directory of apartment values, thousands of Chicago families make it the mainstay of their apartment-hunting activities every time they move.

The greater the selection, the greater your opportunity to get what you want in an apartment. Because the Tribune prints more apartments to rent want advertising than all other Chicago newspapers combined, your best chance to get the one apartment you want lies through regular reading of Tribune rental want ads.

Why not take advantage of Chicago's most convenient apartment guide—the Tribune want ad section. Turn to the rental want ads now.

Before starting your apartment hunt, spend a few minutes making up a list of the rental offers in the Tribune which interest you most.

This will save you time and energy because you can restrict your search to those apartments which you know in advance have the best chance of suiting you.

Rental Agents! Apartment Owners!

Low-cost Tribune want ads can help you rent your apartments. Every day of the week far more families in Chicago and suburbs read the Tribune than read any other Chicago newspaper.

If your name is in the phone book, you can charge your Tribune want ad. Phone Superior 0100—Want Ad-Viser—or ask to have a Tribune representative call on you.

Tribune Rental Want Ads Have This Added Convenience

Tribune rental want ads are listed by location in city or suburb and by number of rooms. Thus, if you know that you want to live on the South side, for instance, and that you require a minimum of four rooms, you turn immediately to the columns headed "To Rent—Apartments—South" and then consult the offerings under the subheading "Four, Five, Six Rooms and Larger". Then all you have to do is to make up a list of the offerings which appeal most to you and then inspect these at your leisure.

STOCKS SLUMP, THEN RALLY ON EUROPEAN NEWS

Closing Prices Only Slightly Lower.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 24.—Stocks slumped in the early trading today but rallied sharply in the last hour. Closing prices were no worse than irregularly lower. Leading issues that had dropped as much as 4 points made up most of the declines and some even closed higher.

At one time in the second hour the market rose above yesterday's final levels. Late selling, however, wiped out most of the gains. At the final bell the industrial average was down a little more than a point, and utilities and rails both showed slight losses.

Of the 702 issues that changed hands 427 incurred losses, 132 advanced, and 142 showed no change.

Veer to European News.

Changing headlines on the European situation determined the course of stocks. Alarming overnight news caused the early decline.

Prices steadied as the market turned into the second hour. Hopes were raised that the final offer made by Chancellor Hitler to Prime Minister Chamberlain would lead to peace negotiations. Observers held this to be the prime consideration in the rally.

International finance centered its attention on the New York Stock exchange. Both the Paris and London markets were closed, as is usual on Saturday. The only major European market to transact business was in Amsterdam, where prices crumbled.

Volume on the down side was heavy. Blocks of 1,000 to 4,000 shares were common. The high speed ticker quickly fell behind floor transactions as the brisk trading continued.

First Hour Volume Heavy.

Volume for the first hour amounted to 480,000 shares, the largest in more than a week. In the two hours it amounted to 800,000 shares, the largest for a short session in seven weeks.

Motors and steel issues bore the brunt of the early attack. Chrysler was off more than 3 points and General Motors was 2¼ points lower. United States Steel and Bethlehem showed declines of 2 and 3 points. Chrysler snapped back to close at 67⅝, off only ¼. At one time it touched 68, where it actually had a slight gain. General Motors, too, went above yesterday's closing level before slipping back to 43, off ¼.

United States Steel came from its low of 51⅞ to 54⅝ and closed at 54½, up ¼. Bethlehem rallied 3 points from its worst mark and finished only a fraction lower.

Metal Stocks Recover.

Other groups followed the examples of the leaders. Metal stocks, which were weak at the opening, closed higher. Kennecott had a profit of 1½ points and American Smelting moved up a fraction.

Electrical equipments were featured by Westinghouse. This stock dropped to 95 before bounding back to 99. It closed at 98, where it showed a gain of 1¼ points. General Electric had a fractional gain.

Standard Oil of New Jersey, one of the most active stocks in the first hour, lost a fraction. This issue was more than thirtyfive minutes late in opening, indicating some difficulty in arranging opening sales. Other stocks in the petroleum group also lost fractions.

Carrier shares were sold freely in the first hour but came back with the rest of the market finish slightly lower.

QUAKER OATS CO. DRAFTS EMPLOYE PENSION PLAN

The Quaker Oats company yesterday called a special meeting of stockholders for Oct. 1 to vote on a retirement annuity plan for employés and officers. The plan, if approved, would be effective retroactively as of Sept. 1, provided that 75 per cent of the employés participate.

The annuity plan would be jointly underwritten by the Prudential Life Insurance company and the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. Employes who are now paying federal social security taxes would be required to pay 2.5 per cent of earnings up to $3,000 annual wages, 4 per cent on the next $7,000, and 2.5 per cent on all compensation over $10,000.

The company would pay the rest of the cost of the annuities, estimated at a little over 50 per cent. The normal retirement date under the plan would be the first of the month following the sixty-fifth birthday for men and the sixtieth birthday for women employés.

BRITISH EXPORTS IN AUGUST SET TWO YEAR LOW

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—British exports of £36,300,000 [$181,500,000 in August reached the lowest level in twenty-four months, the commerce department reports. Imports of £74,100,000 [$160,500,000] were only slightly below the monthly average for the year.

During the first eight months of the current year imports totaled £618,800,000 [$3,094,000,000] as compared with £656,800,000 [$3,284,000,000] in the same period last year, while exports totaled £306,900,000 [$1,524,500,000], compared with £341,400,000 [$1,707,000,000] in the comparable 1937 period.

Reveal Rail Strike Vote Tomorrow

Railway union officials will meet in Chicago tomorrow to announce the results of the nation-wide strike vote among 929,000 workers arising from the wage dispute. The balloting is expected to show a large majority in favor of authorizing union heads to call a strike.

The strike date will probably be set for Oct. 1, but this does not mean a walkout will take place. The purpose of calling the strike is to force the appointment by President Roosevelt of a fact finding commission to investigate the wage argument. This appointment, under the law, will suspend for sixty days the effectiveness of the 15 per cent wage cut which railroad managements ordered for Oct. 1. Appointment of the commission also prevents a strike for sixty days. The President is expected to name the commission on Tuesday.

Strike Vote Ordered Aug. 31.

A strike vote was ordered by the unions on Aug. 31 when efforts to mediate the wage dispute failed. The wage cut was originally scheduled for July 1, but was delayed until Oct. 1 by negotiations for a settlement.

Under the machinery to settle rail wage disputes as set up by the railway labor act of 1926, the President can name a fact finding commission only when a threat to the interruption of interstate commerce exists. An announced strike is such a threat.

The commission will consist of three or five men representing the public and not connected with the railroads. It will have thirty days in which to study the dispute and recommend a method for settlement. Unions and managements then have thirty more days in which to study the recommendation.

May Reach Agreement.

Neither a wage cut nor a strike can take effect before Dec. 1, at the expiration of the two thirty-day periods. In the meantime an agreement may be reached on the basis of the commission's report and under pressure of public opinion.

Labor unions do not expect to finish counting of ballots until late tomorrow. Because of discord between the leaders, they have been divided into two different groups. Each group has been conducting its balloting independently. One consists of eighteen unions represented by the Railway Labor Executives' association, of which George M. Harrison is chairman. These will meet at the Morrison hotel. The other group is the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, headed by A. F. Whitney. It will meet at the Stevens hotel.

Unions Vote Separately.

Under the balloting system, each union had charge of taking its own vote. Each worker received a prepared "official strike ballot," reviewing the negotiations with managements under which no agreement was reached. Workers voted by marking an X either "for strike" or "against strike." Workers were required to sign their ballots.

Workers turned their ballots over to the chairmen of their local lodges. Officials of Harrison's group said that the ballots were not sealed. Whitney's brotherhood, however, had each worker put his ballot in a sealed envelope, officials said. In both instances local chairmen forwarded the ballots to the general chairmen. Each union has a general chairman on each railroad.

General chairmen sent the ballots to their union heads, who have charge of counting the votes. Ballots of the Whitney group were not opened until they reached the union headquarters.

General Chairmen to Attend.

Tomorrow's meetings will be attended by the general chairmen of the unions. More than 1,000 are expected in Harrison's group and about 100 in Whitney's union.

If the strike is favored, as expected, and the fact finding commission is appointed, the wage negotiations will be in their final stage. The first step after the announcement of the proposed wage cut was holding of conferences between labor and management. These brought no agreement, and were ended on Aug. 4. Then the national mediation board, headed by Dr. William Leiserman, tried to bring a settlement, but announced on Aug. 31 that its efforts had failed.

The board tried to get the managements and labor to submit the dispute to arbitration, an optional means used when both sides agree to it. The managements were willing, but labor refused to arbitrate.

CARNEGIE STEEL GIVES PLANT TO CITIZENS TO CUT UNEMPLOYMENT

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—[U. P.]—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation completed arragements today to donate its obsolete Sabraton works, at Morgantown, W. Va., to the citizens of the community. It was an effort to lessen unemployment resulting from the closing of the plant in 1934.

As the result of negotiations between Carnegie, largest operating subsidiary of United States Steel corporation, and the Morgantown Chamber of Commerce, the Sabraton property will be deeded as an outright gift to a nonprofit corporation to be known as the Morgantown Community Association, Inc.

The new association will attempt to find manufacturers to set up business on the Sabraton site, where 800 to 1,000 men formerly were employed. The property comprises approximately thirty acres with an assessed value of $28,600. Machinery was removed from the buildings. The plant was constructed in 1904 and was used until 1934.

NEW JERSEY'S PIONEER RAIL DROPS SERVICE

Bordentown, N. J., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Passenger train service was permanently suspended today for lack of revenue on New Jersey's pioneer stretch of railroad, the Amboy division of the Pennsylvania system. The division includes trackage between Bordentown and Jamesburg.

More than a century ago the British made engine, "John Bull," had its trial run at Bordentown on the first trackage laid in New Jersey. This waterfront town became a bustling terminus on the Delaware for trains and later canal freight shipments.

Bankers of the then proposed Delaware and Raritan barge canal fought the railroad as a detriment to their cross state venture. After rejection of the canal proposal by federal engineers, a state charter was sought by the group and finally obtained by compromise. The canal and railroad received simultaneous franchise.

U. S. Survey Lauds Swede's Labor Peace

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's commission on labor conditions abroad reported today that in Sweden, as in England, widespread collective bargaining and mutual respect between employer and worker had reduced labor difficulties to a minimum.

Referring to the situation found by the commission in both countries, Mr. Roosevelt said in a public statement: "Employers generally have fully accepted a program of collective bargaining; there is extensive independent organization of both groups and all concerned live up to the rules of the game, participating with restraint and mutual respect in the processes of collective bargaining."

Industry-Wide Basis.

In reporting on Sweden the commission emphasized, as it did in the case of Great Britain, that collective bargaining there is conducted, generally, on an industry-wide basis, between strong unions and strongly organized groups of employers.

"Originally many constituent unions of the National confederation [of trade unions] were craft unions," the commission said.

"Since 1909 the confederation has frequently expressed a preference for organization and collective bargaining on an industry basis and most of the constituent unions today are of the industrial type.

"Each of these carries on collective bargaining for all the workers in its own industry. However, craft unions frequently negotiate jointly as a group or federation with the employers organization in their industries.

Varies in Occupation.

"The degree of organization varies in different occupations. It is higher in industry, handicrafts, commerce, and communications and lower in agriculture and forestry. Among manual workers in the manufacturing industries it is estimated to be approximately 90 per cent."

The employers are strongly organized also, the report said, and their Swedish employers federation represents thirty-seven associations of employers in particular industries which have employés totaling 400,000. No member may engage in a strike or lockout opposed by the federation. On the other hand the federation has power to order a lockout, and every member in the affected industry is bound to obey the order "on pain of damages."

BANK CLEARINGS VOLUME BELOW WEEK, YEAR AGO

Bank clearings in Chicago last week were less than in the preceding week and in the corresponding 1937 week. The Chicago Clearing House association reported the volume was $280,300,000. It was $304,400,000 a week earlier and $313,000,000 a year ago. The clearings follow:

GERMAN ACTION FOUND THREAT TO U. S. TRADE

Opens Way for Drive in Latin-America.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Germany's acquisition of Sudentenland of Czechoslovakia will give her stronger weapons with which to fight the United States economically in Latin America, experts here said today.

The Germans will have more manufactured articles to sell Latin America, they explained, and more capacity to absorb the raw materials of the western hemisphere. The year 1939 consequently will be marked, they predicted, by increased economic conflict between Germany and the United States in this hemisphere.

Expected to Take Industries.

If the German-Sudeten merger goes through in one form or another, it is expected that Germany will take over the glassware manufacturing plants of the Sudetens, their lether glove plants, and some textile manufacturing concerns, including export trade in cotton knit gloves.

These industries will give Hitler a broadened list of salable articles to offer the countries of Latin America in return for their raw materials. Moreover, the addition of two to three million persons to the German population, an accretion composed of a manufacturing people who must rely on imports for much of their foodstuffs and raw materials, will provide a larger market for Latin American products.

Gain in 1939 Forecast.

Experts estimate that Germany's share of the Latin American trade in 1938 will run to 14 to 14½ per cent. The United States will probably retain her 1937 share of about 34.7 per cent, they said. In 1939, however, Germany's share of Latin American commerce will show an appreciable increase, it was said.

Whether this will be at the expense of the United States or of other countries remains to be seen. American officials are determined that it will not be at the expense of this country—if they can help it.

NEW STATE BANK WILL OPEN SOON IN ROGERS PARK

A new bank, to be known as the Rogers Park State bank, will be opened shortly. Edwin McNeal, chairman of the organization committee, announced yesterday that it will be located at 7001 North Clark street, in the building formerly occupied by the old Phillip State bank.

The bank will have capital stock of $200,000, reserves of $25,000, and surplus of $25,000. About 40 per cent of the subscriptions have been paid in since collections started early this month, McNeal said. Although no opening date was announced, it is expected to be about Oct. 15.

McNeal is slated to become chairman of the board of the bank. He is a member of McNeal & Co., La Salle street investment house. The bank's presidency has not been decided.

The permit for the bank from State Auditor Edward J. Barrett is the first Illinois state bank permit issued since the bank moratorium in 1933, McNeal said.

CHICAGO AREA STEEL MILLS TO REDUCE OUTPUT

Steel ingot production will decline this week in the Chicago district, preliminary mill schedules indicated yesterday. Output at Pittsburgh will be higher.

Chicago steelmakers will begin operations tomorrow at about 41.3 per cent of theoretical capacity. This represents a cut of 3½ points from last week's beginning rate. It will still be 1.4 points higher than the 39.9 per cent operations four weeks ago.

Production is scheduled to begin at 38.2 per cent in the Pittsburgh district, according to a report by Dow, Jones & Co. Last week's schedule was 36 per cent of capacity, but this was increased later in the week to about 38 per cent.

Europe Money Values Dip to Low for Years

The currencies of Great Britain, France, and other European countries sank in value in international exchange transactions yesterday. Gold and American currency were in big demand as a result of the latest turn of events in Europe.

Nearly all important European currencies slumped to the lowest level in several years. The hardest hit was the British pound, which fell to the lowest quotation since March 23, 1935. It was quoted at the end of the day in New York at $4.78, or 1⅜ cents below Friday's price. It had fallen sharply on dealings in foreign markets before the opening of New York trading.

Franc at 2.68 cents.

The quotation on French francs was reduced to 2.68 cents from 2.68625 cents on Friday. The artificially rigged German mark slipped 0.02 cent to 39.94 cents, the lowest figure at which it has been quoted this year. Normally the mark fluctuates little in relation to other currencies because of the rigid control under which it is held.

The gold price in London was raised 6 pence [about 12 cents] to 145 shillings an ounce. This was equivalent to $34.66. The price quoted by London brokers was the highest [in terms of British currency] since March 6, 1935. Because American currency advanced in relation to the pound the London gold price was actually lower in terms of dollars than on the preceding day. At Friday's prevailing dollar-pound ratio the London price was equivalent to $34.77 an ounce.

Gold Dealings Large.

Officially recorded gold transactions in London were £861,000 [about $4,116,000], the largest for a Saturday in a year. Transactions Friday amounted to £679,000 [about $3,263,000].

More foreign gold reached New York. Imports consisted of $8,569,000 from England, consigned to three commercial banks in New York, and $258,000 from Holland, sent direct to the federal reserve bank. In addition to these arrivals the reserve bank reported engagements of an additional $5,521,000 in England and $2,619,000 in Canada for shipment to this country.

Gold imports for the week, including shipments received yesterday, totaled $88,237,000, the largest for any week since Oct. 6, 1936. In the last two months imports have amounted to more than a half billion dollars.

MAIN MARKETS WILL GO BACK TO STANDARD TIME

Principal securities and commodity markets will follow the clock back to standard time tomorrow. Hours of trading will begin and close one hour later in most markets in communities which have not observed daylight saving time, to conform with New York and Chicago markets which go back to standard time.

Financial exchanges in England, France, and Holland will continue on summer time until Oct. 2. Until they return to Greenwich time, the spread between their closing hours and the opening of New York markets will be widened by one hour.

NEW STUDEBAKER AUTO HAS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

3 Major Mechanical Advancements.

Details of the Studebaker corporation's new 1939 line of automobiles were announced yesterday. In addition to changes in styling and other innovations, three major mechanical advancements have been made. These are a new type of overdrive, a new heating and air treating system, and a remote control gear shifting mechanism.

The new overdrive eliminates the necessity of slowing down before shifting to the overdrive gear. The transmission control lever is on the steering post. The lever positions are the conventional ones, except that the "H" shift design has been turned on its side.

Air Filtered and Heated.

The heating, air filtering, and ventilating unit is beneath the front floor pan. It filters dust from the air, forces the air through a heater core, and discharges it beneath the front seat. Windows may be kept tightly closed in dust or rain storms without interfering with the ventilating system.

The front wheel suspension has been further improved and other changes made to increase comfort. New streamlining effects have eliminated the usual radiator front. Air is admitted to the cooling system through grids set low between the head lamps. The lamps are set in the fenders.

Offered in Two Lines.

The 1939 Studebakers will be offered in two lines, the State President and the State Commander. The wheelbase of the State President is 122 inches and that of the State Commander is 116.5 inches.

The lines include four door sedans, club sedans, coupes, and convertibles.

New England Storm Brings Large Plate Glass Orders

Toledo, O., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company will sell several million dollars' worth of plate glass in the New England storm stricken area. Twelve carloads left the Toledo plant last night and other shipments are being made from the Charleston and Shreveport plants. An official of the company said today that orders already received will keep the plate and window glass divisions operating at capacity for about a week.

INDUSTRY GETS AUTUMN SPIRIT; MOVES BRISKLY

Gains Outweigh Dip in Some Lines.

The briskness of autumn surged through some phases of industry and trade last week. Some lines showed declines, however. Retail trade dwindled, cotton manufacturing slumped. New financing, representing the flow of fresh blood into enterprise, shrank almost to nothing.

Gains outweighed the losses as a whole, however, and the net result was a forward movement in the latest weekly period for which figures were available.

Steel and power production rose to new peak levels for the year. Railroad freight loadings were in the largest volume in ten months. Automobile output gained slightly, with the path apparently cleared for rapid expansion. Bank clearings expanded.

Heavy Building Active.

Engineering construction awards were the highest since June, 1937, although residential building made no progress.

The output of the steel mills was estimated at 47.3 per cent of capacity. In the preceding week the rate was 45.3 per cent.

Electric power production in the week ended Sept. 17 was 2,214,775,000 kilowatt hours, up 8.1 per cent from the preceding week. The gain was more than normal for this season of year. The output was only 2.9 per cent less than a year earlier.

American and Canadian factories built 20,390 automobiles and trucks last week, Ward's Automotive Reports said. In the preceding week 16,100 units left the assembly lines. Volume a year earlier was 28,030 units. Ward's said ten manufacturers are producing 1939 models. Inventories of some makes were said to be at the vanishing point.

Buick Steps Up Production.

The Buick division of the General Motors corporation announced it is increasing output of 1939 models beyond its original intention. The company's pay roll is going up.

Railroad freight loadings in the week ended Sept. 17 totaled 660,142 cars. This was a gain of 16 per cent

WHEAT CLIMBS, THEN RELAPSES ON WAR EVENTS

Prices Swing Widely in Heavy Trading.

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

Closing prices on the December delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Yr. ago.
Wheat	$ .66⅛	$ .65¼	$1.05⅝
Corn	.51	.49⅞	.65
Oats	.26⅛	.25⅝	.31
Rye	.45⅛	.44⅝	.79¾
Soy beans	.77¼	.76¼	.92

A brief buying panic yesterday lifted wheat prices 4 to 5 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade and other American markets. The rise in prices occurred immediately after the opening of trading. The buying soon subsided and prices settled back near the level of the preceding day. Final quotations in Chicago were ⅞ cent a bushel above Friday.

Wheat for delivery in December sold at the highest price since Aug. 5 in the first rush of buying here. Brokers reported extremely heavy trading in the first thirty minutes of trading. Thereafter activity rapidly dwindled.

Early Rise Near Limit.

The early price advance here, amounting to 4 cents a bushel, was within a cent of the maximum rise permitted under the rules of the exchange. In Minneapolis and Winnipeg prices advanced the full five cent limit on the early rise.

The upturn in the American and Canadian markets was preceded by sensational price advances in foreign markets. Wheat futures in the Liverpool market rose 8 cents a bushel. In Rotterdam prices were up 4 to 7 cents. The Buenos Aires market closed 2¼ to 2½ cents higher.

Chicago traders interpreted the foreign market rise as an indication that the danger of war in Europe was greater than earlier news dispatches indicated.

Follow Stock Market Trend.

When the stock market failed to show extreme panic a more cautious attitude was taken by grain traders.

Europe showed alarm yesterday regarding future requirements of wheat. Purchases of North American cash grain were estimated at 3,000,000 bushels or more. Included in the sales were 2,000,000 bushels of American wheat.

Export sales of North American cash wheat during the last three days are estimated as high as 10,000,000 bushels.

Corn was largely influenced by the action of wheat, advancing 3 cents early, but reacting later to close 1⅛ cents higher.

Oats and rye futures closed major fractions of a cent higher. Soy beans futures closed with net gains of 1 to 1¾ cents a bushel.

ANALYZE WORLD WHEAT NEEDS IN EVENT OF WAR

Bulk of Surplus Held in Western Hemisphere.

War threats in Europe and reports that a number of large importing countries have been large buyers of North America cash wheat have caused traders to give attention to the distribution of the world's surplus grain.

Official estimates on the world's exportable surplus of 923,000,000 bushels of wheat show that the bulk of the available supply is concentrated in the United States, Canada, Argentina and Australia. The four countries are estimated to have a surplus of 783,000,000 bushels after allowing for normal domestic requirements and for a normal carryover at the end of the 1938-'39 season.

World's Needs Estimated.

World import requirements of wheat for the 1938-'39 season are generally estimated at 550,000,000 bushels. Traders yesterday said that in the event of war shipments from Black sea ports probably would cease. This would leave importing countries largely dependent for supplies on North America for several months. The southern hemisphere's new crops will not be available for shipment until December.

Distribution of the bulk of the world's surplus wheat in millions of bushels, follows:

	Supplies.	*Requirements.	Surplus.
United States	1,100	850	250
Canada	383	140	243
Argentina	290	115	175
Australia	195	80	115

*Includes allowance for normal carryover at end of season.

Announce Exports Under Subsidy.

The Agricultural Adjustment administration announced yesterday 2,841,770 bushels of wheat had been exported under the administration's new export subsidy program. The exports covered the period up to Sept. 15. The AAA also said the Surplus Commodities corporation had purchased 8,743,591 bushels of wheat up to that date.

The government, the AAA disclosed, had taken a loss of about 11 cents a bushel on the wheat sold to exporters—a total of $312,595.

Secretary Wallace, in announcing the export subsidy policy several weeks ago, said this country hoped to dispose of 100,000,000 bushels abroad.

The AAA said that in addition to wheat exports, 145,220 barrels of flour had been exported under the flour subsidy program. The subsidy involved amounted to $58,088.

BANKRUPT ACTION IS FILED AGAINST REALTY TRUST

Seven Bondholders Ask Reorganization.

An involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed yesterday in the federal District court against the Realty Investors trust. The action was filed by seven bondholders who alleged the trust was unable to pay maturing obligations. The trust's offices are at 3 North La Salle street.

The petition, filed under the new Chandler act which went into effect Thursday, asked a reorganization and the appointment of a trustee. The case is the first involving a large amount that has been filed here under the Chandler act. This act is a revision of the federal bankruptcy law. It gives the Securities and Exchange commission power to intervene in all reorganizations involving $3,000,000 or more.

Has 197 Bond Issues.

Realty Investors trust has acquired 197 different issues of defaulted first mortgage real estate bonds totaling $12,500,000 since it was organized in 1930, the petition said. The trust owns title to about 162 properties, but at one time held full title to 193, it said. The trustee for Realty Investors ist he American National Bank and Trust company, Chicago.

Because of tax delinquencies on the various properties, the petition said, "cash distributions to shareholders of Realty Investors trust by way of dividends is precluded." Because of the inability of the trust to make such distributions to shareholders, except on the sale of properties, there is inevitable dissatisfaction on the part of the shareholders, it said.

Says Payments Could Be Made.

"In the past this has resulted in litigation and there is likelihood of recurrences of such litigation," the petition said. "If the properties were freed from the present management so that income from each property could be applied solely to the needs of that property, and loans made, they readily could dispose of tax arrearages. Payment of dividends could be started almost immediately."

The petitioners contended that because of the "depressed state" of the real estate market it is inadvisable to sell any of the building properties. There is no certainty, they said, that monthly payments on delinquent taxes can be continued.

The petition listed the following among liabilities as of April 1, 1938: real estate taxes and penalties, $927,-[illegible]59; accrued dividends, $2,482,136; face amount of bonds outstanding, $5,525,-[illegible]29.

Other Litigation Pending.

Attention was called in the suit to pending litigation in the Circuit court of Cook county asking interpretation of certain trust provisions and amendments, and charging fraud, waste, and mismanagement. That litigation, the petition said, was likely to be long, with attendant delay of steps to protect bond and certificate holders. It said the action in the federal court would make the Cook county Circuit court litigation unnecessary.

The bondholders' plea was assigned to federal Judge John P. Barnes. The law firm of Moses, Kennedy, Stein & Bachrach filed the petition.

Realty Investors Trust was organized as a common law trust to act in the interests of holders of certain issues of first mortgage bonds underwritten by Baer, Eisendrath & Co., Chicago. One of its purposes was to liquidate the properties involved in the defaulted issues.

Its director sare E. J. Felsenthal, Charles Levie, Sam H. Smith, Martin J. Thornton, Joseph L. Eisendrath, and Clarence L. Coleman Jr.

CHICAGO STOCKS EASE SLIGHTLY; HIGHER IN WEEK

Chicago stocks closed fractionally lower yesterday. The list showed a small gain for the week, however. THE TRIBUNE average of 20 stocks closed at 9.94, up 0.37 for the week and off .23 for the day.

Zenith Radio, most active stock yesterday, lost ½ to finish at 18¼. Noudaillte Hershey eased ¼ at 14⅝. Marshall Field closed at 10½, down [illegible]. Bendix Aviation declined ¼ to [illegible]¼. Commonwealth Edison slipped [illegible] to 24⅝.

Sixty-three of the eighty-two issues traded yesterday declined, seven advanced, and twelve were unchanged. Turnover of 22,000 shares, compared with 17,700 on the preceding Saturday.

Volume last week was 128,900 shares, against 182,000 in the preceding week and 225,000 in the corresponding 1937 week. The figures do not include Commonwealth Edison rights traded.

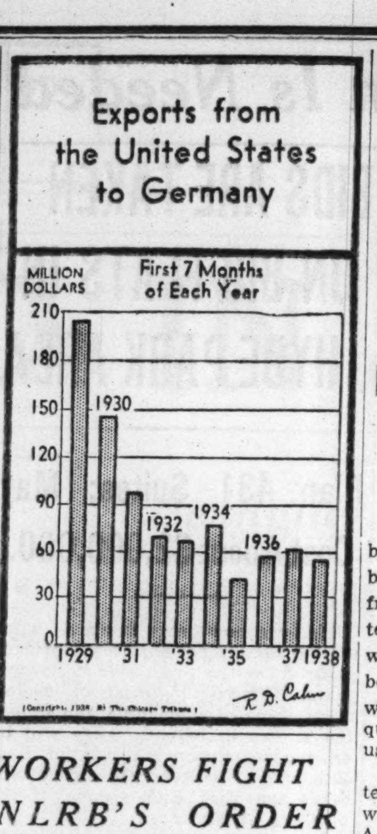
Everyday Economics

Pork Eaters.

The average American and the average Britisher eat about the same amount of meat in a year. Figures compiled by the Institute of American Meat Packers give the per capita consumption of meat [including lard] in the United States for 1937 at 135 pounds. The comparable figure for Great Britain was 133 pounds.

Although there is little difference in total consumption per person, there is a good deal of difference in eating habits. Americans eat more pork but less lamb and mutton than Britishers. Consumption of pork per capita in this country in 1937 was 65 pounds. The most recent figures show the annual consumption of pork per capita in Great Britain at 40 pounds.

There is little difference in the per capita consumption of beef in the two countries. Latest available figures show 63 pounds consumed per person in the United States, compared with [illegible] pounds in Britain. A big difference is shown in lamb and mutton. The Briton eats about 29 pounds a year, compared with 7 pounds eaten by the average American.



WORKERS FIGHT NLRB'S ORDER IN ARMOUR CASE

Oppose Election for Bargaining Agency.

Alleged favoritism shown a C. I. O. stockyards union by the National Labor Relations board was attacked in a petition filed yesterday in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The petitioner, the Employés' Mutual association [composed largely of Armour Co. workers], requested the setting aside of an order of the board requiring an election of a bargaining agent at the Armour plant before Oct. 15.

Under this order only the C. I. O. union, the United Packing House Workers, was to be represented on the ballots. The employés' sole choice was whether this organization should or should not be their agent. The Employés' Mutual had been referred to by the board as "company dominated" and the Armour management was instructed not to grant it recognition.

Has 85 Per Cent of Employés.

The petition, drawn by Attorney Euclid Louis Taylor, said that 85 per cent of the employés eligible to vote are already members of the Employés' Mutual association. It also denied that there was any company domination. Officials of the packing company have asserted also that there was no such domination.

The Circuit Court of Appeals was asked in the petition to review the order of the NLRB and the record on which it was based. It was asserted that the board refused to permit the association to appear at hearings and present its case, and that the board granted a "shotgun petition" of the C. I. O. group.

Taylor Explains Action.

Attorney Taylor explained this last statement. The C. I. O. union, he said, had made the request that it be the only organization on the ballots on the theory that it had nothing to lose, especially as the workers eligible were overwhelmingly in favor of the Employés' Mutual.

Taylor said it would be shown that the legal rights of the association had been disregarded when the NLRB denied it a hearing.

RAIL EMPLOYES HIT EXTENSION OF BARGE LINES

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Representatives of railroad employés in fourteen states were on record today as opposed to extension or enlargement of federally operated barge lines through the medium of the Inland Waterways corporation. The group formed an organization, known as the Mutual Transportation committee, to carry out a program of opposition.

They adopted a resolution "urging" members of the next congress to take steps to divest the federal government of its interest in the Inland Waterways corporation "or any further interest in the actual operations of barge lines on any river in the United States."

New U. S.-Canadian Bridge Proves to Be Money Maker

Collins Landing, N. Y., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Revenues of the new Thousand Islands International bridge in the first month of operation totaled $69,497, Elton H. Miller, chairman of the bridge authority, said today. This revenue, he said, was more than a third of the total estimated revenues of $190,000 for the whole first year of operation. A total of 55,187 cars crossed the bridge in the first thirty days. The bridge spans the St. Lawrence river between Clayton, N. Y., and Ivy Lea, Ont.

City National stock declined $2 and Mercantile Trust stock eased $1. Continental Illinois National stock was the only gainer, finishing the week $1 higher.

FREIGHT DECLINE IS PREDICTED FOR FOURTH QUARTER

Midwest Total Is Placed 3.9 Pct. Under 1937.

Shippers in the area represented by the Midwest Shippers Advisory board will need 3.9 per cent fewer freight cars in the fourth 1938 quarter than a year earlier. This estimate was announced yesterday by the board. It said 777,417 cars probably will be required. In the fourth 1937 quarter 808,658 freight cars were used.

Shippers, railroads, and other interested groups provide the data on which the board makes its forecasts. A major purpose of the estimate is to help the roads get the right number of freight cars at the right places at the right time. The report is regarded one of the most reliable indicators of the state of business.

Biggest Decline in Ore.

The biggest decline forecast by the board was in the number of cars that will be needed for handling ore and concentrates. It set the number at 7,400 cars, compared with 24,650 a year ago. This would be a decline of 70 per cent.

A 45 per cent drop in iron and steel shipments was predicted. The number of cars was estimated at 22,355 compared with 40,645 a year ago.

A 15 per cent decline was predicted in loadings of grain. The board said 71,750 cars may be needed for these shipments, against 84,420 in the corresponding 1937 period.

Loadings of potatoes, livestock, poultry-dairy products, and coal and coke were among those in which increases were predicted.

Comparative Loading Figures.

LAKE SHIPPING LINES PUT MORE BOATS IN SERVICE

Cleveland, O., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—Great Lakes vessel operators, reversing seasonal procedure, are starting boats instead of sending them into winter quarters, it was learned today.

Seventeen vessels have been added to the active list in the last month and several others will be placed in commission early next week. Heavy shipments of grain and bituminous coal are responsible for the increase in tonnage.

Great Lakes fleets have 142 vessels in commission, compared with 125 at the same time last month and 307 in the corresponding period last season.

INDUSTRY GETS AUTUMN SPIRIT; MOVES BRISKLY

compared with the preceding week. Shipments of all classes of commodities were heavier. The volume still was 19.8 per cent below a year ago, however.

Looking ahead into the fourth quarter of the year, the shippers' advisory boards of three regions predicted declines in loadings from levels of a year ago. The Mid-West board yesterday forecast a drop of 3.9 per cent for the three month period. [Details appear elsewhere in this section.]

Earlier the Great Lakes board predicted a 7.3 per cent decline in its area, and the Allegheny board said loadings probably would fall 5.7 per cent in that district.

Rail Committee Named.

With the nation watching the financial and labor difficulties of the railroads, President Roosevelt on Tuesday appointed a committee to draft a legislative aid program for submission to congress. The committee announced the next day that it had decided not to go to work on the program until the wage controversy is settled. Three railroad executives and three labor representatives are on the committee.

Meantime, officials of eastern railroads admitted that the 25 per cent fare increase made July 7 has been a failure so far as a means of increasing revenues.

Engineering construction awards totaled 82 million dollars in the week ended Sept. 20. This compared with 52 million in the preceding week, and 42 million in the corresponding 1937 week. The week's total was the highest since the period ended June 24, 1937.

Bank Clearings Rise.

Bank clearings were $5,987,079,000 in twenty-two leading cities in the week ended Wednesday. This was the largest volume since Dec. 23, 1937, but was 7.9 per cent less than for the corresponding 1937 week.

The Associated Press composite index of industrial activity for the week rose to a new high for the year at 78.6 per cent of the 1929-'30 average. A year ago it stood at 103.2. The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Previous week.	Year ago.
Automobile prod.	31.0	30.7	101.4

Residential bldg.	76.4	76.4	62.3
*Total carloadings ..	63.8	61.7	79.8

*New 1938 high.

New financing tumbled to $6,528,779, the lowest since the first week in August. The total in the preceding week was more than 35 million dollars. The European war threat was regarded as a major influence in this sharp drop.

Retail Sales Decline.

Retail trade of the nation, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, showed declines ranging from 3 to 14 per cent as compared with the preceding week. Labor troubles, rainstorms, and subsiding of school purchases were said to be responsible for the decline.

Department store sales in the week ended Sept. 17 were 12 per cent less than in the 1937 week. This was a larger drop from a year ago than was shown in the preceding week.

Several steel companies cut the price of railroad track supplies $2 to $5 a ton. Some big producers raised the price of pig iron $1 a ton. In the auto industry Graham-Paige Motors corporation cut the price of its new four door sedan $122.

Europe poured more gold into America for safe keeping. In the week ended Wednesday the treasury's monetary gold stock increased 167 million dollars.

Charge Conspiracy Exists to Control Shipments.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—[Special.]—The attorneys general of four states in the Great Lakes region today filed a formal complaint with the United States maritime commission against the North Atlantic shipping conference.

O. S. Loomis, attorney general of Wisconsin.

The complaint charged the conference, consisting of foreign steamship operators, with "deliberate and illegal conspiracy" to prevent the normal flow of foreign commerce from the Great Lakes region to foreign ports.

Specifically, the charge was aimed at conference contracts which compel shippers to send all of their exports and imports only on steamship lines belonging to the conference and from North Atlantic ports.

Propose American Line.

In retaliation, midwest shippers have threatened to establish an American fleet of ships to carry freight from Great Lakes ports to foreign destinations. Now only foreign lines provide such service. The commission is currently considering this proposal.

The complaint filed today was signed by Attorneys General Orland S. Loomis of Wisconsin, Raymond W. Starr of Michigan, Herbert S. Duffy of Ohio, and Omer Stokes Jackson of Indiana.

The Great Lakes Harbor association, representing Great Lakes port cities, also subscribed to the formal request of the four officials that the maritime commission take action to give relief from certain sections of the conference contracts with midwest shippers.

Formal Complaint Asked.

Agitation against the conference became pronounced at the commission's hearing last July in Milwaukee, Wis., on needs of midwest harbors. At that time the commission was asked informally to take action against the conference. But the commission replied that a formal complaint would be necessary.

CHICAGO MEAT EATERS TO GET LOWER PRICES

Result of Recent Slump in All Live Stock.

There was plenty of good news in live stock and packing house markets for Chicago meat eaters last week. Consumers are assured lower rates in the butcher shops within a few days as a result of the recent severe slashing of live costs. Moreover, the outlook is for increased production and still lower rates next month, live stock men said yesterday.

Farmers have more animals in their feed lots than at any time in several years, and this is the season when they usually start shipping them to market in larger volume. Selling during the last two weeks has been the heaviest in four years for September. The meat output next month is expected to exceed the September production.

All Live Stock Lower.

All classes of live stock slumped sharply during the week. The average of the three principal classes of meat animals, steers, hogs, and lambs, at $8.70 stood lowest for any week since last May and below any corresponding September period since 1934. A year ago the price was $12.00. Several classes of meat animals, including beef cows, lambs, and spring pigs under 210 pounds, dropped to new low rates for the season.

Fresh pork led the downturn in wholesale channels, the slump in this meat being one of the sharpest of the year. At the close of the week Chicago butcher shops obtained best light loins at $21.00, off $3.50 for the week. Some weights of loins were listed $4.00 and more lower, and sold off $6.00 to $7.00 from the prices prevailing a year ago.

Trend of Production, Prices.

The following tables indicate the trend of meat production and live stock prices in other years. [All meats produced under federal inspection, in millions of pounds, last six ciphers omitted.]

	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.
1937	891	1,000	1,042	1,195
1936	1,029	1,210	1,242	1,337
1935	776	992	958	1,023
1934	954	1,161	1,204	1,123

	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.
1937	$11.95	$11.00	$9.65	$ 8.55
1936	9.45	9.10	9.45	9.70
1935	10.35	9.80	9.95	10.25
1934	7.00	6.45	6.35	6.90

The market for steers was swept by an uneven decline ranging from 25 to 75 cents. Only a few top loads of longfed steers escaped the downturn. These filled a few special orders at $13.35, and were no criterion of the general trade for cattle.

Other Cattle Decline.

Cows tumbled 50 to 75 cents. Heifers sold unevenly steady to 50 cents lower. Calf prices were cut 50 cents.

Lambs averaged $7.50, off 40 cents for the week and 90 cents lower than two weeks ago. Final rates showed mostly 25 cents loss. Young hogs under 210 pounds, which comprised the bulk of receipts, finished the week 20 to 35 cents lower. Unevenness in others ranged from 15 cents lower to 40 cents higher, the gains being in the scant supply of extremely heavy butchers and in sows.

Millions Available to Reclaim Slums, but Investor Protection Is Needed

PLAN REQUIRES A LARGE SCALE OF OPERATIONS

Leading Insurance Firms Are Interested.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Millions of dollars of insurance company funds are available for the reconstruction of the rundown districts that ring Chicago's loop, but the lack of adequate protection for investors prevents putting this money to work. This situation was disclosed in a series of interviews with representatives of leading insurance companies.

The big insurance companies and their representatives in Chicago wish to put money to work in Chicago real estate. Their resources are immense. The employment of this money in loans to property holders for new building or modernization would do much toward restoring prosperity in the Chicago area. It would cut relief costs and take men off the WPA.

What Holds Back Loans.

One big obstacle keeps the insurance companies from putting dollars and men back to work in this way. It is the lack of reasonable assurance that the money will be paid back. This doubt arises from the fact that money put into the reclamation of slum areas can only be safely invested if it is devoted to large scale operations and put to work under a suitable program. A few thousands lent on an individual piece of property in a rundown district would most certainly be lost because no single building can rise far above the level of its neighborhood.

If, however, a plan can be adopted which will make it possible for investors—both large and small—to participate in large scale building operations, it would be possible to alter the character of entire districts, thereby creating the safeguards which the investors must have before they dare risk their money.

Insurance Companies Interested.

Because of this situation insurance company representatives have expressed keen interest in the program for reclaiming rundown areas outlined in the Graphic section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE on Aug. 14. This program was developed by a group of prominent Chicago real estate men, including J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of Starrett Bros.; Arthur Kruggel, president of the Chicago Real Estate Board; Paul Angell, vice president of that organization, and Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The suggested plan is being considered by the housing committee of the Chicago city council and is to be brought before the legislature at the beginning of its next session in January. The plan calls for legislation permitting the creation of "public service building corporations" empowered by law to obtain property in slum districts by condemnation in places where minority groups of property owners make such action necessary.

Provides State Supervision.

These corporations would be financed by private capital, but would operate under the supervision of a state commission as do the electric and gas utility companies. They would operate only in districts found to be detrimental to the health and general welfare of the community.

Insurance company representatives declare that the program is not only feasible but is the best approach to the problem of rundown districts so far suggested in any American city.

"The plan outlined in THE TRIBUNE'S Graphic section provides two of the most desirable things for slum reclamation," said Kent Mitchell, mortgage loan manager for the New York Life Insurance company in cities of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

"They are site acquisition and public supervision. Nearly all privately sponsored housing projects, and some public projects [notably the original Public Works administration's north side project] have been wrecked on the reef of site acquirement.

"The plan in THE TRIBUNE opens up a new avenue of approach to privately owned housing projects."

Mitchell said that his company would consider lending on housing projects in slum areas under certain conditions. The trend must be upward and not downward, he said. He pointed out that already he is turning down loans in areas where once his company made loans. That is because the slum districts keep widening.

"If the project is going to be big enough to influence the surrounding neighborhood it might be worth while to consider making a loan on it," he said.

"The trend of the neighborhood must be upward if we are to consider any loans," said George Dovenmuehle, vice president of Dovenmuehle, Inc., mortgage bankers. "We have made loans on new houses in old districts and invariably regretted it."

Views of Other Officials.

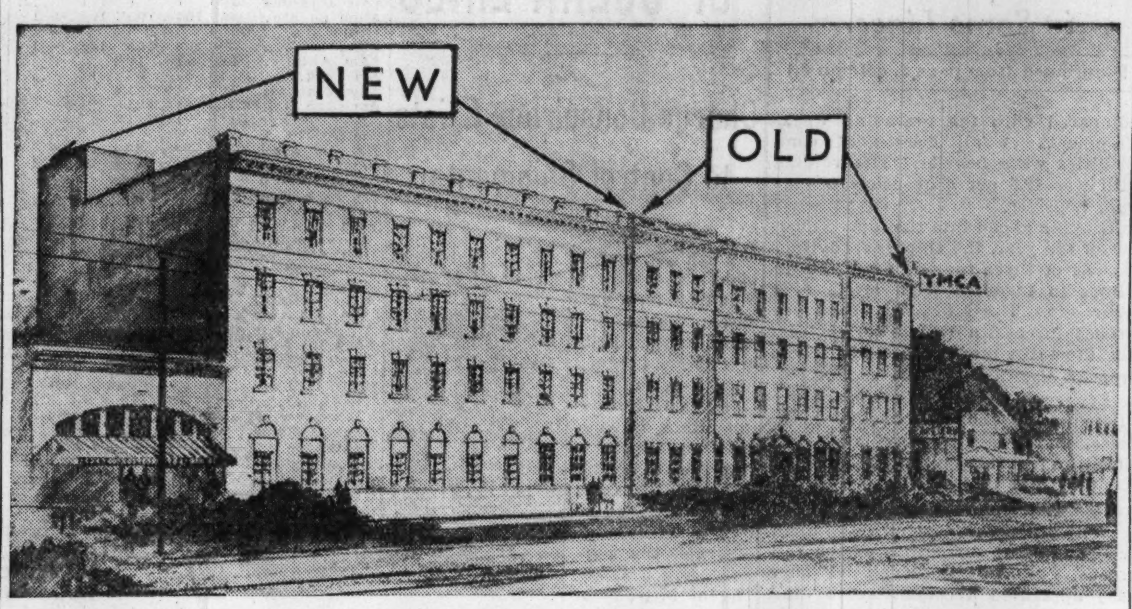
"If the trend is definitly downward, values are sinking, the lender has no chance of getting out and the equity disappears," said Donald Hulme, head of the Chicago mortgage loan department of the Prudential Insurance company of America.

"Loans will be made if sections are well stabilized and the project is big enough to warant it."

Irvin Jacobs, head of Irvin Jacobs & Co., representatives of several big insurance companies, said that loans would be made for housing projects in present slum areas if the project were large enough.

Clifford C. Wood, regional supervisor of the Equitable Life Assurance society for ten midwestern states, asserted that his company would not make any loans on housing projects in slum areas unless the trend should be definitly upward.

Irving Park "Y" and $140,000 Annex



Work is scheduled to be started shortly on a $140,000 four story addition to the Irving Park Y.M.C.A. at the southeast corner of Irving Park road and Kildare avenue. The annex, shown on the left, will be just east of and adjoining the original building. Eugene White is architect. E. Davies made this perspective.

Will Build 50 Small Homes in Evergreen Pk.

The Frank A. Schmidt Construction company, which has built fifty homes in Evergreen Park so far this year, yesterday outlined plans to erect fifty more by the first of the year. The company has acquired fifteen acres in Evergreen Park, near Western avenue and West 95th street, on which the new homes will be built.

The first unit in the proposed fifty already is under construction at 9306 South Richmond street. The owner is P. G. Schultz. The six room house will cost a reported $5,250 and the lot $750, or a total of $6,000. It has a full basement, with poured concrete foundation. Edward G. McClellan is architect.

The building is being financed with a twenty-five year Federal Housing administration insured mortgage. Monthly payments of $41 will include principal and interest payments, taxes and insurance.

At the Realty Boards

Assessor John S. Clark will discuss the forthcoming 1939 quadrennial real estate assessment at a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Real Estate board next Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. at 32 West Randolph street.

NEW TYPE SLUM RECLAMATION TO BE EXPLAINED

Paul Angell to Address Architects.

Paul D. Angell, vice president of the Chicago Real Estate board, will address the Illinois Society of Architects next Tuesday evening on "The Public Service Building Corporation." The meeting will be held at 1801 Prairie avenue. Angell will outline the scope of the proposed "Public Service Building Corporation," first suggested in an article in the Graphic section of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Aug. 14.

According to Elmer C. Jensen, president of the Illinois Society of Architects, who will preside at the meeting, this proposed new type of corporation is of especial interest to all architects. It will have an important effect on the reconstruction of a large portion of Chicago, he said.

Because of the widespread interest being shown in this plan to reclaim the depreciated districts a number of Chicagoans who are not members of the architects' society will attend. Among the outsiders who have accepted invitations are Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president, National Association of Real Estate Boards; J. Soule Warterfield, former president, Chicago Real Estate Board; Alderman William A. Rowan; James W. McCarthy, chairman, Chicago Housing authority; Wallace J. Stebbins, chairman of special housing committee of the Downtown council; Hugh E. Young, engineer of the Chicago Plan commission; Alfred Shaw, chairman, Metropolitan Housing council; and Elmer C. Roberts, president, Chicago chapter, American Institute of Architects.

Warterfield and Nelson have been collaborating with Angell in developing the rebuilding plan which the latter will discuss.

Ray Zingrebe has been made an escrow officer at the Chicago Title and Trust company. He has been with that organization since 1935.

Edmund J. Sullivan and associates have opened a new office at 43 West 144th street, in Ivanhoe, Riverdale.

Plan 4 Story Addition to Irving Pk. 'Y'

Contracts will be awarded within the next few days for a $140,000 addition to the Irving Park Y. M. C. A., according to Frank E. Hodek Jr., chairman of the board of directors. The new four story unit, to be built just east of and adjoining the present "Y" at 4251 Irving Park road, will contain sixty-one sleeping rooms. The original building has 175 rooms.

Frank E. Hodek Jr.

According to W. S. Miller, executive secretary, the new building will be ready for occupancy by the end of next March. It was designed by Eugene White, architect. It is being built to care for the increasing membership, which is now 2,995, the largest "Y" roster in Chicago. The sleeping rooms have been fully occupied for the last two years, Miller said.

Will Have Large Club Room.

All of the first floor of the addition will be used for a large club room to adjoin the present cafeteria and several small club rooms. The basement will be occupied by the Irving club, an organization of local business and professional men which provides athletic and club facilities. The club's present quarters in the old building will be remodeled.

Instead of the conventional outside fire escape the new unit will be equipped with the inside tower type. Badminton and volley ball courts and a solarium will be features of the roof.

In the residential section of the new building twenty of the sixty-one living units will contain living room, bedroom, and private shower and toilet. All of the other sleeping rooms will have running water.

The Y. M. C. A. recently acquired eighty-three feet of west frontage on Kildare avenue, just south of the present building, with a depth of 163 feet, for future expansion. The present building fronts 139 feet on Irving Park road and 156 feet on Kildare. This gives it a total frontage of 241 feet on Irving Park road and 239 feet on Kildare. The new unit has a frontage of 102 feet with a depth of thirty-three feet. Ben Ekeberg, of Ralph Beesley & Co., was broker in the purchase of the Kildare avenue land.

Minwegen Again Is Head of Local Appraisal Group

Roger P. Minwegen was reëlected president of the Northern Illinois chapter of the Society of Residential Appraisers at a recent meeting. The following were retained in office: Edward V. Walsh, first vice president; Dominick Dunn, second vice president; George Ottenhoff, treasurer, and F. Hardinge Jr., secretary. New directors elected were Frederick B. Bourland and H. O. Walther.

Lake Shore Flats Will Be Made Smaller

Contracts will be let within a few days for one of Chicago's biggest remodeling jobs. The twelve story apartment building at the northwest corner of Lake Shore drive and East Division street, is to be completely rebuilt into small suites at a reported cost of $200,000.

The building was erected in 1914 at a cost of $700,000. It has ten big apartments, one to a floor, containing sixteen rooms and seven baths each.

Old Tenants Move.

For several years the building was fully occupied. Among the tenants were Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson, Mrs. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Charles Schweppe, Philip K. Wrigley, Robert H. Cabell, president of Armour & Co., and Mrs. John L. Curtiss.

Then the trend toward suburban residences of families who formerly occupied large city apartments began. Family after family moved from 1200 Lake Shore drive until only three apartments were occupied.

The owner, Mrs. R. B. Honeyman Jr., daughter of the late John K. Stewart, president of the Stewart-Warner corporation, some time ago decided it was too expensive to maintain a twelve story building for three tenants.

Last Tenants Asked to Move.

The last tenants were asked to move. The three were Mrs. Curtiss, Mr. Cabell and Mr. and Mrs. Simpson. For several months the building has been completely vacant.

According to Hogan & Farwell, Inc., who will handle the renting, each 16 room apartment will be cut up into six de luxe suites of three, four, five and six rooms. The second floor, at present not used for living quarters, also will be remodeled into flats. There will be a total of sixty-six new apartments.

Work is expected to start within ninety days and it is planned by the architects, the Benjamin H. Marshall company, to have it completed by July 1, 1939. The building was designed by Marshall & Fox.

FIELD ESTATE LEASES SOUTH SHORE STORES

Two more store leases in the 71st and South Shore block were reported to have been closed yesterday by the Estate of Marshall Field, owner. One is with Leone Bramson, children's wear, for the store at 2348 East 71st street. The other is with the Shore Post restaurant, at No. 2360. Both are for five years.

There are twenty-six stores in the building. Seventeen of them have been deepened and remodeled with new store fronts. All are standardized as to design and control of signs, according to Ward Farnsworth, of the Field estate.

Currency Exchange Rents Space in Garage Building

State Currency Exchanges has leased the store premises at 217 West Washington street, in the Hotel La Salle garage building, as the fourth unit in its chain of currency exchange stores. The space has been modernized to conform to the standard design of the company's chain. The other units are at the Randolph street station of the Illinois Central, the Van Buren street I. C. station, and at 1915 West Harrison street. Arthur Rubloff & Co., agents of the property, represented all parties.

ELSTON AVENUE LEASE.

Piper's Super Service station has leased the one story building, 75 by 125 feet, at 2820-24 Elston avenue, from the Madison trust, for a term of years. This property, together with adjoining property on the east, is to be converted into a modern service station, according to Marks & Co., who represented all parties.

BIDS ARE TAKEN ON BIG FLATS IN HYDE PARK AREA

Plan 431 Suites; May Cost About $2,000,000.

Bids are now being taken on what will be the largest apartment project planned for the south side in several years. This is a group of eleven units, some of them nine and others ten stories in height. They will be erected on the north side of East 50th street, between Chicago Beach drive and East End avenue, if the bids are satisfactory.

It is estimated that the project will cost about two million dollars. It is planned to finance the project with a Federal Housing administration insured mortgage. However, the FHA has not yet given official approval.

Owned by Syndicate.

Plans for the big project were drawn by Alfred S. Alschuler for a syndicate. Alfred S. Alschuler, R. N. Friedman, and E. A. Renwick are members. The other participants have not been disclosed.

The eleven units will contain 431 suites of four and five rooms each, all unfurnished. There will be a total of 2,030 rooms, according to the architect's plans.

Each unit is "T" shaped so that all rooms will have cross ventilation. The eleven "T's" are to be connected but will be set irregularly about the site.

Build on Third of Site.

The entire grounds will comprise 138,249 square feet. The eleven units will occupy 46,114 square feet of the area, which is in the block north of the Chicago Beach hotel.

Each of the "T" units will have its own lobby and hallways. Four Chicago contractors are bidding on the project.

FOOD MART CHAIN RENTS BUILDING FOR THIRD UNIT

The entire one story building at 7622-28 North Paulina street, 64 by 125 feet, was leased by the Spic and Span Food Mart for five years from Oct. 1. It will be the lessee's third unit in a contemplated city-wide chain of food markets. Milton Moses was broker. This building has been occupied for seven years by the Howard-Paulina Food Mart.

Bids are in and contracts are expected to be let this week for remodeling the northwest corner of Wentworth avenue and West 23d street, in "Chinatown." The present building will be partially razed and a new store in the first floor and a six room apartment on the second floor will be built. A one story addition, 65x40 feet, also will be built. Robert Y. Goo, a Chinese architect in the office of Roberts & Roberts, has drawn the plans for the project. The Chinese Trading company, now at 2214 Archer avenue, will occupy the entire first floor.

News of the Architects

Melville Clarke Chatten and Phillmore M. Jacobson have formed a partnership under the name of Chatten & Jacobson, for the practice of architecture. They will have offices in the Burnham building.

Otto T. Luther and Carl Christensen have formed an architectural firm to be known as the Luther & Christensen company. Offices are at 9453 South Ashland avenue.

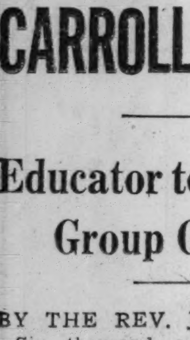
FEUD IN 7TH DISTRICT IS RENEWED

TALK ON SCHOOL CRISIS INITIATES CARROLL FORUM

Educator to Address Group Oct. 23.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Six thousand or more patrons, sponsors, and trustees of the Charles Carroll Forum of Chicago will receive announcements this week of forum programs for the 1938-'39 season. The Rev. Dr. James Magner of Quigley Preparatory seminary, chairman of the organization, announced that sessions will be held at the Palmer house Sunday afternoons beginning Oct. 23.



Dr. James Magner.

The Carroll forum, named for a Catholic signer of the American Declaration of Independence who fought for the religious liberty later written into the Constitution, was organized under the leadership of Father Magner about a year and a half ago with an executive committee of Judge John P. McGoorty of the Superior court, Prof. Jerome G. Kerwin of the University of Chicago, Dean Paul Kiniery of Loyola university, Dean Howard Egan of De Paul university, and Mrs. M. March Van Tassel, 2619 East 74th street.

Talk on Educational Crisis.

Beginning with the Rt. Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., who will lead the forum on Oct. 23, speakers will carry on the forum's tradition of last year when such notables as Melchoir Palyi, Father Francis Talbot, Richard Reed, and Msgr. Peter Gilday carried out the forum ideals. Msgr. Corrigan's subject will be, "The Crisis in American Education."

These ideals Father Magner described as follows:

"The Charles Carroll forum was established to make better known Catholic principles and representative Catholic views on leading topics of the day. It is the intention of the forum to give both Catholics and the general public fuller information with regard to outstanding national and international problems, particularly where Catholic interests are concerned or where a defined Catholic stand is taken. Our point of view is based on Catholic principles, but our forum is open both to speakers and topics on a nonsectarian basis."

Abbé Dimnet to Speak.

Father Magner announced that the famed French author of "The Art of Thinking," Abbé Ernest Dimnet, has been obtained for the session of Nov. 20, and that on Dec. 11 Maj. James Strachey Barnes of London, England, will discuss the changing European situation. Abbé Dimnet will discuss the question, "Has Christianity Failed?" Another speaker for the current season will be Father John La Farge, Catholic editor of New York city.

Prominent among sponsors of the forum are the Chicapo chapter of the Knights of Columbus, Stuyvesant Peabody, Roy J. Burnett, Clement A. Berkhoff, John F. Bolton, Thomas Cannon, Edward I. Cudahy, Edward J. Donnellan, Michael F. Girten, Thomas R. Heaney, Edward M. Kerwin, Fred McGuire, John L. McInerny, Daniel Morrissey, William B. Traynor, and Edward R. Tiedebohl.

Sixty Carmelite friars will celebrate the forty-first anniversary of the death of St. Theresa of Lisieux at the national shrine, 6400 Woodlawn avenue, with a novena which opens today, to continue until Oct. 3. This was announced by the Rev. Frederic T. Manion, director of the shrine. There will be mass today at 8 a. m. and a solemn procession at 3 o'clock this afternoon starting from St. Clara church.

Swinging Back to Skating Days for Alumni Party

Autumn invites caprice. Young things, recently dignified with high school diplomas, catch a mood in September and dig out their former playthings. Those from Harper High school will return to their roller skating days Friday evening at an alumni party in White City, 63d street and South Park avenue. It wouldn't do, however, to find themselves awkward at a sport that once was gracefully easy, so three young alumnae last week took time out from their modeling and typewriters to do a little homework. Sweeping along are (left to right): Miss Pat Brown, 6735 Justine street; Miss Marilyn Lang, 3108 West 63d street, and Miss Alice Florian, 6421 Richmond street. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The special courses in engineering and architecture are offered to adult students who are interested in working for a degree but who wish to obtain adequate training in various branches of both fields.

CHANGE IN TIME AFFECTS TRAINS OF COMMUTERS

Major Shifts Made on Long Runs.

New schedules and times effective today and tomorrow with the return of Chicago to central standard time were announced yesterday by the railroads. Commuters from the south and southwest sides, however, will encounter little difficulty on the Illinois Central or Rock Island lines because no changes have been made in the suburban service. Operating one hour later on standard time, trains will leave at the same times as recorded in the summer timetables of daylight saving time.

The Illinois Central has made three alterations in the schedule of through trains. The Night Diamond from St. Louis to Chicago will arrive at Central station at 7:30 o'clock standard time instead of 7 o'clock as formerly. The Hawkeye, bound for Omaha, will depart at 6:15 o'clock in the evening and arrive at its destination at 8:10 o'clock in the morning instead of at 8. Leaving Omaha at 5:55 o'clock instead of 6:05, the Hawkeye will arrive in Chicago at 8 o'clock in the morning as usual, however.

Rock Island Changes.

On the Rock Island railroad the Rocky Mountain Limited from Denver will arrive at Englewood at 6:12 o'clock in the evening instead of 6:17 in order to make connections with New York Central's train 22 which leaves at 6:18 o'clock.

Local train 21 bound for Peoria will depart at 3:45 o'clock instead of at 3, arriving at 8:15 o'clock, the same time. The other major change will be the hour departure for the Chicago to Sioux Falls, S. D., train which will pull out at 4:45 o'clock instead of at 4:30.

Three changes have been recorded for the Alton railroad suburban service to Joliet and Bloomington. The Saturday train for Joliet will leave at 1:30 o'clock instead of 12:30, the Bloomington daily local will depart at 5:20 o'clock instead of 4:15, and the Joliet daily will leave at 5:50 instead of 4:52.

Streamliner Departs Later.

Alton's streamlined Ann Rutledge for St. Louis will start at 8:30 o'clock in the morning instead of at 8 o'clock as formerly. Train 16 of the Baltimore and Ohio line, headed for Pittsburgh, has been withdrawn and replaced by one which leaves at 11 o'clock at night.

The Wabash local train, which left for Decatur at 4:35 o'clock in the afternoon, serving Auburn Park, Palos Park, and other southwest communities, will depart at 5:25 o'clock under the new schedule. The name of the Chicago Special has been changed to the Bluebird, and this train now will leave St. Louis for Chicago at 4:25 o'clock in the afternoon, arriving at 9:35 o'clock, instead of leaving at 8:50 o'clock in the morning.

The Santa Fe railroad reports that no changes have been made in its schedules.

C. & E. I. Changes Two.

Accommodating the 47th street area, Englewood, Chicago Heights, and other southwest sections, the Chicago and Eastern Illinois train bound for Danville will depart at 5:22 o'clock, one hour later than during the summer. The Danville to Chicago train will leave Danville at 5:30 o'clock in the morning instead of 3:30 as formerly, pulling in at the Dearborn station at 8:52 o'clock instead of 6:50.

According to the new schedule of the Pennsylvania railroad, the Broadway Limited will pull out of Chicago at 4:30 o'clock each afternoon, arriving in New York at 9:30 eastern standard time the next morning. The westbound Limited will depart from New York at 6 o'clock eastern time in the evening and reach Chicago at 9 o'clock in the morning, central time.

The General, Fort Dearborn, and Pennsylvania Limited westbound have had their schedules adjusted one hour later to conform to the change in time systems. The Pennsylvania Limited, leaving New York at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon eastern time will make the Chicago run 10 minutes shorter, and the eastbound General, pulling out from Chicago at 3:15 o'clock in the afternoon, central time, will cut 5 minutes off the New York trip.

Golden Triangle Later.

The westbound Manhattan Limited will leave New York at 6:50 o'clock in the evening, 15 minutes later than formerly, but will arrive at 12:30 o'clock as always. The Golden Triangle to Pittsburgh will pull out from Chicago at 11:15 o'clock at night, one hour later than under the old schedule.

Pennsylvania trains in the Chicago-Valparaiso suburban service and those in the overnight service between Detroit, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Columbus, Louisville, and Chicago will have their schedules adjusted to conform to the return to standard time.

The Wolverine of the New York Central system, which used the La Salle station, has been moved to Central station, and the Twilight Limited, Chicago-Detroit flyer, has been changed from Central to the La Salle station.

BECAUSE he was outstanding during his course in the Loyola university school of dentistry [Chicago College of Dental Surgery], William J. Charm, 8036 Yale avenue, has been awarded an internship in the United States Marine hospital in Norfolk, Va., it was announced last week. He was graduated in June with the degree of doctor of dental surgery. During his college career he was editor of the Dentos, student year book; winner of the Omicron Kappa Upsilon award in June; sophomore editor of the Bur, dental alumni publication, and a member of Blue Key, national honorary fraternity, Lambda Mu Delta, and Delta Sigma Delta. He played on the dental basketball team also.

From three colleges come the names of Our Towners to add to the list of scholarship winners for the embroyo school year. Maurice B. Rudnick, 11421 Michigan avenue, has been presented a year's scholarship to the university of Wisconsin, his second award for scholastic abilities.

Rudolph Hurwich, 9530 South Kedzie avenue, Evergreen Park, is the recipient of a freshman competitive scholarship to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He received his preparatory education at the Morgan Park Military academy.

The third, Miss Nadia Charydchak, 7515 Ingleside avenue, is the winner of a $300 scholarship to the Pestalozzi Froebel Teachers' college, 410 South Michigan avenue. She is graduate of the June 1938 class at Fenger High school where she was a member of Quill and Scroll, the National Honor society and the Fenger News staf.

MISS ALFRIEDA GNASS, 10513 Ewing avenue, may not be able to hear all the praises of her comeliness, but it has set her on the way to fame. Winner of the title, "Miss East Side," during the Search for Beauty contest by Mayor Kelly's New Century committee recently, Miss Gnass, who is deaf, will compete for the name of "Miss Mississippi Valley" today in La Crosse, Wis., in the contest conducted as part of the celebration and patriotic pageant sponsored by the American Legion and Veterans of the Foreign Wars.

Author, director and actor is the triple rôle played by Mrs. T. Guy Pierson with the dramatic group of the Crown Point Presbyterian church. She wrote, directed and played in "All In a Day," depicting a day in a mission station in a little Mexican town, which was presented several times in Indiana and Chicago during the summer season.

Other members of the cast were Bud Griessel, Robert and James Forsythe, Robert Owen, Robert Thomen, Rose Kubal, Clara Knight, Marian Knight, Leona Criley, Janet Place and Pat Pettibone. Another of her interests in addition to writing plays, incidentally, is to formulate a whole evening's entertainment around one song.

COLLEGE addenda: Miss Jane Cameron Thomas, 5630 Kimbark avenue, has been admitted to the freshman class of Monticello college, Godfrey, and four other Our Towners have entered Milwaukee-Downer college for the first time. They are Miss Olive Gage, 4032 Ellis avenue; Miss Lorraine Segler, 6549 Albany avenue; Miss Dorothy Johnson, 6410 Campbell avenue, and Miss Dorothy Dieckmann, 6219 Greenwood avenue. Miss Dorothy Stein, 1755 East 55th street, began her clinical training under the supervision of the occupational therapy department of the college.

Students in the biology classes of Miss Ruby Fremont, 2158 West 111th street, learn first hand that chickens do come from eggs and that bulb culture has nothing to do with electric lights. They set a hen on eggs and actually witness the hatching process during a three week period. In a conservatory they learn how to care for plants, how to make cuttings, how to transplant and all the other mysteries of gardening.

They raise money for the beautification of the school grounds with an annual rose sale and keep the school bright from December to April with displays of narcissus, the bulbs of which are planted at intervals of two weeks. Miss Fremont moves all the plants to her home in June and then brings them back to the school in September.

MISS MARTHA L. SMITH, 824 East 42d place, has been appointed roll call chairman of the Oakland unit of the Red Cross and will direct the annual membership enrollment from Armistice day to Thanksgiving, according to an announcement last week by James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago chapter.

BIDWILL SEEKS SENATE PLACE OF BAUMRUCKER

Declares Unseating a Putup Job.

BY EDWARD WILSON.

The 7th senatorial district, which embraces most of Cook county outside of Chicago and several bordering city precincts, had two men in the state senate in the last four years, where only one should have been. Both are now campaigning and each is asking for "reëlection" in November. The two, who are stirring up a bitter four year old fight in the country town area, are Arthur J. Bidwell, Republican, and Charles F. Baumrucker, Democrat, both residents of River Forest.

Arthur J. Bidwill.

Bidwell, who is in the printing business, was elected to the senate from the 7th in 1934 by a plurality of 149 votes. The election was contested by Baumrucker and the contest was decided by a senate committee of four Democrats and one Republican. The committee reviewed only part of the district tally sheets and refused to make a recount of the ballots. Bidwill was unseated after serving five months in Springfield.

Unseated in Senate.

The scene of the unseating was the floor of the senate. After a caucus in which they were assured of enough party votes to seat Baumrucker, the Democrats introduced the report of the packed committee on May 15, 1935. Senator Richard J. Barr [R., Joliet], dean of the senate, the only Republican committee member, offered his minority dissenting report to no avail.

Through four hectic hours senators of both parties stormed about the dictatorship methods. Senator T. V. Smith [D., Chicago], now a candidate for congressman-at-large, cried "We Democrats are lousy with power in Chicago and throughout the state. We have a majority that lets us do anything we want to and it brings us into this situation tonight where nobody knows a thing about what we are to vote on, as no time has been afforded for study of the two reports. I was born a Democrat and have always been one, but I'm too much of a Democrat to go along with this program."

C. F. Baumrucker.

Sees Nash's Hand.

Senator Noah M. Mason [R., Oglesby] told the senate he had heard Bidwill's ouster was ordered by Pat Nash because Bidwill was alleged to have made some irreverent remarks about Nash's brother, Richard Nash, a Democratic power in River Forest.

In a plea for fairness, Bidwill said: "All I want is a square deal. This means my future. I appeal to your fairness, appeal to you to be men and show the mettle and character that is in your hearts. Open the ballot boxes and I'm not afraid to abide by the results."

The roll call was held and Bidwill was unseated by a vote of 30 to 14.

Bidwill demonstrated in 1936 that the unseating affected his future. He benefited in the eyes of the voters. In that year he was Republican candidate for state auditor opposing Edward J. Barrett, Democratic candidate for reëlection.

Vote Exceeded Barrett's.

In spite of the Democratic landslide in the state, Bidwill polled 13,000 more votes in the Cook county town areas than did Barrett, one of the Democratic party favorites.

"I'm not campaigning on the fact that I was unseated," said Bidwill last week. "I'm campaigning on the basis that I still hold a certificate of election from the secretary of state as senator of the 7th district and I want to be reëlected. The district should be returned to its traditional Republican representation.

"I am striving toward two objectives in the campaign. First, to get all unregistered voters to register. There are about 30,000 eligible persons in the country towns who have neglected to register. Second, I want all registered Republicans to vote."

Shift by Republicans.

In the spring primary Baumrucker polled 31,989 votes out of 53,640 cast on Democratic ballots. Bidwill received 23,054 out of 40,183. Republican leaders estimate that half of the votes against Baumrucker were Republicans who left their regular standards to oppose the Nash-Kelly party faction.

Both Republican candidates for state representative, who have no contest of their own, since two Republicans and one Democrat were nominated, are campaigning for Bidwill.

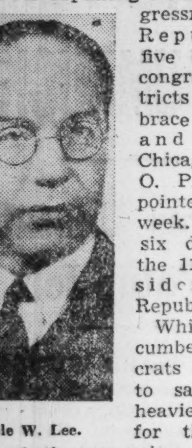
G. O. P. NOMINEES CITE U. S. DRIFT TO WAR ABROAD

Foreign Struggle Is Issue in Congress Fight.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Avoidance of war is one important reason for replacing Democratic congressmen with Republicans in five of the six congressional districts that embrace the south and southwest Chicago area, G. O. P. nominees pointed out last week. One of the six districts — the 11th—is considered solidly Republican.



Noble W. Lee.

While the incumbent Democrats continued to save their heaviest oratory for the closing weeks of the campaign, their foes were capitalizing on the European crisis. The Republicans charged that the administration's foreign policy will lead us into a possible European conflict unless it is radically altered by G. O. P. congressional gains in November.

Says Policy Aimless.

Noble W. Lee, the Republican who is seeking to unseat the 2d district Democrat, Rep. Raymond S. McKeough, charged last week that President Roosevelt and his secretary of state, Cordell Hull, display an alarming ignorance of foreign affairs and are directly responsible for the lack of proper foreign relationship.

"Administration methods in dealing with other powers are self-contradictory," Lee declared. "Our state department goes now this way and now that. Such aimlessness hastens our drift into someone else's fight.

"To avert dangerous entanglements in these troublesome times it is essential that we have a congress which, by the control of appropriations, can restrain the President if he comes to believe that we should take up arms against a nation that has not attacked us.

"That means that we need a Republican congress."

Five of the six south side congressional districts are in Democratic hands. They are the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, and 6th. The 1st, with a predominantly colored population, is accounted as almost certain to return to the G. O. P. column in November. The 11th district, which includes Will county, is strongly held by the Republicans.

Has Labor League Aid.

McKeough, like the other Democratic candidates, is still waiting to launch his active campaign for reëlection. McKeough is counting on support from leaders of Labor's Nonpartisan league, an offshoot of the C. I. O.

Goodwin L. Dosland, who is after the 3d district congress seat occupied since 1930 by Democratic Edward A. Kelly, a candidate for reëlection, is another Republican nominee who has a neutrality plank in his platform.

"Millions for defense," his plank reads, "but not one cent to send a mother's son to death upon a foreign battlefield."

Dosland's organization has just opened a drive to bring out all unregistered voters in the 3d district.

"We estimate that 100,000 eligible voters in the district are not registered and cannot vote until they do," Dosland said. "We know that the greater proportion of these silent voters are conservatives.

Seek Conservative Vote.

"Since we Republicans have no huge campaign chest and lack the vast patronage of the Democrats, we need every conservative vote on Nov. 8."

Dosland is scheduled to speak at more than a dozen meetings this week in his "basement campaign" for sanity in government. His district includes the southwest part of Chicago and the whole south end of Cook county.

Dominic M. Janec Jr., Republican opponent of Rep. Harry P. Beam in the 4th district, promised last week, if elected, "never to send any American boys to fight another nation's war."

"American youth under the New Deal has no future," he declares. "High school and college graduates can find few jobs better than the WPA. Youth deserves better than that, particularly because it is the young people who will pay the tremendous cost of the present spending policy."

Makes Issue of Negro.

William L. Dawson, the G. O. P. nominee in the 1st district, in a series of speeches last week attacked his opponent, Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, a fellow Negro, for an alleged recent assertion that he was not elected to represent the Negro.

"The congressman should represent the Negro," Dawson said. "Good citizenship demands that he champion the cause of the 80 per cent and more of residents of his district who are colored.

"He should accept as his responsibility the furtherance and exposition of the ideals of his own people. He is logically expected to have a message in their behalf and he should voice it. This he could do without detriment to the other races of this district."

Dawson, who is the alderman of the 2d ward, promised if sent to congress to work actively and continuously for the betterment of conditions for his fellow Negroes.

Randolph Starts Campaign.

In the 6th district the chief activity last week was shown by the Republican candidate, Robert I. Randolph of Riverside. Randolph has already launched his stump campaign and is appearing at gatherings in the western suburbs.

His Democratic adversary, A. F. Maciejewski of Cicero, the choice of his party organization for the 6th district congress seat from which Thomas J. O'Brien is retiring to run for sherif of Cook county, has announced that he would not launch his active campaign until this week.

The right hand column is the number of persons registered and eligible to vote in those areas according to latest figures of the election board and county clerk. Republican leaders assert the majority of those registered who did not vote in the primaries were Republican voters.

The total number of party primary ballots cast last April may be compared to the vote in the general election of 1934 when, according to the secretary of state, Arthur J. Bidwill, Republican, received 58,479 in the 7th district senatorial campaign and Charles F. Baumrucker received 58,330 votes.

Bidwill Asks Seat Given to Baumrucker.

Vries of Winnetka, Republican candidate for reëlection, said:

"I am going to direct efforts towards Bidwill's election. I think any fair voter believes government should be evenly balanced to have fair representation. At the last session there were thirty-three Democrats and eighteen Republicans in the senate. That distribution gives too much power to one party."

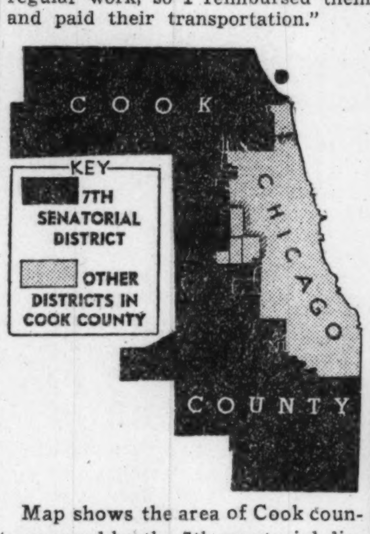
Sprague for Bidwill.

Arthur W. Sprague, La Grange Republican candidate for the second representative position, reports he is joining the Bidwill forces in an effort to unseat Baumrucker.

"The voters will do the unseating this time," Sprague declared.

Baumrucker maintains the recheck of the tally sheets by the senate committee was fair.

"There were no orders from Nash to the senate committee," he said. "I presented my tally sheets which showed I received more votes than Bidwill. Furthermore, the recount cost me a lot of money. Many of the judges and clerks who came into the city hall to testify had to leave their regular work, so I reimbursed them and paid their transportation."



Map shows the area of Cook county covered by the 7th senatorial district, which surrounds Chicago, Cicero, Berwyn, Riverside, Oak Park, and all but three precincts of Evanston.

Baumrucker is campaigning on his record at Springfield which included introduction of the water conservation and flood abatement bill. The bill proposes to reduce flood water in inland rivers and raise the level of underground waters, all of which would reduce soil erosion.

Author of "Watch" Bill.

He introduced and helped pass the "second hand watch bill" which orders that all second hand watches be tagged as such to protect buyers. Baumrucker is in the retail jewelry business.

He maintains he has served his district not only through representation at Springfield, but working with individuals.

He is campaigning through regular Democratic meetings and civic and business organizations in the country town areas.

The south and southwest portions of the 7th district include the townships of Thornton, Bloom, Rich, Bremen, Orland, Lemont, Palos, Worth, Stickney, and Lyons, eight precincts in the 13th ward and five in the 19th.

Sokol Town of Lake Ready for Golden Jubilee Festival

Czechoslovakia today is spot news. To understand the basic physical and mental characteristics of its people, one might study the Sokol movement which sprang into being during the last century to prepare the nation for progress and freedom.

Joseph Reichert.

Over many years the same program, physical and moral, has been instilled into the Czechoslovaks of America, and Saturday and next Sunday the Sokol Town of Lake, a band of militant Sokols will celebrate its 50th anniversary in the School hall, 48th and Honore streets.

The Sokol principle was laid down in 1862 through the teachings of Fugner and Tyrs, co-founders of the movement. Their philosophy supplied the Czechs with a new form of courage, activity, and freedom.

Athletic and Cultural.

The movement gathered momentum so that today it has more than 600,000 members in Czechoslovakia, units in about 20 countries of the world, 30,000 members in the United States and clubs in almost every state of the union. Its program is athletic and cultural.

In 1888, Sokol Prague was formed at 48th and Honore streets and several years later Sokol Pokrok was organized in the same locality. Sokol Town of Lake, as it is known today, was the result of a merger of these units in 1916.

Five thousand persons are expected to attend the golden jubilee of the club this week-end. A banquet will be given at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the hall with Charles Prchal, president of the American Sokol union, as toastmaster. The principal speakers will be Otto Kerner, state attorney general; Ald. James F. Kovarik [15th], Sherif John A. Toman, and Dr. Jaroslav J. Smrhal, district superintendent of schools.

Pageant Next Sunday.

Under the direction of Charles Koleno, gymnastic instructor of the local Sokol unit, activities will begin at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. Opening the program, a historical pageant will be staged showing the growth of the local Sokol movement in which members of all classes and ages will participate. A gymnastic drill by the young men and women and a one act play by the senior members will follow.

Closing the celebration a dance will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening in the School hall. Officers of the club will be in charge of arangements. They are Joseph Reichert, president; Bratislav Vanek, secretary, and Joseph Pytlik, treasurer.

The anniversary committee, assisting the officers, will be composed of Benjamin Lankas, James Klaus, Frederic Vodak, Joseph Mara, John Cermak, Otto Rande, James Jansky, Charles Holada, Joseph Janes, Jerry Husa, Rudolph Rozum, Mrs. Rose Vondrasek, Mrs. James Cihak, Miss Anna Kuchler, Miss Marie Bures, Miss Marie Kara, and Frances Sauer.

Butler is program chairman and Mrs. James Costin is the chairman of the refreshments committee.

Next the choir, composed of forty mixed voices under the leadership of E. O. Haase, choirmaster and organist, will sing two selections, "The Lord Is My Shepherd" [G. A. MacFarren] and "Send Out My Light" [Gounod], arranged by Karl Haase.

Arthur R. Greifendorf, 7945 South Loomis boulevard, convention chairman, will report on the forthcoming district convention of northern Illinois, Oct. 15 and 16, in the Stevens hotel.

SIGN W. C. FIELDS FOR COMEDY SPOT ON HIT PARADE

Ignace Jan Paderewski is to make his first American broadcast as a guest on the Magic Key hour at 1 p. m. today over WENR-NBC. The great Polish pianist has had his piano moved from his Swiss villa at Morges to studios at Lausanne, Switzerland. For this occasion Paderewski has selected a group of compositions by Chopin, Haydn, and Mozart.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

W. C. Fields ought to be happy over his new radio contract. It calls for a new series of comedy sketches on the Saturday evening Hit Parade series on CBS with the veteran entertainer playing the lead. Fields, it was often said, was never too pleased playing a foil to Edgar Bergen's Charlie McCarthy last year. And they parted company, according to persistent reports, because Fields was fed up with the show.

W. C. Fields.

The Fields-McCarthy feud may be revived again, however, in the movies. Bergen, McCarthy, and Fields have all been hired to renew their verbal bouts in the forthcoming picture "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

The Show of the Week.

The Mutual network has arranged for an elaborate new program titled "The Show of the Week," to be heard from 5:30 to 6 p. m. Sundays, starting today. With Ray Perkins as master of ceremonies, this program will present each Sunday the band of the week, the song of the week, and several news periods. Richard Himber's orchestra, with Stuart Allen as soloist, starts the series off. Other orchestras that have been engaged are George Olsen, Red Norvo, with Mildred Bailey, Eddy Duchin, Al Goodman, Peter Van Steeden, Ozzie Nelson, Kay Kyser, Vincent Lopez, and Larry Clinton.

This program, like the George Jessel series of last year, has local sponsors in various cities, a motor maker underwriting it for Chicago and a clothing store in New York and Boston.

Grimm Signed for Baseball.

Charlie Grimm, former Chicago Cubs manager, has signed a three year contract as a sportscaster with WBBM, setting at rest reports that he would return to baseball. Immediately following the close of the baseball season Grimm will take a vacation on his farm near St. Louis. During the winter he is to work on the WBBM Sports Huddle and next spring will be back on baseball.

Following a lead set by W-G-N several years ago, WBBM has announced that it no longer will broadcast collegiate football under commercial sponsorship this season. Only local station which already has snared a football sponsor is WJJD, which will carry the Northwestern home games.

The University of Chicago Round Table, which moved from 11:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. on NBC last spring, is shifting back to the morning hour.

Broadcasts from Classroom.

Twelve University of Illinois courses will be broadcast directly from classrooms this year through WILL, the university's station. Among the courses will be one on current affairs in Europe by Prof. A. H. Lybyer at 8 a. m. Fridays. Current events also will add interest to Prof. J. W. Garner's "International Law" period at 10 a. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

A glimpse into domestic difficulties may be had in Dr. W. C. Robb's "Labor Problems" discussions at 2 p. m. Fridays. Prof. R. C. Werner will broadcast a course in American history at 8 a. m. Mondays and Wednesdays. Two programs will be brought to WILL listeners through the Educational Broadcasting system of Purdue university. Prof. Robert Phillips will discuss American institutions at 11 a. m. Mondays and Wednesdays and Prof. Theodore Noss is to lecture on sociological principles at 11 a. m. Fridays.

Facsimile will be shown publicly probably for the first time in Chicago at the annual radio show at Marshall Field's store starting tomorrow and continuing through Saturday. Both type and pictures will be transmitted in the demonstrations. Other features of the show will include demonstrations of the mystery controlled radio, and a color picture, "Behind the Scenes in Radio," will be presented by Elizabeth Kelsey, engineer for the Zenith Radio corporation. Following each performance the Link instrument plane, by which actual radio control of commercial planes is demonstrated, will be explained by United Airlines flight officers.

New Green Hornet Hour.

Effective Tuesday, "The Green Hornet" racket busting dramatic series, will be heard over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system from 7 to 7:30 p. m., on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

FEMININE EXPOSE NEXT ON CURTAIN TIME ON W-G-N

Curtain Time will present a behind the scenes exposé of women in their unveneered moods from 9:30 to 10:00 p. m. Tuesday, when the sophisticated play "Trust a Lady," will be broadcast from the audience studio over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Bill Bouchey will play the part of a young English playwright whose conviction that women are man's worst enemy is almost confirmed until he encounters a film star who defies Hollywood's traditions. Frances Carlon will enact the leading feminine rôle, and Ethel Owen is to play the part of a guardian angel for the lovers.

"Trust A Lady," was written by Mildred Hark and Noel McQueen. Blair Walliser of the W-G-N production star will direct the play. The W-G-N concert orchestra will provide the musical background.

"Your Sunday Date," conducted by Harold Stokes, will change broadcasting time over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting System today. Henceforth the musical show will be aired from 7 to 7:30 p. m. on Sundays.

Tonight's program will feature the singing of Edna O'Dell, Gunther Decker, the Four Shades of Blue, the tongue twisting antics of Charlie Wilson, and Marlin Hurt's repartee with his invisible partner, Beulah.

Miss O'Dell will join with the chorus and the W-G-N dance orchestra to do a special arrangement of "I Cover the Waterfront." Miss O'Dell also will solo in "Love Is Where You Find It."

Stokes' weekly feature, Memory Lane, will provide three melodies packed with a nostalgia of the past, "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," vintage of 1904, "I Left Her on the Beach at Honolulu," from the Follies of 1916, and the old perennial favorite, "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen."

Harold Stokes, Melodies from the Sky to be aired over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m., Wednesday, will feature the singing of Miss Kathryn Witwer, soprano.

Playroom at Small Expense

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Groneman, 4547 North Kostner avenue, weren't afraid of a little work. So at the expense of about $10, plus plenty of calcimine and brushes and ingenuity, they converted their cellar spaces into a lively game room. And they had a lot of fun doing it.

BASEMENT ROOM IS TRUE BARGAIN FOR ANY HOUSE

$10 and Hard Work Make Recreation Spot.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Groneman, 4547 North Kostner avenue, tackled their drab basement spaces with vigor and vim. Also, with the determination to get as much as they could for every dollar spent.

They used brush and calcimine, plus about ten dollars in cash, and plenty of ingenuity. The result is a bright, cheery recreation room, which lures the sun in and down stairs, whenever it shines. A true bargain, this elastic, many sided game room, if you accept the word "bargain" at its real definition; a-lot-for-a-little.

For some time now, Mr. and Mrs. Groneman have acted on the principle that if you can't do everything at once for your home, you can do a few things at a time, and in the end accomplish a number of definitly needed improvements.

Plaster Board Walls.

Two years ago they enlarged the basement by building a foundation under the sun porch at the front of their small home. At the same time they lined the basement walls with plaster board, and gave the basement floor a couple of coats of a good grade cement paint, in a nice, grey shade.

But the basement still remained a rather drab spot, given over to storage purposes.

Last year they decided to convert it into a room for downstairs entertaining: A type of room which almost always supplies a real need in a house of small size.

This year the Gronemans are planning to have arches built between the dining room and living room and living room and sunroom. The next year, the large, overhead, unfinished attic spaces will be put to everyday, practical use and finished in simple, attractive fashion.

Junk Goes in Discard.

But that's another story. Getting back to this renovated cellar, it is now a lively spot, gay with brightly calcimined walls and ceiling, and comfortable to lounge in, with furniture brought down from the upstairs spaces.

A basement game room is certainly the least expensive room you can build in your house. To get results you have to do some planning, and use your imagination, and invest in some cans of paint or a supply of calcimine. You also need some good brushes, a dash of courage, and hard work. Mr. and Mrs. Groneman did the work themselves.

First they discarded all the junk which had accumulated in the cellar since they first moved into the house. Once rid of that, they decided on what they could spare from upstairs. By investing in a few new pieces of furniture, they were able to gather enough old pieces to furnish not only the game-room-living-room part of the basement, but also to build in a little kitchen corner for midnight feasts.

Blue Ceiling with Stars.

They calcimined a wainscot in gray, marking it with irregular white lines to give it the effect of a rugged stone. Above this they used white calcimine to a foot and a half below the ceiling. Then they brought blue calcimine into play, and for the upper foot and a half of wall and for the ceiling, they applied blue calcimine to suggest the sky. They dotted this blue with white stars.

Next, white calcimine was brushed on the foundation posts and green calcimine used to sketch evergreen trees. A mid-winter holiday spirit was given these posts by this treatment, and further enhanced by dots of white calcimine to suggest snow.

White calcimine also was used for the kitchen corner, with built-in cabinets brought down from upstairs for dishes and glassware, and a middle aged stove installed, for occasions when rarebits and biscuits and steaks are in demand.

Lattice Gates Simulated.

The need for a basement lavatory was not overlooked. There was originally a downstairs toilet, so by way of transforming its appearance, gray calcimine with white markings was used for its walls—the same treatment that was given to the game room wainscoting. And green stripes were painted on its door to simulate lattice work.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 26.

This is the time when cuttings should be made of those bedding plants that are growing out of doors. A plant or two, cut back, should be potted and carried along as stock plants from which to take cuttings from time to time. Ageratum, coleus, geranium, and similar plants are always in demand. Wait until after the tops of cannas, elephant ears and others freeze back before lifting. Simply cut back the tops, dig the plants, and let stand in the sun for a few hours to dry the soil slightly, remove the soil that falls easily away and store in a cool place, such as is suitable for potatoes. Dahlias may be handled in the same manner without difficulty.

Tuesday, Sept. 27.

If you expect to sow the seeds of hardy annuals this fall wait until just before the ground freezes. After sowing, cover with coarse litter to prevent washing away of the seeds. Fall sown seeds make a much earlier start than spring sown stock, and give earlier flowers with a heavier growth. The bed should be finely raked before sowing for there will be no chance to work it in spring. Four o'clocks are excellent for congested city districts, making good hedges or masses. Shirley poppies, California poppies, cosmos, cleome or spider plant, the sunplant or portulaca, calliopsis, and the common morning glory also may be fall planted. Early flowering perennials do well when fall planted. Divide old clumps for they usually become clogged with old growths that give only a few blooms; it is the rapid growing, healthy growths that produce the finest and most abundant flowers.

Wednesday, Sept. 28.

Do not plant peonies too deep, for deep planting is one of the reasons the plants fail to bloom satisfactorily. Do not use too many in a small yard or they will dominate. Plant peonies now and up to heavy freezing. Hardy ferns may be planted at this time. They are about the most desirable plants for many situations. Some are good for the north side of the house and as edging for borders. Some are useful in the rock garden, while others are fine for cutting. The soil for most ferns should be very fine, light, and porous, and well drained. Rhubarb and asparagus can be planted in the fall. Visit the autumn shows and take note of the newer varieties observed.

Thursday, Sept. 29.

If a light frost nips some plants that are to be used indoors, place them in a cool, shaded spot and sprinkle with cold water several times. They soon thaw and regain their former upright appearance. Hardy chrysanthemums, late asters, and dahlias may be protected against early frost by syringing early in the morning before the sun comes out. Newspapers can be used to cover the plants during the night. The philodendron is one of the best viney plants for semi-dark rooms. It does well in a wall pocket that is large enough for practical use. This plant will last a long time when used in water alone, but soil is best. It is wise to prepare a new perennial garden at this time, allow it to settle during the winter and plant in the spring.

Friday, Sept. 30.

The whole garden can be worked over in fall. Old, poor plants should be dug and discarded. It is unnecessary to mow a lawn made in fall for the grass will serve to protect the root system during the winter. Well established lawns usually will pass through the winter without injury. It is sometimes advised to make an application of ammonium sulphate in late fall as a stimulant and to harden off the grass. All kinds of bulbs are available at the supply houses at this time. Hardy lilies are becoming more and more interesting to amateur gardeners. There are few plants that are more attractive. Get all bulbs into the ground as soon as they can be obtained.

Saturday, Oct. 1.

Hedges may be planted in fall with good results and almost a year's growth gained. The plants, if evergreens, are placed about eighteen inches apart and must be well wattered. Mulch after the ground freezes. Deciduous hedge plants, such as Ligustrum amurense, also do well when fall planted. Each plant should be placed somewhat deeper than it stood in the nursery row. The tops should be cut back severely to encourage low growth. Mulch during winter. Hedges should not be planted in restricted areas in the city, such as on narrow parkings, and where the front yard is very small. Almost any shrub makes a fair hedgerow, but some are better than others. The althea, fall blooming, is good where sufficient space can be given it. Others are the philadelphus and the new redleaf barberry.

SCHOOLS SOLVE CHILD'S PROBLEM IN ARITHMETIC

Defer Intricate Studies to Higher Grades.

BY DR. WILLIAM JOHNSON.
[Superintendent of Chicago Schools.]

Our purpose in reorganizing the arithmetic course of study in the public elementary schools of Chicago has been to provide school children with arithmetic on a more practical, sane, and sensible basis.

In order to accomplish this, we have taken two steps. The first is, the adjustment of the course of study to meet today's needs, and the second, a new technique for teaching arithmetic, which is now being used experimentally in a number of Chicago's elementary schools. The reorganization of the course of study in arithmetic affects all grades of the elementary schools.

No formal arithmetic is required in the first and second grades. This does not mean that no arithmetic is taught in the first two grades. It simply means that the work in arithmetic consists of giving the child experiences in using numbers and developing number concepts. There are no definite drills.

Use Practical Method.

This is because we have come to realize that the learning of numbers is a slow process, one of intricate mental procedures. The child must learn the name of each number and its place in a series, that is, that five comes after four, and eight comes before nine. He must be able to write the numbers legibly. He must know the simplest fractional parts of a whole. All these concepts must be developed through practical experiences in the first two grades in order that the child may have a basis for quantitative thinking about things that are real and vital to him. Too much time has been spent in the past in drill on number facts that had no meaning for him. The child seldom completely mastered these facts.

In teaching arithmetic, as well as in teaching reading and writing, tradition has been routed by scientific studies in education. This third member of the well known three "R's" has come in for its share of revision and reorganization in the schools of our nation. We, in Chicago, have been carrying on experimental studies in a number of schools for the last several years to determine in what way the arithmetic course of study might be adjusted to serve better the boys and girls of the elementary schools of our city.

Study Made Easier.

Arithmetic is one of the older subjects in the public schools of our nation. It was introduced, some time later than reading and writing, to serve the needs of the tradesmen and industrial workers who made up a substantial part of our population. In the early textbooks pupils were given problems dealing with situations entirely foreign to their everyday experiences. Arithmetic came to be considered an excellent type of training for the mind, a form of mental discipline.

With our better understanding of the nature of learning, educators throughout the United States have been demanding a type of arithmetic in the schools which would meet more adequately the needs and interests of the children.

It is recognized throughout the country that more children fail in arithmetic than in any other school subject. It is in the middle and upper grades where most of these failures have occurred. Teachers' comments together with the results of tests and experiments have shown the need for placing certain topics in different grades. Difficult topics such as long division, common fractions, and division by decimals were moved up a year or more in the grades and the less difficult topics such as the addition and subtraction of decimals were moved downward.

Given Better Knowledge.

By this better distribution of topics throughout the grades, the work is more easily taught by the teacher and more easily learned and remembered by the pupil. He will come to the end of the eighth grade, however, having mastered the same number of topics in arithmetic, but with greater skill and a better understanding than was formerly possible.

This is not due to the change in placement of topics alone, but also to the change in philosophy and method of teaching arithmetic. The new philosophy accepts the fact that arithmetic is a coherent, unified science rather than a number of unrelated problems. Facts and skills in arithmetic should be taught and made meaningful through the continual use and application of these facts in daily life situations.

The method that is now in use in our public schools is adapted to the individual differences of pupils in their rate of learning. It provides an enriched program and a challenge for the pupil who has special ability in arithmetic in addition to providing adequate concrete practice material for the child who needs more experience with his number concepts and skills. This method of teaching arithmetic is comparable to the individualized methods of teaching reading. It provides for the needs, interests, and abilities of the individual child. It is one solution of the problem of fitting the three "R's" to the needs and abilities of every child in the public schools of Chicago.

Houston, Texas.

Chicago Security Pawners,
Chicago, Illinois,
Gentlemen:

Thank you for your letter of January 31—it certainly gives your customers a feeling of security to receive this kind of letter from you.

Your letter creates a great deal of confidence in me and makes me want to spend more money with you, although I do not know what I could spend it for right now. However, maybe my wife will be buying more jewelry and she can spend some of her money with you. Assuring you again of my appreciation and my continued patronage, I am,

Sincerely,
E.——S.——

"Bargains in One Rm. Apartments!"

Newlyweds made this statement in the Bryn Mawr the other day:

"Before our marriage we came to the conclusion that we would have a much greater chance to find true happiness in a 1 rm. apartment in a clean, well managed building in a good district than if we took a 3 room apartment in a mediocre building in a less desirable neighborhood.

"With that thought in mind we started on the near north side and worked on out to Evanston. At the Bryn Mawr we found a bargain in a 1 rm. apartment—what we believe is the most for our money. As we sat in the apartment that has now become our first home, these features 'trotted out' one by one. The size of the living room [some 22 ft. long], the separate kitchens, the extra large closets, the newness and cleanliness of the carpet, the colorful furnishings and decorating, and the high type of people we saw in the lobby."

If your budget calls for a 1 rm. furnished apartment between $50 and $60 a month, come and see ours—compare them with others you have seen.

The Bryn Mawr also has 1½, 2 and 3 rm. furnished and unfurnished apartments.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Ducks Are Banded.

September 24, 1938.

Mallard hen is released after being banded at Du Page county farm.

each stamped with a number and instructions for notifying the federal government if the duck is shot by a hunter or retrapped.

Ten ducks were trapped and banded on the farm this week, then were released to feed on the pond or continue their fall migration to warmer climates. Four of the 10 were mallards and the other six were teal. The trap which attracted these migrating birds has a wooden frame covered with ordinary chicken wire. The whole base of the trap is wooden so that it floats and may easily be moved to new locations on the pond. However, a part of the wooden platform is submerged so that the trapped ducks have a chance to swim. The rest of the trap floor is above the water and oats and shelled corn are left there for the birds to eat.

Lots of Food Inside.

The ducks, attracted by the feed inside the trap, paddle through a funnel entrance and then are unable to find their way out. It wouldn't be surprising if the birds were willing to remain inside the trap, because they always have plenty of water and lots of corn to eat.

From the results so far it looks like the ducks are not quite as smart or wily as the drakes. Of the 10 ducks trapped and banded, only one has been a drake. Several times there were drakes paddling around in front of the entrance as though they had ideas about getting some free corn, but so far only one has been tempted inside.

One of the blue winged teal hens has its band on the wrong leg, but that isn't a mistake. All of the other banded birds have their metal tags on their right legs, but this duck's right leg had been injured in such a way that it wouldn't hold a band. A turtle evidently had grabbed its foot. All its toes were gone so a band on that leg would have slipped off. But the little teal wasn't handicapped in her flying. When released she flew as well as any of the others.

Follow Life Histories.

Hundreds of interesting life histories of ducks are on record because of the activities of bird banders. A mallard banded in Fulton county, Illinois, was caught in a muskrat trap in Manitoba; a black duck banded last autumn in Connecticut was shot this spring in Labrador; a teal banded in Louisiana was killed in Honduras; and a pintail banded in North Dakota was killed in Guatamala.

Undoubtedly some of the ducks which are being banded on the Tribune's farm will be reported back this fall or will return to the traps next spring or next fall. Records of their movements will make interesting reading as well as provide information to the federal government and ornithologists.

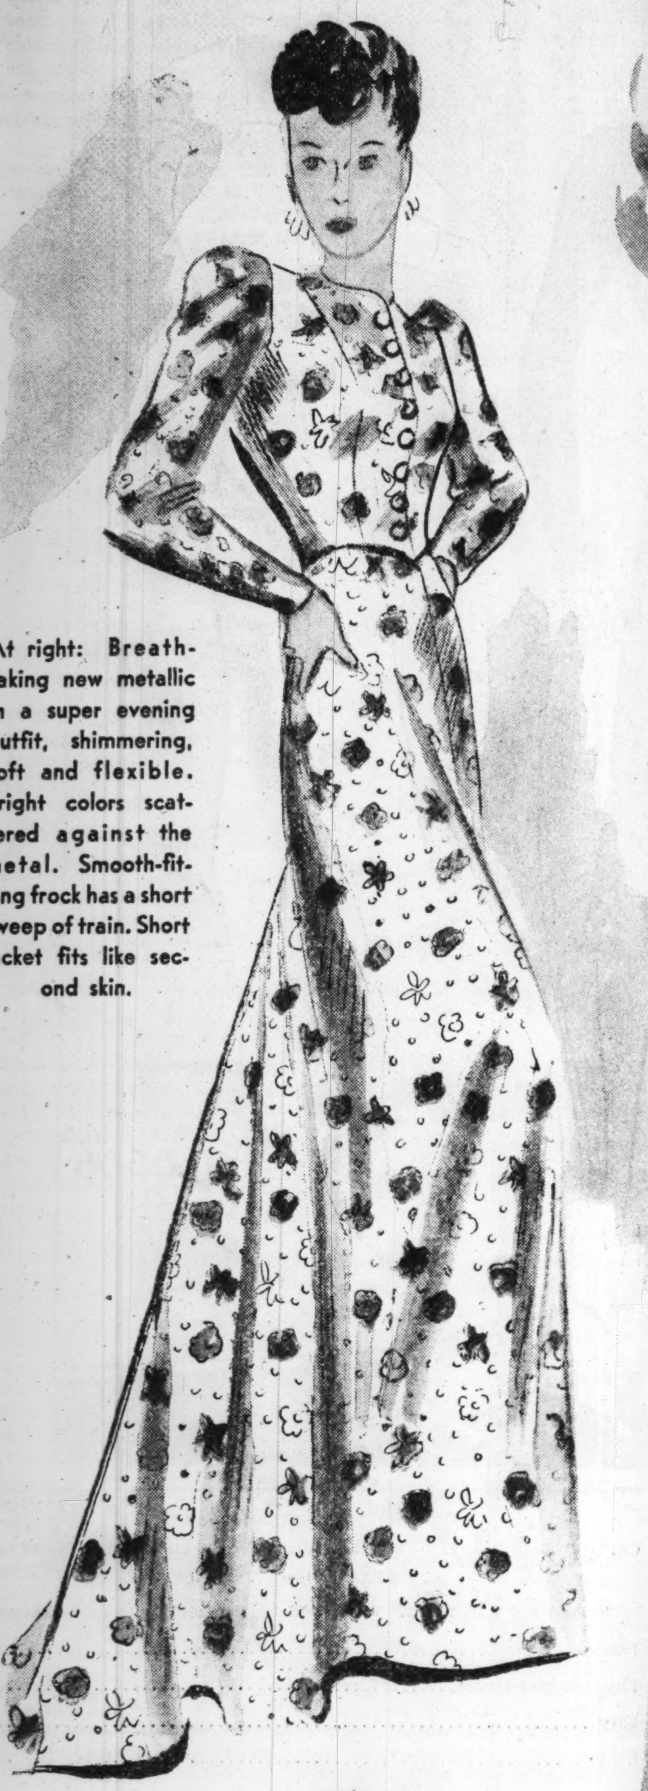
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Part 6 Women's Features

SEPTEMBER 25, 1938



At right: Breath-taking new metallic in a super evening outfit, shimmering, soft and flexible. Bright colors scattered against the metal. Smooth-fitting frock has a short sweep of train. Short jacket fits like second skin.

Exciting First Fashions . . . Dress Parade Clothes

By RHEA SEEGER

UNQUESTIONABLY the most exciting first fashions that show the way of a new and feminine elegance are the dress parade clothes. Tweeds and smart woolens give you a lift; sleek, sophisticated afternoon dresses of thin woolens or thick crêpes and all the mixtures of colored metallics and other novelties do manage to cause a certain amount of dither; but it's the flashing new dinner outfits, the spectacular costumes of wool festooned with fur, and the newest evening clothes that start the season with the right verve

There's flash and glitter, but they're under control. There is a lot of dull black in both dinner clothes and daytime dresses, highlighted with gold braid, silver trim, or combined with metallics, but it's been mixed by experts, so that anything resembling a display of bad taste is impossible. Needlework as only the French fingers can patiently turn out decorates without offense even when metallic thread is used. Only the most finished embroidery is featured, and just the correct amount. Everything else is line and fit.

The big fashion news—sleeves—from the clever, controled large puffed sleeves on evening wraps, the huge, effective fur sleeves on coats, to the interesting dolman effects on smart daytime dresses. Even the suits and ensembles of coat and dress boast a new sleeve trickery. At least the shoulders are squared off and smartly proclaim a new fall season. Snug-fitting little jackets are fitted smoothly, but the sleeves have the necessary bunchiness at the shoulderline.

Color is as important as always in any new season showings. Odd off-shades make this new stuff especially noticeable. There' a lovely subtlety to the combines, and dark goes under light for a change. Dresses are made of two colors, a half-and-half combine of top and skirt, or a wide panel of a contrasting color is gathered down the front of the skirt to cross the chest diagonally. Everything is suave and smooth, even the flat shirrings and other intricate fullness contrived by folds, tucks, shirrings, or simple gathering.

Ensembles are outstanding successes, for the blouse tops have been skilfully designed so that they become an integral part of the skirt, achieving a slim, smart dress effect. Belts are laced through the blouse, and the peplum of the blouse fits down smoothly over the hipline and has decoratively cut outlines seeming to be appliquéd to the skirt because they fit so smoothly. Coats for these high-fashion ensembles are longer. Some hang in swagger lengths, others are semi-fitted. Some have highish collars, and others boast large sleeves and a simple collarless neckline. Braid, decorative frogs, big buttons, and cut-out appliqué make the unfurred coats smartly decorative and high fashion.

Simple black daytime dresses, famous for their slim distinction as an ideal basic or foundation costume, feature fine fabrics, a superlative fitted streamline, exquisite detail, and a Puritan plainness that on the figure becomes something really to get excited over. With such a dress you play the most intriguing game of all, that is, the matter of dressing "up" or "down." Such a dress reflects the originality of the owner. Costume accessories, gloves, hat, and handbag, costume jewelry, belts, and jackets of vivid colorings all add up for high marks of individuality. The first showings have the best of these foundation dresses, feature new silhouettes, interesting new sleeves, just as unusual necklines, and the finest of workmanship, worthy of the finest of fabrics.

Almost spectacular are the newest of flashing evening ensembles, consisting of a gown superbly molded to the figure and the matching fitted jacket with long sleeves. Velvet, stiff satin, and metallics as fluid as water are high-fashion materials.

We've sketched five newly unpacked models, each particularly significant of the new fall and early winter fashions.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

We all can get through a season with only one or more dinner or evening gowns, but we need an almost inexhaustible supply of daytime frocks. Some must be rather dressy, others tailored and trim. The two dresses illustrated today offer a little of both. The design at the left is a simple afternoon frock for all kinds of social occasions. The other is a shirtwaist frock for school and business.

Shirring is the principal feature of the dressier frock. The sleeves are cut dolman fashion and share in the shoulder gathers. The V-neckline is plain, the waistline slim, and the skirt fitted to the figure, except at the hemline, where it acquires comfortable flare. All types of silks make up well in this version. If you prefer something a little different, give the neckline a contrasting trim and a full bow, lengthen the sleeves, and dispense with a belt, using instead some strategically placed gathers to define the waist. Satin and woolen are especially fine selections for this latter version.

No one needs to remind you that plaids are up on top for favor this season. In either woolen or silk they're grand for the tailored frock, which has a shirtwaist collar of lingerie fabric, detachable for laundering. Under the shoulder yoke is sufficient shirring to lend softness to the bodice, which has two pockets, a kerchief, and buttons or studs. The sleeves are squared at the shoulders and gathered into wrist bands. Paneling and plaits give the skirt both trimness and fulness.

Style No. 3265 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 4⅛ yards of 39 inch material, with ¼ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

George Rector

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The English channel separates England from France. The distance is twenty miles from Calais to Dover, yet the two countries might well be thousands of miles apart as far as habits of eating and drinking go. The Briton likes his food served devoid of frills and furbelows, and laughs heartily at any system of flavoring the daily provender.

No Parisian would dream of seasoning a dish after it arrives at the table, for that would be an insult to the chef. The Englishman, however, surrounds himself with a battery of bottles containing various meat sauces, condiments, and prepared mustard and forthwith flavors the dish to suit himself.

The famous Simpson's on the Strand is noted for large joints which are roasted on a dangling spit. Roast beef and the ever popular Southdown mutton with thick broiled chops and steaks running a close second. The climate of England calls for heavy roasts and boils, with solid variations like steak and kidney pies. When the roast or fowl is placed on the table our British cousin starts reaching for the bottles, and the first liberal helping is mustard, and believe me, it's good and hot. This reminds me of a question that was put to the head of a large mustard concern. He was asked: "How's business?" His reply was, "Excellent." That brought the comment from the interviewer that people certainly consume a great quantity of mustard. The mustard monarch replied, "Our profits do not come entirely from the amount of mustard that people eat, but rather from what they don't eat."

That's true, I believe, because many a time in Rector's I have seen this very thing happen. The patron will invariably leave on his plate about half as much as he has eaten. And so, the Englishman must have his mustard to go with his roasts and steaks. He will at the same time help himself to some of the other hot meat sauces, such as Worcestershire, walnut catsup, mushroom catsup, and perhaps several others. O, yes, the Englishman has his sauces, alright, but not in the manner the Frenchman has them.

In France most dishes are prepared in a sauce. If it's steak—well, that might appear à la Bordelaise, and it's so with fish and vegetables.

The national nonalcoholic beverage in England is tea, and their neighbor across the channel goes in for coffee or chocolate. While the Frenchman is drinking his glass of red wine, the Englishman is having his half and half or Scotch and soda. That's the difference between two countries which are but twenty miles apart.

Now here's a recipe which should become a family favorite. My guess is that company will enjoy it, too:

ONION SOUP AU GRATIN.

3 pints beef stock or consommé
4 large onions
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 club rolls, sliced thin and toasted
Grated Parmesan cheese

Slice onions thin and brown in butter. Add more butter, if necessary, to keep them moist while cooking. When onions are tender, add the beef stock, Worcestershire sauce, and seasonings. Bring to boiling point; pour soup into earthen or glass casserole (individual size is best) and arrange the thinly sliced toasted roll on top. Sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over roll and put under low broiler flame to brown. A marmite is the proper utensil to serve this type of soup in for a decidedly bourgeois effect.

A broiled halibut steak spread with maitre d'hotel butter offers a change. Would you like to try it?

BROILED HALIBUT, MAITRE d'HOTEL.

Purchase chicken halibut steaks weighing about twelve ounces each. Season with salt and pepper and rub with soft butter. Place on greased rack of broiler and broil under moderate flame until nicely browned, allowing about eight minutes to each side. Remove steaks to hot platter and spread with maitre d'hotel butter made as follows: Cream three tablespoons of butter. Add a light pinch of cayenne pepper, one teaspoon of finely chopped parsley, and one teaspoon of strained lemon juice. A supply of this butter should be kept in the refrigerator. Excellent on grilled steak and fish.

Small fish or fillets of fish when sautéed in the frying pan to a golden brown (known to the French as doré or gilded) are sautéed in clarified butter to a light golden brown and served as a dry sauté. Here is an example:

FILLET OF SOLE, DORE.

Since we do not have sole in our local waters, we use the nearest fish resembling it, which is flounder. Flounder fillets may be purchased the year around and from coast to coast. Season fillets with salt and white pepper and dip lightly in flour. Fry in clarified butter to a light golden brown. Remove to hot platter or plate and serve with half a lemon. Garnish with a sprig of parsley.

Now if we fancy a saute Meuniere, we proceed as above, and when the fish is transferred to a hot plate it is sprinkled with finely chopped parsley and a few drops of lemon juice. A piece of butter is then put in the frying pan, and when it turns to a light brown it is immediately removed from the fire and poured over the fish. Allow one tablespoon of golden brown butter for each service. This Meuniere mode is also suited to the preparation of frog legs, sweetbreads, trout, shad roe, calves' liver, all small fish or fish fillets.

The next recipe which I will give you is a very delectable one for the serving of fresh green vegetables. It is called "panaché."

VEGETABLE PANACHE.

This is a combination of three fresh green vegetables and was a specialty of Rector's restaurant:

Combine equal portions of new string beans, cut en Julienne; new lima beans, and new green peas which have been cooked separately in boiling salted water. When vegetables are tender they are thoroughly drained of all water and lightly seasoned with salt and white pepper. They are then arranged in three distinct layers in a large vegetable dish, and whipped cream covers the entire top. In serving use a large spoon and cut through the whipped cream right down to the bottom layer of vegetables. This IS good. However, just another word. Do not whip cream too stiff—just enough to hold its shape and seep through the vegetables.

And now, Jeeves, you may bring me my 'alf and 'alf.

Using Stale Bread.

Don't throw away that stale loaf of bread! Wrap it in a wet cloth about 1 minute, then place it in a 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Serve warm.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

If you've had your eye on the imports, getting at least a fashion book glimpse, you have noticed how simple the new dresses are, and how they take favorably to interesting trimming. I had a close-up of the Paris creations recently when I slipped away to New York for the express purpose of seeing them. I wasn't disappointed and I got a lot of new ideas. I'm no copycat, but a girl can't help absorbing a few facts when they're right under her nose, can she? I'm so mad about clothes, they're almost my whole life, and I had one entrancing session with sketching pad and pencil when I designed this dress.

One thing about it you are certain to like; It fits like paper on the wall without, of course, being daring. The bodice hugs the figure and is fitted with buttons. Around the slim waistline and rather narrow hem of the skirt there is—look closely—yes, candlewick! It's the same stuff that creates those much beloved bedspreads. It sounds difficult, but it's extremely easy, once you get the knack. All you do is take the material of the dress, woolen in the case of mine, and embroider over and over in the same spot with woolen yarn, leaving loops on the right side. Then cut the loops so that you have little fuzzy balls. That's candlewick, and that's the trimming on the dress. My frock is black throughout.

If you don't like the idea of a candlewick trim for the waistline, put it instead on the high neckline, to match the hem. But don't spatter candlewick all over the place. You don't want to overdo a good thing, no matter how enthusiastic you may be about it!

Miss Leila M. Stumpf, Aurora: To remove the stains from a bathtub or lavatory I find that a paste made of cream of tartar and peroxide is very effective. Treat Furniture to Dusting with Grit-free Cloth Proper treatment of the dust cloth which you use for your nicely finished furniture is of prime importance. Don't let them get gritty through ingrained dust and dirt particles. Use cloths which have a soft and pliable texture, and wash them at least once a week in hot, sudsy water. Then, too, an occasional wiping of your furniture with a cloth wrung out from mild soap suds won't hurt it.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

There's a whole new makeup trend this season demanding clear complexions and color accents in the blue-red tones. A luscious makeup awaits the fair skinned woman who uses lipstick in a grapewine shade and an individually blended powder that emphasizes the creamy fairness of her skin.

Even to a blase old-timer on the beauty sidelines this season's makeup is exciting. You just haven't a notion of what change and improvement you can make in that familiar old face of yours until you've worked out a makeup to go with the new costume colors. The shades of the new lipsticks are unusual and truly beautiful. And it isn't often we can praise a shade that's "unusual." Freakish shades are one of our pet peeves. But these aren't freaky.

One of the nicest of the new makeups we've seen . . . and we advise all clear skinned brunettes to have a look at it . . . is keyed to a grapewine lipstick, one designed especially to wear with the vintage costume colors you'll find running through the fall clothes. But its wear needn't be restricted to the fuchsias and burgundies. If your skin is clear, your brow untroubled, your hair polished, you'll find it can dramatize you in everything, especially classic blacks.

This year any lipstick with orange undertones is going to look peculiar. The blue tones are the ones with the "umph," if you get what we mean. Mouths will be luscious, faintly grape-purplish patches in clear, healthly pale faces. It's all romantic looking as can be.

The grapewine stick we love so well isn't too purple. It's a luscious deep red with just the right amount of blue in it. It's wonderfully creamy, too, and lips must be dewy looking, but it clings remarkably well. On the lips it has all the rich, soft, winey color that the best rouged lips must have this year.

There is a rouge to match, either dry or cream. Rouge is to be used sparingly. You want to look a touch pale and awfully romantic. The house that makes this grapewine pair always has believed in individually blended powder. You have it blended, and this process isn't expensive, right at the counter where you do your beauty shopping. They can evolve the perfect pearly makeup for you this way.

We advise you to have your powder blended if yours is a skin tone that's difficult to match. You'll find it satisfactory at any time, but this year, with a whole new makeup trend and a lot of new costume colors to contend with, it's particularly worth while.

[For information about this new lipstick, telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0100, or write to her in care of The Chicago Tribune.]

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids and tells you about them daily in The Chicago Tribune.

"Dutch Treat," Girls, if Bill Causes Fight

What is the correct form of introduction? If you want to learn how persons should be introduced, read the leaflet, "The Etiquet of Introductions," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

Too often this department finds we address ourselves to women exclusively. It isn't because the men don't need a little advice on the observance of the etiquet rules. Certainly they are no "pineapples of perfection." The one reason that is responsible for our neglect of the boys, more than any other, is the fact that we feel we have more women readers than men, since our column appears in the women's section.

We are addressing the women again today, but this time it is because they are the ones who are the principal offenders. The specific behavior we have taken all this time to lead up to is the noise and the clatter made by a group of women when they are fighting over who shall pay the bill.

This long has been something that has sloshed around in my brain as a great puzzle. There seem to be few, if any, women who escape. And they are not at all the kind of women who might be doing it as a means of attracting attention. It's a mystery. Men can solve the same problem with so much less noise that an observer might think the question of which one was lucky enough to get to pay the check had all been settled long before the group made its appearance in public.

As I say, this has quietly puzzled me for years. Until now I haven't been talkative about it. But! Just the other day there were two women quarreling on the platform of the street car as to which would "treat." What a treat! Seven cents. There was arguing, snatching, and clutching at each other's sleeves, stuffing the coins back in an unguarded pocket, and such. It was a fairly crowded car, too, with many others waiting with one foot on the step and the conductor with his palm itching. It was this demonstration that activated me into this public denouncement.

I will say this, however. That in most cases it is more than a seven cent street car fare that arouses this strange instinct. I have seen the same picture when girls are having dinner together, luncheon, or going to the theater. But because the amount at stake is a little larger does not make it any more becoming.

My advice is that if you are not clever to get hold of the check first and pay it without causing a riot, don't wrestle with the person who has beaten you to it. Instead, let her pay it since she wants to so much. You, then, consider yourself under a social obligation to that person and repay her another time or in another way. Either that or go Dutch treat if you can arrive at such an agreement without staging an equally unbecoming exhibition.

Autumn Formal

By Eleanor Jewett.

The year is at that time again
When fancy work engages her
And every shade of red or gold
Creates a most fantastic stir
In her staid heart. She thrills to bright
And vivid colors, each and all
She weaves into the gorgeous gown
That decks her in the days of fall.
The shadowed greens of summer weeks
Are ribboned through with autumn hues;
The year discusses every shade—
But reds are what she LOVES to use.

Fashion Group Plans Showing of Furnishings

"Fashions in Furnishings" is to be the theme of a rotating review of decorative interiors which will be presented on a revolving stage at a luncheon arranged by the Chicago Fashion Group, a noncommercial organization of smart young "career" women, on Oct. 4 in the Congress Casino. Tickets may be procured from Mrs. Frank D. Webster, 5341 Harper avenue, and the public is invited.

The group in presenting frames to enhance the picture of more effective living will show the modern furnishing styles of tomorrow, and the past of yesterday in terms of the fashions of today. Important trends for the current season will be introduced by a series of skilfully coördinated room settings. There will be a one room studio apartment, for example, which will be called "Cocktail Party" and which will have real people in it, while in the "Baroque Boudoir" guests will see a lovely young woman relaxing.

In the reception room nearby will be permanent displays showing the latest developments in all phases of furnishings and the decorative arts, and a series of brief fantasy sketches will serve to highlight trends in color and design. "Fashions in Furnishings" will show furniture, drapery, and floor covering styles just as fashion shows point up the newest modes in clothes.

A Cheese Language.

The Androuet restaurant in Paris, which serves no less than 247 varieties of cheese, is attempting to develop a language of cheese. From years of observation the waiters in the establishment have found that artists and painters usually order Camembert; staid, substantial men and women, Gruyere; imaginative people, Livarot. Adventurous persons call for Roquefort, and the lovelorn, for some reason as yet unfathomed, seem to prefer goat cheese.

New Winter Color Idea Has Beige-Pink Walls

An attractive new color scheme for the winter living room has walls of a light beige-pink, ceiling and woodwork of pearl gray, textured broadloom rug of gray-blue, draperies of floral chintz on a gray ground and upholsteries of gray-blue, beige and dusty rose.

Less Expensive Cuts of Meat Need Braising

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

While tender beef cuts, such as rib roast and porterhouse steak, are cooked in dry heat, the less tender ones, round steak and chuck pot roast, for examples, must be cooked in moist heat, or they'll not make good eating.

Last week I described in this column methods to use for roasting and broiling the tender cuts of beef. Today I'll try to hit the high spots in braising methods.

These are the cuts of beef to be braised [cooked by moist heat at a low temperature]: Round steak, bottom round [Swiss steak], ground beef, flank steak, rolled flank or flank fillets, short ribs, rolled plate, arm steak, arm pot roast, English cut from the shank, rolled neck, chuck pot roast, shoulder fillet, blade steak, blade pot roast, rolled rump or rump roast. As I mentioned last Sunday, the rump roast in a superior beef carcass may be cooked by roasting, but in medium grade or below, braising is required for tenderness.

Any of the beef cuts mentioned may be cooked by this method:

BRAISED BEEF.

Wipe the piece of meat with a damp cloth on both sides. Dip it in flour. Flour serves to help with browning. Brown on both sides in a small amount of fat, season each side with salt and pepper, put a cover on the pan, and reduce the heat. The meat should cook very gently until it is tender. The time will depend upon size and thickness of the cut. Round steak may be done in 45 minutes, Swiss steak will take 2 to 3 hours, and a pot roast 3 to 4 hours.

Liquid may be added during the cooking. Use water, sour cream, or tomato juice, but add it a little at a time, let it cook off, and then add more. In this way the meat will be browner and of better flavor than it would be if a large amount of liquid were added all at once.

Stews are modifications of the braising method but, in this case, the meat is cooked in a rather large amount of water. Loss of meat flavor into the cooking water isn't objectionable if the dish is a stew, although it certainly would be if it were a braised meat dish. Cuts of beef which are scrappy or least attractive for cooking by braising methods are good stew possibilities. Heel of the round, plate "boiling beef," beef brisket, corned beef, knuckle soup bone and neck may be cooked successfully in a rather large amount of water. Needless to say, these are very inexpensive meats, although they're just as nutritious as the higher priced cuts.

BEEF STEW.

Choose one of the cuts mentioned and cut the meat into pieces. Flour it and brown it well in hot fat, then add water to cover and turn the heat very low. If there are bones, cook them in the stew for the first hour or so, as they contain a good deal of flavor. Allow 2½ to 3 hours, and if vegetables are added, do not put them into the stew until the last half hour of cooking.

Salt and pepper are the only seasonings actually needed for a stew, but there are many possible variations in flavor which can be produced by judicious use of other seasonings. One might add a few peppercorns, a small piece of bay leaf, a few cloves stuck into an onion or, perhaps, a mere whiff of garlic. When garlic is used, most cooks brown a clove of it in the fat when the pieces of meat are being browned, and discard it before water is added. A faint trace of garlic is very appetizing, but I can think of nothing worse than a stew which is strongly flavored with it.

Veal, pork, and lamb have been ignored in these two columns on roasting and braising meats. Each of them deserves a column to itself, I think, and so I plan to give one to each in the three succeeding Sundays.

Yoke Is Important Factor in Slim Frock from Paris

No. 5261—The Paris pattern for this frock is available in sizes 11, 13, 15, 17, and 19 years. Size 15 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The slim young things in Paris, as elsewhere, like frocks with fullness. This favoritism doesn't extend to skirts and hiplines, however. These must remain slender no matter what whims invade the styling of the bodice. One of the modes currently popular in Paris is sketched for you today. I glimpsed it on one of the smartest of the French debutantes, who wore it to a tea and art exhibit recently. The high neckline has a standup collar, and the shoulder yoke is absolutely plain. Below it there is plentiful shirring that extends into the sleeves as well. The latter are full all the way to the wrists. The ultimate effect is youthful and soft. The skirt below the slender waistline is hip-hugging and has only two plaits, one in front and another in back, to lend the essential fullness.

The original of this frock is created in mulberry crêpe. I suggest any of the new fall shades in silk, and lightweight woolens are ace possibilities. Both business and college girls in America will like this model I know.

Eighteenth Century Sectional Tables Have Many Uses

One of the most beautiful of all dining room tables is the sectional one of mahogany, used in the eighteenth century in England and colonial America. Excellent copies of this table are available in good furniture stores today.

It is made up of a long center table and two end tables. These end tables have drop leaves and can be used as side tables or as console tables when not attached to the center table.

Stubbornness Used by Child as a Defense

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

One trouble with us grownups is that we are too apt to think of much of our child's behavior as a "problem," and of our child as being decidedly "out of order," as you might say.

For example, our little girl has an outburst of anger, and we think, "She has a violent temper! How naughty, how terrible! She must learn self-control."

Or our son of 15 becomes irritable when we insist on sweaters and rubbers, and generally "hover" over him; or our older son becomes resentful when we continue to exercise jurisdiction over his hours, his friends, his amusements, or his speed in driving. We think too readily of such responses in terms of disobedience or defiance, in terms of fault or even undesirable character traits.

Here is where we make a mistake which leads frequently to unsuccessful handling; or, with an older child, even to antagonism. What we need, instead, is to realize that a great deal of the behavior of a child is a sign of growth: or getting older, of changing, of meeting his world and adjusting himself to the people in it. If we could get this slant on things, gaining partly in this way our child's point of view, we would be able to meet situations that arise so very much better, because we would then have some perspective.

I could give you many instances of what I mean; but today I want to devote the rest of the column to stubbornness as a specific example.

Certain desirable character traits are often manifested in childhood under the guise of stubbornness. The mother or father who is wise will learn how to handle this behavior without breaking a child's spirit or weakening his determination.

Of course, all stubbornness does not answer this description. Some of it is just a general contrariness or resistance that is aroused by chronically poor management, or by the constant interference of a mother or nurse with a child's play and interests.

Of all a child's traits I think stubbornness takes the prize for producing in a grownup the feeling of utter helplessness. The child who is in the grip of a stubborn spell makes you feel like a piece of putty, or as if you were banging your head against a stone wall. The child who may not be even old enough to dress himself knows how to use this weapon and defense.

For defense is just what stubbornness often is. Weapon, too, describes it in other situations. Children use stubbornness to help them to get what they want, which is to do some things and not to do others.

To understand this we must realize that children have certain strong primitive instincts, urges and needs, like those for play, physical activity, and so on. It is necessary for them to obey these impulses in order to grow and to develop in mind and body.

But civilization in the person of grownups, some wise and some not, puts all sorts of obstacles in their way. Little children must be quiet or they must be clean; they mustn't hit Joey or bite Sally; they must leave their play to eat, bathe, or sleep; they must say "thanks" to grandpa or "good-night" to the guests. In such varying ways and degrees grownups need to bear down upon the child at a time when he is close to nature.

If you will learn to manage your child well, you will not have to combat stubbornness, certainly not as an habitual form of behavior. The mother who is reasonable in the demands she makes upon her children, who gives them credit for intelligence, and who consistently gives them their way when there can be no real objection to it, will, I can almost guarantee, never have any stubbornness problems to cope with.

Let me tuck in a remark at this point: when I speak of being reasonable in your demands upon your child, I distinctly do not mean giving him reasons and explanations at every step of the way, though there are many times when you should explain. I mean, rather, treating your child in such a way that he senses always your fairness and your consideration of him as a human being.

Here are further suggestions for avoiding or curing stubbornness:

Stubbornness is avoided by the exercise of tact, much the kind of tact you use with your contemporaries.

Say "yes" whenever you can.

Don't enter into a contest of wills —gain your end if you're justified, but not that way.

Make your child feel you are on his side, then he won't feel the impulse td be contrary or stubborn.

Avoid commanding expressions or tones of voice, but on the other hand don't be vacillating when things have to be done. A friendly request, definitly given, which takes for granted the doing, is the one that gets best results.

By Sally Joy Brown.

One of the greatest hardships any invalid must bear is a lack of occupation, something to fill in the endless days and nights, to help the sufferer forget self and pain and discontentment.

For that reason we always like to make a particular effort to fill requests for items which can be utilized by invalids, and have assembled a number of appeals which have recently come to us.

The following letter was written by a patient in a local tuberculosis sanitarium on the northwest side of the city.

"Dear Miss Brown: We have read your column in THE TRIBUNE and have become interested in the numerous kind deeds you are doing daily for persons who need your assistance. We, a group of young men in this sanitarium, would greatly appreciate it if you could possibly obtain a chess set for us. It is something which affords great entertainment, as we are quite limited in our activities. I can assure you that a set could go into no better hands, as this game is perfectly suited to the form of entertainment we are permitted. V. D."

This address will be given to any interested reader.

G. S., who lives on the northwest side, asks for material to help him to pursue the form of occupational therapy he has learned.

"While a patient at Hines hospital, the aid suggested that perhaps you could help me get some material for crocheting rag rugs. Old sheets, pillow cases, curtains [not lace], house dresses, shirts, etc., would do. They may be white or colored. As I am not able to travel on the street car, I would appreciate having the materials sent to me."

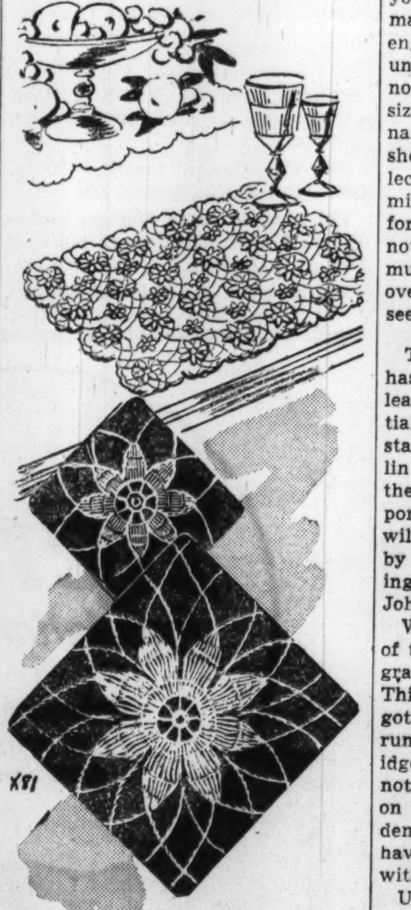
Mrs. C., on the south side, recently suffered an illness which makes it impossible for her to stand on her feet for any length of time. She now earns her living by doing mending and darning of all kinds. Recently she broke the hook which she used for mending silk hosiery, and has been unable to replace it. If some reader has one, she would be most grateful for it.

Floral Crochet Edging Enhances Dinner Doilies



By Ellen Bruce.

Instead of using a large table cloth for dinners which are neither formal nor informal, one might employ the sunflower doily as perfect for any type of table service. The lacey design with the flower in the center is one of the easiest of all the crochet jobs, and a minimum amount of time is required to complete one doily. White, ecru, or any pastel shade may be used, but the preference this season runs to white and ecru.

For instructions for crocheting the doily set in the sunflower design, No. X-81, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth-avenue, New York City.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The question of "writing up" a collection is one which does not bother a stamp collector who uses a printed album but is rather serious to users of blank albums. The first question which arises is, what information shall be placed on the album pages with the stamps, and second, how shall it be done? One collector may wish to show philatelic information only while another may desire to give the entire background of the stamp or issue appearing on the page.

Philatelic information includes such data as the name of the country issuing the stamp, date of issue, number issued, names of the designer of the stamp, the engraver of the die, and the printers of the issue, and details concerning the paper, watermark, if any, perforation, gum, etc. The reason for the issue is likewise philatelic information as is the source of the design used for the stamp, the makeup of the plate, and the method of printing. Philatelic information of this kind appears upon the album pages of the greater collections.

A more recent development among young or new collectors brings the stamp's subject to the foreground, and almost eliminates the dry philatelic facts. If the stamp shows a portrait, the write-up will be a condensed biography of the person depicted. In the most radical cases there may be considerable space given to a history of the artist or sculptor who was responsible for the source of the design. If the subject is a building or a bridge, the write-up will name the designer, the extent of the project, time consumed in building operations, and a lot of other encyclopedic data.

Stamp collectors are rugged individualists who as yet have had no dictation regarding their collections, and who firmly believe in the utmost freedom of expression. For this reason, little may be said for or against any of the various kinds of collections so long as the work therein is performed in a neat and workmanlike manner.

It would be well, however, for all collectors to examine their work to see whether the "write-up" has reached the point where it ceases to be a stamp collection with annotations, or has in fact become a manuscript or typewritten book illustrated with stamps. But even at that, the latter effect may be correct, if that is the way the individual feels about the matter.

In writing up a collection, hand lettering and typewriting are about the only mediums which can be used. Hand lettering when expertly done has a dignity and character far beyond anything so far produced on a machine. But it requires an expert engrosser to keep the small letters uniform and neat. Hand lettered notes should be of about the same size or a very little larger than ordinary typewritten letters and captions should be a little larger. Many collections have been seen which have microscopic lettering, below the limit for normal vision, but even they do not offend artistic sensibilities as much as do the collections with great oversize lettering, where the stamps seem to be a secondary consideration.

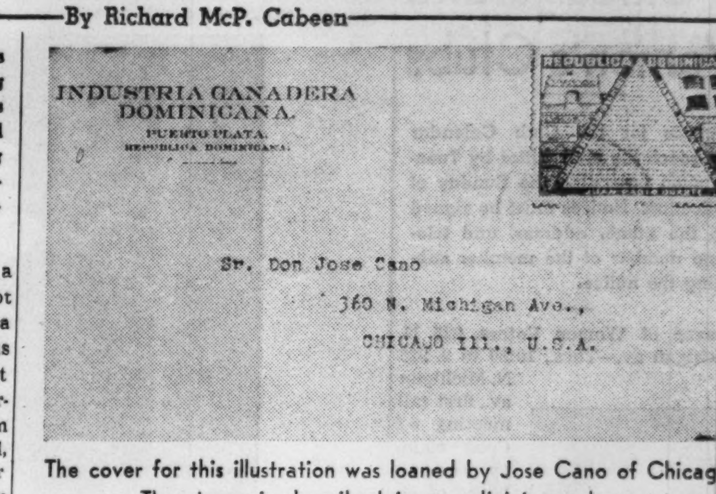
Thursday of each week in October has been selected as the day for releasing a new value of the Presidential series. On Oct. 6, the 14-cent stamp showing the portrait of Franklin Pierce will be released, and on the 13th, the 15-cent value with the portrait of James Buchanan. They will be followed on the 20th and 27th by the 16 and 17-cent values picturing Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson, respectively.

With the exception of Lincoln, none of the four Presidents has heretofore graced a United States postage stamp. This series will conclude the "forgotten" Presidents for the general run of collectors, since Calvin Coolidge, the only other Chief Executive not now living, will be out of reach on the 5-dollar value. All the Presidents between Johnson and Coolidge have appeared upon postage stamps within recent years.

Up to the end of October only one new value, the 4½-cent, will have been issued, but the ensuing five or six weeks will see five values not previously found in the nation's postage stamps. First day covers of all of the October stamps may be obtained through the postmaster at Washington, D. C., but they must be ordered separately. Unused stamps may be obtained at the philatelic agency, postoffice department, in the same city.

Stamp Notes.

The German Official Stamp agency has placed on sale at face value all remaining stocks of withdrawn Austrian issues. These include 1934-'36 ordinary issue, the 1925-'30 and 1935 air mail sets, and the 1936 and 1937 charity issues. This has dealt a severe blow to those who had prepared to speculate in the Austrian issues, for dealers in the reich are not permitted to charge more than a modest premium for new and current issues.



The cover for this illustration was loaned by Jose Cano of Chicago. The stamp is described in an adjoining column.

Liberia, through Dixon Brown, postmaster general, has announced a new air mail set as issued on Aug. 1. The denominations are 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 20, 30, 50, and 100 cents.

The new Japanese series of stamps announced last year and temporarily in abeyance since the 14-cent value was issued on Feb. 11, 1938, will be issued before July 1, 1939. It is stated that the printing of 50-sen paper currency and wartime government bonds has occupied the entire facilities of the engraving division.

When completed, the entire series will consist of 19 values from 5-rin to 10-yen. Five of these have been issued, the designs for nine others have been selected, and five remain in the hands of the committee of experts which is charged with the suitability of designs and colors and the quality of paper, inks, etc.

The series is pictorial in character and more than 100 separate designs have been submitted to the committee by Masaru Kimura and Teizo Kasori, minister of communications designers.

The new series will be printed on white paper without the colored silk threads which have for so many years protected Japanese stamps from wear and counterfeiting. The decision to abandon the silk threads was made in the interests of purity of color in the stamps.

Jugo-Slavia has issued 150,000 sets of stamps to commemorate the Balkan Olympic games which opened on Sept. 11. There are four values: .50 plus .50 dinars, orange, runner at the finish line; 1 plus 1 dinar, green hurdle race; 1.50 plus 1.50 dinars, red, pole vaulter, and 2 plus 2 dinars, blue, weight thrower. The stamps are 22x38 mm. in size and will be on sale until Nov. 30, and will be acceptable for letter postage to Dec. 31, 1938. In Jugo-Slavia, 100 paras equal 1 dinar which equals about 2 1-3 cents in American money.

The Dominican Republic stamp shown on the cover illustrated today was issued on the centenary of the Trinitaria, a secret revolutionary society which was founded in Santo Domingo, Haiti, for the express purpose of forming a free and independent state out of a portion of that country. That free state is now the Dominican Republic.

The society was founded by Juan Pablo Duarte, Francisco del Rosario Sanchez, and Ramon Matias Mella, Duarte being 25 years old and his companions even younger. The society progressed on the chain letter principle, with each member obligated to line up three converts to the cause. On Feb. 27, 1844, the Trinitarians revolted and established the new republic.

The stamp shows the oath of the society in full, the Baluarte, a Haitian fort which was taken in the uprising, and the Dominican Republic flag.

The 1939 edition of Scott's Standard Postage Stamp catalog, which was published on Sept. 19, contains 1,353 pages of stamp listings and includes nearly 3,000 more varieties than were listed last year. For the first time, due to a change in the stamp illustrations law, the United States section is illustrated completely. This is the first catalog published since the reorganization of the Scott Stamp and Coin company, and the new proprietor of the catalog, the Scott Publishing company, now lists values of stamps rather than prices. Hugh M. Clark, for 25 years editor of the catalog, is now president of the publishing company. The catalog's price is $3.

Automatic coal stokers mean you can use less expensive grades of coal, and save on fuel bills, as well as labor. One type stoker unit has a manually fed hopper which you feed at periodic intervals. Another type is automatically fed, and is on the job night and day, adding coal when the house temperature needs it and slowing down fire when house is sufficiently warm. And you get more heat from a smaller amount of coal! Both types of units are thermostatically controled.

A new type of nurse for installation in your home is mechanical and portable. A little, white radio unit, which can be plugged into an electric outlet in the nursery or in the room of a person who is ill. In connection with this white unit there's also a brown one which you carry around the house with you and plug in wherever you happen to be. Any message which comes from the nursery or sickroom you can hear—and answer!

New, low cost prefabricated fireplace units will circulate heat not only through one room, but through adjoining rooms as well. Such a unit naturally lessens the amount of heat the central heating plant must send forth. At the same time you are enjoying all the beauty and comfort of a natural wood or coal burning fireplace. The grilles for cold air intake and hot air outlets are of different styles, and the fire chamber is of steel plate.

It's nice to see one old custom dating from way-back-when coming into favor again in some of our newest kitchens. This is tiling around a range. It is picturesque and practical, too, since tile puts up a heated resistance against steam and soil and is very easy to clean. And if you wish, you also can have a tiled harth in front of your range.

A BARGAIN OFFER
Never to Be Forgotten.
As occasionally in the past, so we are now once more in the fortunate position to make an offer so amazing that collectors and dealers alike just scratch their heads and ask, How is it possible?
This time it is Mexico, our neighbor to the south. From this country, which has no overcataloged stamps, we offer 10 selected stamps, cataloging $2.47, for only 10c to serious approval applicants. These are not remainders, errors or reprints, but regular, modern, listed stamps normally selling for around $2.00. Of course we limit each person to one and reserve the right to return the dime to triflers, as our only object in making this amazing offer is to attract to our mailing list serious collectors whom we have never served before.

Paris Fashion Shows Abound with Glitter

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—Never have I seen such gorgeous clothes as passed before these glitter-jaded eyes during the Paris fashion shows for fall and winter. The pageants for the English sovereigns were rich spectacles, but seen from the sidewalk, they were just child's play compared with the big money look of the new evening clothes on parade.

Brocades woven with gold and silver and brilliant color, copied from the fabulous fabrics of the old French court, are revived to make loads of evening gowns. Velvets with a pile as soft and luscious as a feather bed, miles and miles of jewel embroideries, duchess satins, incredible laces and tulles as bright as flames, ermine, sable and silken fox are dished out in the newest wraps and dresses.

Waving plumes give the heads of the evening brigade an air of courtly soirées. Fantastic jewel ornaments, dangling chatelaines and earrings, necklaces copied from those of Indian maharajahs, enhance the plutocratic scenery.

Imperial violet and regal red are the two colors that just naturally dominate these styles, and there is lots of expensive white, of course.

Pinks almost as violent as the reds are important evening shades, and royal blues are present. In and out through every show are many peerless black evening gowns, in velvet, lace and satin and lavishly flanked by jeweled effects.

The evening silhouette is split up into almost every line you ever saw. There are many full skirted evening gowns with insignificant bodices. For public doings in restaurants, cabarets, and theaters, dress lines are mostly slim, mostly have big sleeves, and usually they show a lot of flesh from chin to bosom.

There is a fine assortment of wraps to wear with such dresses. Outstanding among them are Molyneux's gaudy colored tweed jackets laden with embroidery, and Schiaparelli's jackets encrusted with gold nugget embroidery.

Very new looking are slim evening gowns, with the skirts draped a bit toward the back and worn with circular, rather short evening capes decorated with blazing jeweled and gold embroidery motifs as huge as a sundial, seen in the Schiaparelli show.

Chanel's stiff velvet and brocade evening gowns with depressed décolletés hung with feathers, which play up bosom, neck and shoulders, are worn over ruche trimmed stiff petticoats.

Vionnet's full skirted lace and velvet evening gowns, with gorgeous colored velvet flowers and bowknots encrusted all over their yards and yards of skirt, the tops.

Mainbocher's velvet brocaded and vivid tulle evening gowns, with long sleeves or barrel sleeves of fur and skirts that balloon outward at the back, are aristocratic entries.

Alix wows the world with her moire and satin evening gowns having enormous gathered skirts, trimmed with flowers or tied in knots of drapery. This house introduces long, flowing headdresses of silk and glycerined ostrich and a new evening color—nasturtium yellow. Molyneux shows a group of sheer, crinolined evening gowns for formal wear, which are going places this winter.

There are many long, stately evening cloaks and capes in the Paris shows, made of velvet, of the new brocades and lamés. Vionnet's long black fox evening capes look handsomer than any of the silver fox wraps, although silver fox is kept right on the style program. Very new and elegant are full length, full skirted evening cloaks of eiderdown and marabout.

Typical of the regal air of evening dresses this winter is Lanvin's magnificent frock, shown No. 1, which is made of white and silver brocade, with a brief draped and strapless bodice and superskirt. It is decorated by a wide red velvet band, like queen's wear, embroidered with gold, silver and sapphires.

No. 3 is one of the new sleeved dresses that will be seen around the cities at the theater and in restaurants this season. Mainbocher makes this model of imperial violet net, and puts small puffed sleeves of sable in just for fun. Dangle amethyst earrings and bracelets of these stones go with this model.

The Mainbocher evening cloak, shown No. 4, is made of cloth of gold, cut on slender lines, with leg o' mutton sleeves. There is a Watteau panel at the back, hung from the shoulders, adding a queen's grace to the appearance of any woman. The coat fastens on gold and sapphire flower sprays.

Stripes Conspire for Chic Effect in This Sweater

By Jean Macdonald.

There are a hundred and one ways to achieve a striped effect in knitting, and the stockinette stitch illustrated in the hand knitted sweater brings out stripes perfectly. The vertical stripes are alternated with the horizontal effect which is used for the yoke and creates an illusion of perpetual youthfulness. The turnover collar and four button front fastening add another note to the charming simplicity of the ensemble.

For instructions for knitting the sweater with the horizontally striped yoke, No. X-83, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

NewWallpaper Story Told in Delicate Vein

"Clever Tricks in Decoration," a new booklet by Claire Winslow, explains methods of making a large, small, difficult-to-decorate one appear larger and more attractive. Price, 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

By Claire Winslow.

The wallpaper story this winter is going to be one of soft, light, warm and pleasing colors. If you've once lived in a room with dark red walls, or with the brown that was considered so smart a short while ago, or with a definite blue such as aquamarine, and then have moved into one done in one of the pastel tints you know beyond argument that the light colors make a happier environment. Pale yellow, for instance, is like sunshine. It's a spirit lifter. And delicate blue is cool, restful, serene. Light gray is one of the most perfect of all wallpaper or paint colors for walls because it is neutral tone of which you never tire.

All these are good this season. It's the wise woman who remembers that a wall is a background, and that it should be kept a background. The moment it starts demanding attention "on its own" it ceases to fulfill its function.

If you have a yen for cerise or purple, for vivid blue, or bottle green, or screaming pink spread them over small areas only. Be content with an ultra-smart powder room, or with doing an alcove off a bedroom, or with decorating the foyer. But don't go slathering these colors over bedroom or dining room or living room walls. You'll so soon regret it.

Remember, too, that you look into one room from another. The colors in all, therefore, should blend well together. It's best not to think of any interior as completely isolated.

Stripes are going to be as popular for winter as they were for summer, and you'll find them in drapery fabrics as well as in wallpapers. We have in mind a particularly lovely number that shows pale pink and white stripes against a soft, sophisticated blue ground. The blue is one of those indefinite tones that is hard to pigeonhole. It approaches gray. This paper would be beautiful in either bedroom, breakfast room, bathroom or hallway.

A simple striped paper such as this may be finished with a special border: garlands of pink and white flowers looped over a bar of blue on a pink ground.

A lot of the new wallpapers have loose, floppy, artistic flowers in white or off-white that look as if they were splashed on by hand. Two such papers have a similar background color: a suave, pinky-beige. One has huge, white, spiky blossoms with light green leaves and is called Palm Springs. The other shows imaginative flowers that might be water lilies, and is called Marine. These numbers are intended for bedroom, powder room or bathroom wall.

Marine subjects continue to be popular for bathrooms. One brand new paper displays little block pictures spaced over a light yellow ground. The blocks are in brown and scarlet and depict sea gulls, buoys, sailing ships and penguins. Another has boats and birds bobbing around on the waves of a pale green ocean. There are touches of orange-red and gray in the pattern.

Another, for a bedroom with colonial mahogany or maple furniture, is called Provence and has simply little pink roses widely spaced on a soft, blue-green ground. Quimper, shown in the picture today, is a copy of the design on the famous china of that name. Bolder in design is Candida with its lovely clusters of pink daylilies and green leaves on a powder blue ground. There are touches of white in this bedroom paper to match white woodwork.

Still another new number has a pattern of chic French vases filled with amusing little flowers, the vases in pale greeen, and the background in flesh pink. The design goes marching up the paper, stripe fashion. It's for the woman who likes gay, clever, sophisticated things.

For rooms done in the Williamsburg tradition there are excellent copies of authentic old wallpapers. Even the colors are accurately reproduced. Or choose from an increasing number of reproductions of historic New England papers and also of ones from the deep south. These are priced a bit above the average, but they are worth it.

F L O W E R S   A N D   F I G U R E S

Pinky-lavender morning glories on a white background make a delightful new wallpaper for a bedroom. For dinette or informal dining room what could be quainter than the design called Quimper, which copies the little peasant figures on the famous French chinaware of that name? Even the colors are exactly the same.

Clotilde Children's Fashions

The dirndl isn't history yet. It's still the fashion, from imports to the most beautiful domestic creations. Our designer went to work to style a dirndl frock for youngsters, and decided that the ideal combination would be a full skirt with a jumper effect. That the choice is a wise one is readily ascertained by a glance at our sketch today. The slim-as-a-reed silhouettes of growing girls need fullness to relieve angularity, and this frock does just that trick. The suspender straps are designed to stay on the shoulders. The skirt may be shirred at the waist or left with a flat panel. The blouse, tailored to the nth degree, may have a collar or a simple round neckline. The sleeves may be long or short. In either case, they are full.

Procter & Gamble Announces

The New HIGH-TEST OXYDOL

Remarkable New Ingredient Now Added to America's Most Improved Laundry Soap Enables It to Do These Amazing Things in Scientific Tests Against Old-Fashioned Bar and Package Soaps:—

1—GIVES WHITEST WASHES EVER up to 15% whiter by scientific Tintometer tests

2—MAKES UP TO TWICE THE SUDS that stand up 2 to 3 times longer, even in hard water

3—COLORS STAY TRULY BRIGHT in hard or soft water, wash after wash

SOAP'S GREATEST ADVANCE
in whiter washing with safety

NOW comes a sensational new advance in soap-making to prove again that "the wonders of science never cease." An amazing new soap ingredient that makes High-Test OXYDOL far whiter washing than ever before. Yet keeps it safe as ever for washable colors—safe for washable fabrics and hands!

When first you try it, we believe you will change all the previous ideas you ever had about washdays. About whiter washing soaps and whiter clothes.

For High-Test Oxydol actually washes clothes up to 15% whiter, as proved by scientific Tintometer tests. Not only far whiter than old Oxydol—but as much as 15% whiter than old-fashioned bar and package soaps.

In addition, you'll find that High-Test Oxydol makes up to twice the suds, cup for cup, that you get from less efficient, less modern soaps. Richer, livelier suds that stand up 2 to 3 times longer. And thus end the need for constantly adding soap because the suds "die down."

Saves Time—Saves Clothes

High-Test Oxydol is extremely rapid in action—soaks dirt loose SAFELY, without scrubbing or boiling, in as little as 10 minutes! Thus ends those hours of tedious rubbing with old-fashioned soaps that shortens the life of your clothes.

This is important. Because scientific research demonstrates that clothes washed the scrubless Oxydol way "stand up" far longer. Actually last two to three times longer from the standpoint of "washday wear and tear," compared to clothes washed by old-fashioned methods.

Colors Stay Fresh—Bright

But these things alone were not enough—women demanded utmost color safety, too. And this amazing High-Test Oxydol has passed every test for safety to washable colors. For instance—crisp, colored prints washed 175 consecutive times showed no perceptible sign of fading. Thus, wash after wash, you will find colored things stay fresh and bright... in hard water, even.

Try It Without Delay

New High-Test Oxydol is now on sale at all dealers in the familiar orange and blue bull's-eye package. (No change in the box—the difference is in the soap.)

In your own interest—for whiter, brighter washes than you ever dreamed possible with less modern soaps—try new High-Test OXYDOL without delay. We guarantee that you'll be thrilled as you've never been thrilled with any soap before... Get a package today. Procter & Gamble.

MORE SUDS MEANS BETTER DISHWASHING, TOO

GETS CLOTHES UP TO 15% WHITER

Developed and perfected by Procter & Gamble to revolutionize washday performance, High-Test OXYDOL contains an amazing new ingredient that soap chemists have been working on for years. A new ingredient that increases its white-washing powers to a truly astonishing degree.

Scientific tests proved that High-Test Oxydol washed white clothes shades whiter—actually as much as 15% whiter than old-fashioned bar and package soaps tested. Yet you'll find it safe as can be for washable colors—safety itself for washable fabrics—safe for hands.

For whiter, brighter washes than you ever dreamed possible with less modern soaps, get a package of High-Test OXYDOL today!

CLOTHES LAST LONGER!

OXYDOL soaks dirt loose in as little as 10 minutes. Thus ends the washboard scrubbing that shortens the life of your clothes.

The picture on the left, shows a brand-new sheet (highly magnified) washed 84 times with old-style soap. Note fraying in weave, due to "harsh action" and scrubbing.... On the right, a similar sheet washed 84 times the scrubless Oxydol way. Note the perfect alignment of the threads... the utter freedom from the wear and tear of old-style washing methods.

Scientific tests revealed that fabrics washed the High-Test OXYDOL way lasted 2 to 3 times as long from a standpoint of "washday wear and tear."

COLORS STAY FRESH AND BRIGHT

High-Test OXYDOL is amazingly safe for washable colors. Even in hard water, you will find colored things stay fresh and bright, wash after wash.

Note the two color swatches shown at left. One the original piece—the other a piece from the same swatch after 175 OXYDOL washings.

No perceptible color fading after 175 consecutive washings. Just think of it!—No perceptible sign of fading after more than three years' normal washing. Try it and see for yourself.

Tallulah Bankhead to Open Wednesday in 'I Am Different'

Will Mark 2d Major Opening of New Season

By Cecil Smith.

In the second major opening of Chicago's nascent theatrical season, Tallulah Bankhead comes to the Selwyn theater Wednesday evening in a comedy entitled "I Am Different." A distinctive supporting cast includes John Emery, who has become the husband of Miss Bankhead since she last played here in "Reflected Glory" and he with Katharine Cornell in "Saint Joan"; Fritzi Scheff, whose present dramatic career does not dim old-timers' memories of Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste" and her singing of "Kiss Me Again"; Glenn Anders, of enviable Theater guild reputation, most recently seen here with Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale in "Call It a Day"; Ara Gerald, Elizabeth Valentine, Thomas Linden and Hala Linda.

Zoe Akins, author of "The Old Maid," "Déclassé," and "The Greeks Had a Word for It," has made the English adaptation of "I Am Different." The original play was written in Hungarian by Lili Hatvany, a playwright represented on Chicago bills once before when Ethel Barrymore appeared here in "The Love Duel" in 1930.

To Chicago playgoers Tallulah Bankhead has long been something of a mystery figure. Until her appearance last year in "Reflected Glory" we had known her only through two or three extremely bad movies, including one whose title I have forgotten, in which the sinister Irving Pichel made quite a commotion about branding her chest with a hot iron.

The story of Miss Bankhead's birth and childhood among the cotton fields of Alabama is common property. During her adolescent years, while her father was busily climbing the ladder that was to take him to the speaker's desk of the national house of representatives, Tallulah went to New York for her first stage appearance. The vehicle of her professional debut at the age of 16, was a piece called "Squab Farm," in which she played with Gladys Sinclair. Other adventures of her early New York career included parts in "39 East," "Nice People," and "Her Temporary Husband."

In 1923 she went to London, and it was there that she made her real reputation. Among her special successes were "The Green Hat," in which she played the rôle given to Katharine Cornell in this country; "They Knew What They Wanted," in the part played here by Pauline Lord; and "Her Cardboard Lover," whose heroine in the American cast was the late Jeanne Eagels.

Thus Tallulah Bankhead left America a promising ingénue and returned, a few seasons ago, an actress of international reputation. Chicago's knowledge of her, however, was scarcely improved at all, for we were able merely to substitute telegraph dispatches of her New York activities for cable reports of her London successes. Not until last year was the suspense broken. Then we heard and saw for ourselves the husky intensity of her speaking voice, the mobile expressiveness of her face and hands, the effective theatricalism of her presence.

In "I Am Different," Miss Bankhead is seen as the poised, intellectual author of a highly objective book upon the proper regulation of the adult sex life. When some of her acquaintances at the inevitable first-act house party are visibly shocked by passages they find in the volume, Miss Bankhead reads them a lecture on the subject of keeping the intelligence in control of the emotions. The body of the play concerns itself with her attempt, in the face of unexpected developments in her own life, to behave in accordance with the precepts set down in her book.

When I chanced upon the play at the Biltmore theater in Los Angeles three weeks ago, it was still in an embryonic tryout stage. I cannot give you an adequate advance report, for since that time the first and last acts have been rewritten and speeded up, and the whole script has been thoroughly pointed up for presentation on this side of the Rockies.

To arms, faithful Savoyards! Tonight the Federal theater tossing D'Oyly Carte traditions to the four winds, is to present at the Great Northern theater the première of a "modernized" version of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado." The all-Negro cast to be employed comprises 100 members of the Negro unit of the Federal theater project. Beyond hinting that some of the music will be handled in swing style, advance reports do not offer any clear clew to the manner of treatment.

In the course of her Chicago engagement in "Susan and God," which comes to the Harris theater Oct. 10 for an indefinite stay, Gertrude Lawrence plans to give several special tryout matinées of her next Broadway vehicle. The title is "The Birds Stop Singing." The author, reported to be Lenore Coffee Cowen, employs the nom de plume of "Rose Graham." The cast of "Susan and God," with the addition of two or three other actors, will serve as "laboratory assistants" in the new production.

"The Women," Claire Booth's acidly witty play with an all-feminine cast which enjoyed great popularity at the Erlanger theater a year ago, will return to the Auditorium theater

Nov. 6 for two weeks. The cast will be the one that recently finished a long run New York engagement.

Having taken care of the subscribers of the Theater Guild and the American Theater society, the Harris theater now is able to make all seats available to all comers for the final fortnight of "Golden Boy." One change in cast brings Sanford Meisner to the gangster rôle of Eddie Fusell, formerly played by Elia Kazan. After the closing Chicago performance Oct. 8 the Group Theater company will tour with "Golden Boy" for nine weeks touching at Detroit, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and Pittsburgh. After the tour the company will return to New York, where two new plays will be produced. In the first of these, Clifford Odets' "Rocket to the Moon," it is rumored that Luther Adler will appear opposite his new wife, Sylvia Sidney of the movies. The second of the winter's Group theater plays, Irvin Shaw's "The Gentle People," will probably bring back from Hollywood two former members of the troupe, Franchot Tone and Jules Garfield.

Chicago's fall drama schedule is still in a highly chaotic state. Both "Of Mice and Men" and the Lunts' productions of "The Sea Gull" and "Amphytrion 38" should be along before the Thanksgiving holidays. Possibly also the Kaufman-Hart musical "I'd Rather Be Right" and Cole Porter's "I Married an Angel."

Sunday evening, Oct. 9—Verdi's "Il Trovatore," with Bianca Saroya, Senderowna, Lindi, Thomas, Kravitt, Curci, and Cervi.

Carlo Peroni will conduct all performances.

Signs of Revival

One of the surest signs that an opera is to be revived at the Metropolitan is the fact that the sets for such a work are being overhauled prior to the opening of the opera season. The scenery for "Boris Godunoff," "Falstaff," and "Tosca" is being face lifted, and these operas will consequently make their appearance in the coming season's répertoire. New sets are being designed for Gluck's "Orpheus and Euridice," which will reappear at the Metropolitan after an absence of fifteen years. The production will be in the hands of Dr. Herbert Graf.

Boston Symphony

The Boston Symphony orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky opens its fifty-eighth season in Symphony hall, Boston, on Oct. 7 and 8. Twenty-four pairs of concerts will be given on Friday afternoons and Saturday nights, besides a shorter series on Mondays and Tuesdays, and a set of eight concerts at Harvard university. Guest conductors include Eugene Goosens, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra; Georges Enesco, composer, and Igor Stravinsky, who will conduct programs of his own music, including a new concerto for orchestra, and appear as piano soloist. Other soloists are Myra Hess, Artur Rubinstein, Rudolf Serkin, and Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianists; Jascha Heifetz, Zlatko Balakovic, and Ruth Posselt, violinists, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist. The Coolidge quartet will play a new concerto for string quartet and orchestra, by Nicolai Berezowsky, second violinist in the Boston Symphony orchestra; Ernst Krenek will play his new piano concerto, and the "Missa Solemnis" of Beethoven will be given at a special concert this fall.

Neighborly

The San Francisco Opera company will give six performances in Los Angeles beginning Nov. 5. "Andrea Chenier" is scheduled for the first night, with Beniamino Gigli, Elizabeth Rethberg, and Richard Bonelli in the leading rôles. The other operas listed are "Die Meistersinger," with Rethberg, Friedrich Schorr, Charles Kullman, and Kerstin Thorborg; "Pelléas and Mélisande," with Janine Micheau and Georges Cathelat; "Elektra," with Rose Pauly, Julius Huehn, Thorborg, and Irene Jessner; "Le Coq d'Or" in its original operatic version, with Lily Pons and Ezio Pinza, and a double bill consisting of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the former with Ebe Stignani and Galliano Masini, the latter with Gigli, Bonelli, and Mafalda Favero. Conductors for these operas will be Gaetano Merola, Erich Leinsdorf, Gennaro Papi, and Fritz Reiner.

New Porter Tune.

A new song, entitled "What Is That Tune?" was written into the score of "You Never Know" by the composer, Cole Porter, before it opened last Wednesday evening in New York. This musical comedy, which features Clifton Webb, Lupe Velez, Libby Holman, Rex O'Malley, Toby Wing, and the "Mad" Hartmans, played a two weeks' engagement in Chicago last spring.

Waving Steins Only Swing at Old Heidelberg

What with one thing and another, some Chicagoans who might be going to Germany this fall have stayed at home. . . . So they have missed the ride up or down the Rhine, and the student life at Heidelberg, and the night life in Berlin. . . . But a good many of them have made up for it by visiting the German atmosphere places around town.

For four years now the Old Heidelberg octet has been singing nightly at the inn of the same name in Randolph street. . . . Other cafés may change programs every few weeks, but this one, having worked out a recipe that appeals to the public taste, believes in holding fast to that which is good. . . . Four years' continuous performance rings up something of a record.

If you've ever sat in a student hangout in the original Heidelberg on a Friday night, and watched and heard the youngsters as they swing their beer mugs and sing their rhapsodies, you'll know what to expect from the Old Heidelberg octet. . . But there is no other swing there. . . . The Eitel brothers, Robert and Max, still cling to the old-fashioned idea that people like good music.

● When Harry Richman ends his present engagement at the Chez Paree he'll say good-by to Chicago for five years. . . . He is going to New York to open the Harry Richman club in Park avenue, and his contract calls for his presence there, fifty-two weeks a year, for sixty months. . . . Abe Lyman's band, costarring at the "Shay," will go from here to the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans, and then trek westward. . . . Some time this winter Abe will open a caravansary, labeled Lyman's, in Hollywood. . . . The two headliners are smashing the attendance marks at the night club. . . . Reservations for last Sunday night were closed three days in advance.

● Bill Anson, W-G-N's man of many voices, was the man of the hour when Harry's New York cabaret came to life again Thursday evening. . . . His voice masqueraded as those of radio bigwigs, he sang after the manner of the late Russ Columbo, and he presented a show studded with torch singers, swingsters, dancers, and beauty prize winners. . . . The place has been completely done over since last season.

● Fourteen weeks is the record Veloz and Yolanda will have hung up when they bow their way out of the Empire room at the Palmer house Wednesday evening. . . . On Thursday evening Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians will start their show-stopping there. . . . For years one of the ranking favorites in the national polls of the radio fans, the band will be supported this time by Tommy Martin, legerdemain artist; Holland and Hart, dancing combination; Dolly Thon, who does acrobatic kicks; Jimmy and Mildred Mulcay, harmonica rhapsodists, and Chicago's twelve Abbott dancers.

● Dark since last June, the Royale Frolics will start lighting up South Wabash avenue again Wednesday evening. . . . As usual, it will be just about an all night affair, lasting from a dinner show at 8:30 till a breakfast show at 4. . . . Denis Cooney will have on hand Mark Fisher's band, together with Bee Kalmus, singer from Ben Marden's Riviera in New York; the Radio Ramblers, impersonators; the Karre Le Baron trio, dancers, and an ensemble got together by Sammy Dyer.

● After five weeks at the Hi-Hat club, Joe E. Lewis will close after the breakfast show at 2:30 a. m. Thursday. . . . He's going to the Beverly Hills Country club, across the river from Cincinnati. . . . In the Hi-Hat's new show, starting Thursday night, will be, among others, Winnie Shaw and Barbara McDonald.

● Early next Friday morning the shutters will be put on for the winter at the Bon-Air Country club. . . . They won't be removed until May 26, 1939. . . . Closing feature, besides Eddie Garr's comedy and Lang Thompson's music, Wednesday and Thursday nights will be a fur fashion revue. . . . Live silver foxes from Cary, Ill., will be shown, along with the pelts of those that already have gone the way of all flesh.

● Closed during the dinner hour for the last year and a half, the Brevoort hotel's Mural room was reopened Friday evening. . . . Music is being provided by the same entertainers who appear in the Crystal Tap and the Red room. . . . Jimmy Hatton, Florence Schubert, and Norma Ballard are doing the singing.

● Colosimo's got a new show under way the other night. . . . In the cast are Olga Dane and her swing sextet, Bob and Fleurette Gilbert, dancers; Zang and Todd, ditto; Billie Mysell and Helen Holmes, likewise ditto, and Fritzie Lure, acrobatic dancer. . . . Only holdovers are Jackson, Stone, and Reeve, comedians.

● The Aragon ballroom will move down to the Argentine this afternoon and evening. . . . A fall fiesta, done in South American carnival style, has been decreed; Carlos Molina's tango-rhumba artists and Dick Jurgens' band are to be there. . . . At the Trianon Bernie Cummins and his orchestra will hold over until Friday, when Roger Pryor is to take the stand for a three day run. . . . On Oct. 7 Benny Goodman will begin a week's stay, alternating between the two dance places.

SLAVE TO HER JOB

Fosdick Report Presages End of Foundation

By the Rev. John Evans.

Foreshadowed in Raymond Fosdick's report for the General Board of Education, covering the last six months of 1936 and all 1937, is the approaching dissolution of this organization through disbursement of principal funds. This, the trustees consider, is a socially desirable step. The general board was founded in 1902 by John D. Rockefeller.

Since the foundation was begun money has been used to stimulate progress in the following fields: Medical education, higher education, Negro education, and certain special programs of brief duration or involving smaller sums of money. As of Dec. 31, 1937, there had been paid out $139,337,348 from principal and $115,997,322 from income, a total of $255,334,670. The amounts contributed in each of these fields are approximately as follows:

Medical education	$89,000,000
Higher education	68,000,000
Negro education	40,000,000
Special education programs	53,000,000

Contributions to the first two of the above items represent closed chapters of the activity of the foundation, and attention will be given to the two latter which will eventually liquidate the remaining $28,000,000 of unappropriated assets.

The trustees have decided to concentrate on three types of activity: The continuance of the existing program in the southern states, a program in child growth and development, and the support of research in relation to the problems presented in general education, i. e., the secondary school through the junior college level.

The activities in southern education assisted by the General Board of Education are really of the greatest benefit to the whole of the United States because, as the report states, "the per capita expenditures for education in the south are not only below those of the rest of the nation, but they are also seriously insufficient to provide support for a reasonably complete system of offering even moderately satisfactory schools for all the youth of both races." The main feature for the future in the southern program, therefore, will be toward further improvement in public administration of education, both in the state departments and in the county offices.

Since the world war the trustees have felt that it was more important to meet challenging opportunities than to conserve principal funds for some indefinite future. This explains, therefore, why the life of the foundation is running to its close.

"There are no scales by which the potentialities of the present can be weighed against those of the future," says Dr. Fosdick. "But the present is vividly here with its needs and possibilities; the future is beyond reckoning, and we of this generation must live in the faith that it will find means to provide for itself."

Four new appointments to the faculty of Loyola university are announced by President Samuel Knox Wilson. Dr. Earl E. Kleinschmidt, formerly secretary of hygiene and public health, is now chairman of the department of bacteriology and preventive medicine; Dr. Earl E. Madden, formerly professor of anatomy at the University of Illinois, will be clinical instructor in surgery; Dr. Joseph Greengard has been appointed to the department of pediatrics, with Dr. Maurice Fitzgerald as clinical assistant in dermatology, and Dr. Ralph L. Ferguson, formerly of the department of bacteriology, has been transferred to the department of pathology with the rank of associate professor.

Six public lectures on various phases of accounting will be given by professors in the La Salle Resident School of Accounting, 9 West Washington street, at 6:30 p. m., Sept. 26 to 29. These lectures, particularly intended for bookkeepers and accountants, will be given by Milton Vogel, R. W. Bergne, W. E. Russell and J. E. Hargreaves.

Pinch Hitter

Paul McGrath, to be seen here opposite Gertrude Lawrence in Rachel Crothers' comedy, "Susan and God," stepped into his rôle for the first time on only a few hours' notice in Washington, D. C., last season, when the veteran actor, Osgood Perkins, fell dead. Later on, during the course of the New York run, John Golden, producer of the play, paid tribute to Mr. McGrath's success in the rôle by presenting him with a huge, man sized valentine on the stage of the Plymouth theater on St. Valentine's day. Before joining the cast of "Susan and God" the actor had been seen in "The Green Bay Tree," "Ned McCobb's Daughter," "The Doctor's Dilemma," "Pigeons and People," "Ode to Liberty," "The Good Fairy," and many other prominent plays.

Loss of Pipe Organ's Popularity Laid to Lack of Nuance

Instruments' Ex-King Forced to Flee Throne

By Edward Barry.

Not all deposed royalty is of human shape. The pipe organ, still sentimentally known as "king of instruments," finds itself in a position closely resembling that of the Alfonsos and Ottos of the world.

Widely used for accompaniments [because it enables a single musician to command the volume of tone necessary for large choral bodies] and to march smiling couples off to matrimony [because its utterance has the dignity thought proper to such occasions], the organ nevertheless occupies none of the higher places in the hierarchy of solo instruments.

Since it is possessed of such immense advantages—beauty and variety of tone and an almost infinite dynamic range—the question naturally arises as to why this instrument should rank below such seemingly obvious inferiors as the piano, violin and cello. Below even the harp and the six string guitar, perhaps.

An answer which is perfectly sound is that not many people like to listen to the organ as well as they do to other instruments. The organ programs frequently given in churches are for the most part ill attended. Owners of concert halls often let their organs die slowly of old age, because the number of solo recitals in which the instrument figures may run to as few as three or four a year even in cities whose populations exceed the million mark.

This brings us near the heart of the matter, for an inquiry as to the reason for public coldness toward so great an instrument uncovers very quickly a fact which suffices to differentiate the organ from other musical mediums. This fact is not the organ's poverty of literature [for it is as rich in this respect as any instrument except the piano] nor the difficulty of allowing the spectacular aspects of the performer's surface personality to exercise its due effect upon an audience [for a console may now be turned in such a way that not a single smirk nor lunge nor expression of rapture is lost to view].

Rather it is the fact that the very nature of the instrument deprives the performer of some of his opportunities for direct, personal musical eloquence. The organ boasts fewer possibilities for nuance than the piano, violin, or cello.

Nuance is the vague name given to all of those subtle, highly personal differences of rendition which mark off the work of one interpreter from that of all others. Delicate accents, a split second pause before a note which is to receive special prominence, a slight lingering over a phrase which becomes more meaningful through this very fact, a controled hurrying of the tempo, a finely calculated difference in tone quality between one phase and the period which balances it, a seemingly regretful relinquishment of one section of a melody as the time scheme thrusts another period forward—these are among the thousand effects which give to interpretative musicianship its personal quality.

When these effects are used properly—when they are the results of the imperious demands of the performer's intelligent musical thought and are not dragged in for the sake of mere vividness—they may justly be said to be the marks of a superlative performance. Through these highly individual inflections the performer reveals his sympathetic, personal grasp of the feeling content which he has sensed in the notes and signs and tempo marks of the composer. It is after such personal, communicative performances that listeners stamp their feet and shout.

The fact should be plain, then, that an instrument which possesses fewer possibilities for such personal communication than its competitors will find itself somewhat handicapped. The organ is in exactly this position, for its splendor of tone and its magnificent variety are less important in the last analysis than its performer's command of nuance.

The organ does not modify its tone colorings or grade its accents in response to the direct touch of the player's fingers. Elaborate mechanical and electrical devices obtrude themselves, and many nuances of feeling may be translated into sound only after these mechanical and electrical devices have been properly manipulated. Some few nuances are entirely outside the organ's power. The lack of immediacy in the music—the fact that there are more things to be done before certain subtleties of musical thought can be turned into sound—accounts for the organ's inferiority as a solo instrument to the piano, violin, and cello.

Progressive organ builders, of course, are well aware of these difficulties and have consistently reduced them by means of expression pedals, piston combinations, and other devices designed to simplify and to make instantaneous the various changes of which the instrument is capable. Thus the organist is gradually gaining better command of the immense expressive resource of his instrument. He is still very far, however, from being as happy a person in this respect as, say, the violinist. The latter's instrument becomes almost a part of his own body, and no graduation of feeling is too fine to find its immediate and melting realization in sound.

NEW SOPRANO

Maria Reining comes from Vienna to make her American debut as Eva in "Die Meistersinger" on Nov. 2 at the Civic Opera house.

Current Music News

Another major musical award was bestowed upon a resident composer when the New York Philharmonic Symphony society gave its first prize of $1,000 for a full length symphony to David Van Vactor, a fortnight ago. Second prize was awarded to Mark Wessel, formerly a teacher of piano and theory at Northwestern university and now filling a similar position at the University of Colorado, and a former teacher of Mr. Van Vactor.

Mr. Van Vactor is well known to Chicagoans and Evanstonians as performer, teacher, and composer. He is at present second flutist in the Chicago Symphony orchestra and instructor in music theory at Northwestern university. Born in Plymouth, Ind., 32 years ago, he received his training in theory and composition at Northwestern university with Mr. Wessel, Carl Beecher, Arne Oldberg, and Felix Borowski. Later he worked under Dr. Albert Noelte in Chicago and the late Paul Dukas in Paris.

Honorable mention in the Swift competition in Chicago was given him for a symphonic prelude, "The Masque of the Red Death." Many of his works for orchestra and chamber ensembles have been presented in this city by various organizations, including the Chicago Symphony orchestra, the Illinois Symphony orchestra, the Civic orchestra, and the Saidenberg Symphonietta.

Mr. Van Vactor's prize composition is called, simply enough, Symphony in D. It will be given its première this winter by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra under the direction of John Barbirolli.

Word comes from the Chicago City Opera company of two special post-season performances, to be presented Jan. 8 and 15, 1939, with Grace Moore as stellar performer. Miss Moore wrote the company that she would be unable to appear during the regular opera season as she was too busy making the film version of the opera, "Louise," in France. Arrangements for extra performances, at least one of which will be "Louise," were consequently and immediately made.

Changes in the plans of the Saidenberg Symphonietta for its series of four concerts at the Goodman theater were necessitated by the inability of Mischa Mischakoff to appear with the group on account of his obligations as concert master of the NBC Symphony orchestra. Philip Manuel and Gavin Williamson, harpsichordists, will be heard as soloists on the first program Nov. 22. Agatha Lewis, soprano, will be featured at a special Christmas concert Dec. 27, wherein is listed a new work by David Van Vactor. Emanuel Feuermann, distinguished Austrian cellist, will play with the Symphonietta on Jan. 24. For the final concert Feb. 28 no soloist has yet been engaged.

Ivan Petroff, Bulgarian baritone, has been added to the roster of singers in the San Carlo Opera company, which opens a three week engagement at the Auditorium theater on Oct. 3. Petroff, who has appearances in Paris, London, Vienna, Rome, and Sofia to his credit, joined the Fortune Gallo organization during its Center theater run in New York. His Chicago debut will be as Figaro in "The Barber of Seville" on the opening night, and he will appear again on Wednesday night of the same week as Rigoletto.

A concert featuring Katherine Dunham, dancer; Frances Glickman, soprano, and Anatol Rapoport, pianist, will be given Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Woman's Club theater. The concert is being sponsored by the teachers' committee of the medical bureau and the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy.

The Russian trio will give a series of six concerts at the Arts club on the following Tuesday mornings: Nov. 1, Nov. 15, Dec. 6, Jan. 17, March 7, March 21. Members of the trio are Herman Felber, violinist; Ennio Bolognini, cellist, and Nina Mesirow-Minchin, pianist.

The Civic orchestra of Chicago will inaugurate its 20th season on Oct. 1. Dr. Frederick Stock and Hans Lange will continue as the organization's musical director and conductor, respectively. Clarence Evans, first violist of the Chicago Symphony, will assist Mr. Lange. The Civic orchestra acts as a training school for future symphony players; and rehersals, classes, and instruction are free with the exception of a small entrance fee. Membership application cards may be obtained at the Civic Music association, 410 South Michigan avenue.

Calling itself one of the two organizations in the United States devoting itself exclusively to the presentation of the works of Johann Sebastian Bach, the Chicago Bach chorus has announced a concert in Orchestra hall for Saturday evening, Dec. 10.

Although the Chicago chorus has given concerts in outlying spots every season since its inception in 1925, this will be its first loop appearance in several years. Theodore Lams will conduct.

Help Wanted: Film 'Carmen' Who Has Umph

By Cecil Smith.

Motion pictures exploiting serious music are almost completely out of favor in the Hollywood studios at present. On most of the lots not even a single musical picture is in preparation, except for those making exclusive use of popular tunes. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is an exception, with those perennial favorites, Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, at work on Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts" [which you may call serious music if you care to], and "The Great Waltz," in which the coloratura soprano, Meliza Korjus, will be introduced to America, on the verge of release.

Aside from these two pictures I was unable to get wind of a single projected musical picture in Hollywood last month. United Artists, having signed a contract with Jascha Heifetz long ago, has just made haste to record a batch of violin pieces before the contract expired, but no story has been written for Mr. Heifetz, and none is in sight. Helen Jepson and Lily Pons have allowed their studios to buy back their contracts. Grace Moore has left Hollywood to make Charpentier's "Louise" for a Paris studio. Gladys Swarthout is still under contract, but nobody seems to have any idea what she might do if she made another picture.

The producers, needless to say, have not turned against ambitious and expensive musical pictures because of some sudden personal revulsion from the art of music. Their virtually unanimous decision results from a study of the red columns of the ledger. Recent musical pictures have not been profitable. The great public now stays away from these films, displaying appalling apathy toward its former singing idols.

Plot trouble has played a large part in the decline of the musical movie. Grace Moore's "One Night of Love" was a smash hit, for it was the first use of the now familiar formula of the budding prima donna climbing from obscurity in the first reel to the Metropolitan stage in the last scattering arias to left and right en route. It was all right to fabricate one such story for one such potpourri of arias and songs. It was not all right, as Hollywood discovered, to repeat the process a dozen times over.

Other stories lying slightly outside this formula were tried, but all of them seemed stupid and stilted whenever the action was interrupted for an aria. Fancy camera shots and astute direction helped make a few of the better pictures less artificial, but in the end the public called the whole business unnatural and would have no more of it.

Even less happy was the attempt to introduce bits of high art into elaborate revues. Kirsten Flagstad's introduction to the American screen audience, undertaken in all good faith by the makers of "The Big Broadcast of 1938," left something to be desired. The sequence in which she sang Brünnhilde's cry from "Die Walküre" was sandwiched in between a comedy episode by Martha Raye and some clowning by the Ritz brothers. Some of the audiences found the idea of a full grown woman uttering such nonsense syllables as "Ho-yo-to-ho" excruciatingly funny, and paid Mme. Flagstad the wry tribute of hearty laughter—a tribute she neither deserves nor receives when she sings in an appropriate milieu.

In my innocence I have often thought it might be smart to give up the notion of slapping together musical pastiches and to try to film a whole opera, in which the music could be understood as an integral part of the dramatic action. I broached the question of opera to Boris Morros, the liberal and experimental musical director of Paramount. With pointed courtesy he intimated that he and a few others had long since thought of the same idea. For several years, he said, Bizet's "Carmen" had appealed to him as the most likely vehicle for an initial venture in screen opera.

But the difficulties of filming "Carmen" are immense. The libretto must be completely reshaped in order to provide the visual continuity and honest realism demanded by opera audiences. The dialog must be rewritten from A to Z to avoid offending the censor and to couch the story in natural, idiomatic American speech. The motionless spots in the libretto must be either eliminated or somehow set in motion. The completed scenario must flow like a movie story, not move in hitches like an opera plot.

If these were the only difficulties, "Carmen" would have been filmed long ago. But there remains one insuperable obstacle: Nobody has been found for the title rôle. Even on the operatic stage, where defects of face and figure do not always spoil the success of a good singing actress, even passably good Carmens are few and far between. Up to now black failure has rewarded the quest for an artist capable of singing Carmen's music well, and at the same time comely in appearance and able to act effectively before the camera. Mr. Morros has made screen tests of forty-six prima donnas and has had to reject them all.

Not yet cured of the habit of making unsolicited suggestions, I proposed the names of two relatively obscure and, as I thought, extremely pretty Carmens who have made recent successes in European opera houses. I was told that both had visited Hollywood under cover of darkness, made screen tests, and failed to qualify. Whenever the right artist comes along Mr. Morros will make a moving picture version of "Carmen." He does not care if he has to wait twenty years, he says.

Other studios are also attracted by the idea of filming popular operas. The directors agree, however, that they have not yet found the right formula. Yet some day soon it is inevitable that somebody will take a long shot and undertake a screen opera. It is equally inevitable that the film will be either a sensational success or a heart-rending failure.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Musicians of world renown, as well as those of local fame, are to be found among the many artists and musical organizations listed by Bertha Ott for appearances in Chicago during the coming season.

Myra Hess and Sergei Rachmaninoff, pianist, and Fritz Kreisler, violinist, head the list of attractions, which include: Frank Teurfs, Charles Henry Manney, and Walter Mills, baritones; Chester Bielski, violinist; Willis Charkovsky, Serge Tarnowsky, Cara Verson, Hazel Briggs, Alice Blengsli, and Edward Collins, pianists; Mercado's Tipica Mexican orchestra; the Serbian Singing society, Alexander Savine, director; Maria Kurenko, Jenny Urban, and Ethel Reid, sopranos; Joseph Novak, bass; Sonia Sharnova, contralto; Ted Shawn and his male dance group, and the Eva Jessye choir of "Porgy and Bess" fame.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, aged Polish pianist and patriot, who is in partial retirement in Switzerland, will broadcast for a full hour from studios in Lausanne on the Magic Key program today. Details of the broadcast may be found on the radio page. This occasion marks Paderewski's first broadcast for listeners in the United States and his second radio appearance anywhere.

The Metropolitan Church choir, composed of 100 singers under the direction of J. Wesley Jones, will present a music festival this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The two soloists will be LeJune Fisher, soprano, and Janice Johnson, composer. The church is located at 4100 South Parkway.

William Hughes will direct the Central Church chorus in Orchestra hall at 11 o'clock this morning in anthems by Mendelssohn and Macfarlane. Archer Lambuth, organist, will play pieces by Kinder, McKinley, Debussy, and Guilmant. A contralto solo will be sung by Kathleen R. Lane.

The seventh season of the young artists' series at Abraham Lincoln center, 700 Oakwood boulevard, will begin on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 23. The first program presents Helen Robins White, soprano, and Wilhelmina Alexander, pianist.

An opportunity to gain a musical education free of charge is offered by the choir schools of St. James Methodist church, 46th street and Ellis avenue, and the Second Presbyterian church, 20th street and Michigan avenue. A member of any of the churches' eight choirs or of the choir guilds and performing services in the administration of the schools is entitled to as many hours of instruction as his services to the church consume. Courses include sight singing, ear training, harmony, counterpoint, conducting, piano, voice, eurythmics, woodwind instruments, brass instruments, French, German and Italian. These are class lessons. Private lessons are obtainable for a fee. The faculty: Bethuel Gross, May A. Strong, Maurine Smith Gross, Mildred Henry, Lavina Black, Browne Slade. Enrollment is open to adults and children, singers and nonsingers, church members and nonmembers.

A joint recital by Andrea De Parry, baritone, and his wife, Maria Parissi, soprano, will be given Wednesday evening at 8:15 in Curtiss hall. Arias and songs by Handel, Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Thomas, Massenet, and Verdi are listed, and incidental piano and violin solos complete the program.

Vaudeville

The Chicago theater features Roger Pryor and his orchestra as headliners in this week's stage show. Popular music is also presented in the concurrent film, "Sing You Sinners," the new Bing Crosby picture, with Fred MacMurray and Ellen Drew.

The entire screen and stage show at the Palace is being held over for a second week. The stage revue consists of the twenty-four Chester Hale Girls, a dance ensemble; Arren and Broderick, comedians; Chuck and Chuckles, tap dancers, and Rolf Holbein, magician.

Three screen personalities are listed in this week's stage bill at the State-Lake theater—Betty Burgess, Sonny Lamont, and Sammy White. Two radio stars, "Oswald," an accordion player, and Lynn Chalmers, song stylist, plus Verne Buck with his orchestra complete the bill.

'Like Father' Prospect.

John Moses, son of the late Harry Moses, is toying with the idea of following in his father's footsteps. And the vehicle for his entrance into the ranks of producers might be "Spell Your Name," the play which Dorothy Thompson and Fritz Kortner have just finished. Mr. Moses is Miss Thompson s business agent.

Algerian natives, Provincial police, tourists, merchants, beggars, henchmen, sailors, native musicians.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

"Algiers" is made to order for the fan who likes his romances violently hued instead of pastel colored, sensational—but credible—and prefers them to work out logically rather than ooze into traditional "happy endings."

This story's locale is the Casbah—outcast quarter of Algiers—where criminals wanted by the police of many lands find haven. There they are safe. But let a "wanted" man overstep the deadline—into the city proper—and he is a hare among hounds. There is seldom any escape.

It is in the Casbah that we meet Pepe Le Moko, French fugitive from justice, and, by reason of brains, charm, and courage, king of the sorry dominion he has for two years called his home. . . . His principal cohorts are Grandpere, seller of stolen jewels; Carlos, a member of his band; Gil, a pickpocket; Ines, a native girl who worships him but for whom he entertains merely an impatient affection, and Pierrot—youngest and beloved partner in crime. And then there is Slimane—a provincial detective—between whom and Pepe there is a strange friendship—though Pepe knows Slimane will not hesitate to turn him in once given the chance.

For a long time Pepe has been growing restive. His yerning for the world he had once known, his nostalgia for his native Paris become almost unbearable. The death of Pierrot in tragic manner whips these notions to frenzy. . . . Then one night——

Gaby comes. Gaby, from Paris! Comes to visit the Casbah. The minute Pepe sees her he knows that she is the one thing he wants. She IS Paris. Gaby responds to his passion. . . . And it is written in the cards that she shall be the cause of his capture—and—release.

Looked at one way, the ending is tragic. From another viewpoint—Pepe's, for instance—it's the reverse. And so far as Gaby is concerned—what happiness could she have known with Pepe, anyway, even if——? But I won't tell you any more of the story.

The acting is all excellent and never has a film had two more alluring leading women. Sigrid Gurie, whom you may remember in "Marco Polo," gives a vivid account of herself as Pepe's Algerian sweetheart. But I think I liked Hedy ["Ecstasy"] Lamarr better. She is a ravishing creature and an assured and able actress.

All things to all men she could be. And though you laugh, you understand how Pepe feels when he tells her that, besides being Paris, she is, to him, the subway, potato chips, coffee—and moonlight.

You will care a lot for Mr. Boyer as Pepe; for Joseph Calleia—there's an actor!—as Slimane.

Direction, photography, scenery, and sets—splendid! As for atmosphere—well—you can fairly smell the Casbah. And you are fascinated—and a little afraid all the time.

See you tomorrow.

Powell Jubilee.

John Powell, pianist, will observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of his American debut with a Carnegie hall recital on Nov. 1, the proceeds going to a fund to purchase a collection of Thomas Jefferson's letters for the University of Virginia.

Societe to Meet

In 1939 the Societe Universelle du Theatre will meet in the United States for the first time. The Societe was founded in 1927, and since then has met almost every year, always in a different country. The meeting will take place in New York during the period of the world's fair. Eugene O'Neill is honorary president of the American section of the Societe. The committee includes the names of Barrett H. Clarke, Marc Connelly, Jane Cowl, Hallie Flanagan, George Freedley, Rosamond Gilder, Edith J. R. Isaacs, Allardyce Nicoll, Lee Simonson, and Orson Welles. In the international membership of the organization are dramatists, actors, and directors from eighteen nations.

Tour Booked

A second company of the current New York hit, "What a Life," expects to tour when it has finished its engagement at the Wilbur theater in Boston. The play is announced as headed for the midwest via the eastern seaboard and Virginia. Later it may move to the west coast by way of the northern route, returning through the south and back into New York. The New York company, which has piled up a total of more than 200 performances and will continue indefinitly, will move intact to London in the spring of 1939. The motion picture rights for the Clifford Goldsmith play have been sold on the agreement that the film will not be released until all the companies have completed their runs.

Bacon Role Taken by Fred Stone in Revival of 'Lightnin''

Opening Recalls Record Run of 2 Decades Ago

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—It was in August, 1918, that the then newly established firm of Winchell Smith and John Golden produced the comedy called "Lightnin'." We had, if you recall, been fighting on the side of the allies for something more than a year. We had been through sugarless days and lightless nights. And we were pretty heavy hearted.

"Lightnin'" was one of the plays that served to lighten the worry of the times. It was accepted for what it was—a simple, tricky, hoakumy, sentimental, and ever so human theater piece about a likeable old man who lied a lot, drank a lot, worked very little, and still managed to remain lovable.

The late Frank Bacon was featured in the name part, that of Lightnin' Bill Jones. Frank had been playing Bill for all the twenty or thirty years of his stage life. Whenever stock company directors would hand him the part of an old man, old men being his specialty, they would suggest, knowingly, that, although it wasn't much of a part Frank could give it a "Bill Jones touch" which would strengthen it immeasurably.

Finally Bacon, who had a playwriting itch, wrote Bill Jones into a manuscript which he called, as I remember it, "A House Divided." It was the story of a divorcée's retreat, a hotel that straddled the Nevada-California state line.

It was a pretty crude and quite melodramatic comedy when Bacon turned it over to the late Winchell Smith. Smith smoothed over the rough places, pointed up the comedy, tricked out the direction with the skill of a master at that sort of thing, which he was, and read it to Golden. Golden suggested the "Lightnin'" title and arranged for the August opening. The rest, to coin a phrase, is theater history. "Lightnin'" ran on and on and grew more popular week by week. Bacon, a little reluctantly, permitted them to make a star of him. And then, when everything was set for a second year on Broadway, which was an unheard of record at that time, the actors' equity strike of 1919 was called.

Bacon was one of the first to lay down his makeup kit and walk out. When the striking actors paraded Broadway during the noon hour Frank marched proudly with the leaders. Crowds lining the curb cheered at sight of him. He was one of the outstanding reasons why the producers never had a chance of winning that strike.

Smith never forgave Frank Bacon for that act of what he considered extreme disloyalty. Smith, believing that he and Golden had really "made" Bacon, first by casting him in the Chicago company of "The Fortune Hunter," which was a big hit, and, second, by rewriting his play about Bill Jones and elevating him to stardom, in "Lightnin'," felt that the actor owed the rest of his professional life to his benefactors. Bacon apologized, giving a Bill Jones touch to his apologies, but went right on marching with the strikers.

When the strike was over the run of "Lightnin'" was resumed. It moved steadily toward the long-run record of the time, achieving finally 1,291 performances. There was another play moving up in the wake of the "Lightnin'" record at that time, a play written by Ann Nichols called "Abie's Irish Rose." There was some boasting that it would one day equal the "Lightnin'" record, which eventually it did. Now another play, "Tobacco Road," is out after "Abie's" record of 2,532 performances. Showing that the theater world does move.

The other night, twenty years after "Lightnin'" was produced, John Golden revived the comedy with Fred Stone in the rôle of Bill Jones. Stone, who also has a large and admiring public, built up through his years in vaudeville and musical comedy, has been flirting with the straight drama lately, first in movies and this last summer in the summer stock companies with this same Golden revival.

His success in the Bacon part was definite opening night, his reception friendly in the extreme, and, so far as the first audience was concerned, a little hysterical. After the play Fred made a speech and did a bit of clowning in the old Montgomery and Stone tradition that tickled a house filled with his friends.

I have no idea how long the "Lightnin'" revival will run, or how it will stand up once the new season becomes really competitive. But I would say that it has an excellent chance. The comedy is as simple as a nursery rime, but as human as vanity. The second act courtroom scene—the scene, you remember, in which the gay vaudeville divorcée explains that the only reason she ever married the man from whom she wishes to be separated was because they were, as a team, laying off in Peoria and it rained all week—is still, I think, the best comedy courtroom scene written and staged in the last twenty years.

It has all the most appealing of playbuilding aids—drama represented by the plot of the conspirators to rob Mrs. Jones; sentiment thickly spread in the sudden surprise appearance of old Bill, come from the Soldiers' home, proudly wearing his old G. A. R. uniform, to discover that he was about to be divorced; the surefire appeal of all trial scenes is the triumph of the young and brilliant juvenile lawyer over an old and crafty legal conspirator, and dozens of comedy touches to keep the spirit of the scene jolly and alive. Audiences always have loved scenes such as this and always will love them.

Stone is no Frank Bacon. But he, too, is a likable and a believable Bill Jones. He shuffles amusingly through the tipsy scenes. He tells the story of herding a swarm of bees across the desert with a proper gusto. He is simple and pathetic as an aging papa who suffered in silence because mother was something of a shrew and a heckler. I have an idea that all those newcomers to the theater who never saw Bacon will like Stone a lot. And all those who did see Bacon will be denied the satisfaction of invidious comparisons because of the sincerity and general worthiness of the Stone performance.

Of course all the Stones were there to enjoy the triumph. Dorothy and Paula and Carol, the Stone daughters: Charles Collins, who is Dorothy's husband; Allene Crater Stone, the loyal wife; Rex Beach and Mrs. Beach, sister-in-law and husband. They are a close-knit family in their loyalties.

In the supporting cast Mrs. Priestley Morrison is playing mother, Helen Brooks is the ingénue, Henry Richards the juvenile, Walter Gilbert the judge, Muriel Hutchison the divorcée. All adequate, as the saying is.

The Golden revival was really the season's second opening. The first was the production of a gangster comedy called "Come Across," written by a couple of Englishmen. I do not believe we will have this one with us very long. Not only is it dated as to subject, the gangster idea having been worn pretty thin two or three years back, but it is not a convincing exhibit of the sort of play it imitates.

A Chicago gangster named Ryder, as the story goes, carries a slug in his chest as the result of a fight with a rival mob. He has escaped to London with a couple of his henchmen and enters a nursing home to have the slug removed. To make sure the operation will be performed he has the surgeon's young son kidnaped.

The gangster is followed to London and to the nursing home by two of the rival gang's would-be avengers. On the operating table the wounded gangster is slain, stabbed with a knife held by a rubber glove. And who dunit?

The authors are Guy Beauchamp and Michael Pertwee. The cast is headed by Arthur Vinton, Helen Tremholme, and Don Costello. Cameron Hall, a comedian from the other side, scores the personal success of the cast. He is a dumb but funny hospital porter. But even he isn't worth the price of the tickets. The movies do this sort of thing a lot better than the stage, with the newsreel thrown in.

GETS BIG CHANCE

Opera Includes Seven Revivals in Repertoire

Seven revivals figure in the répertoire announced for the 1938 Chicago City Opera company season, opening Oct. 29 at the Civic Opera house. Longest in point of absence from the schedule, and rarest in point of total number of performances, is Meyerbeer's "L'Africana," to be restored for the special benefit of Beniamino Gigli.

This opera has been played only three times in the history of the resident opera company, all three performances having fallen in the 1923 season. The two soprano rôles were sung by Rosa Raisa and Alice Mock; Cesare Formichi sang the robust baritone rôle, and the grateful tenor music was awarded both to Giulio Crimi and to Charles Marshall. The last performance was given Dec. 17, 1923.

Second in point of time lapse is Offenbach's "The Tales of Hofmann," last performed by the Chicago Civic Opera company on Jan. 29, 1929, with Helen Freund, Marion Claire, Irene Pavloska, René Maison, and Vanni-Marcoux. This opera, however, has been given since by both the Ravinia and San Carlo companies.

Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," once a hardy perennial, has been absent from the répertoire since Dec. 22, 1929, though again both the Ravinia and the San Carlo companies have given it. The last Civic Opera performance employed the services of Alice Mock and René Maison as the two lovers.

Verdi's "A Masked Ball," always more popular at Ravinia than in Chicago, received its last downtown performance Dec. 9, 1930, with Mme. Raisa, Miss Mock, Cyrena Van Gordon, Mr. Marshall, and Richard Bonelli in the cast. Moussorgsky's great folk opera "Boris Godunoff," first mounted for the late Feodor Chaliapin in 1923, held the boards through sixteen performances before it was dropped. Contrary to popular supposition, Chaliapin was by no means omnipresent in Chicago casts of this opera.

Vanni-Marcoux gave his equally notable impersonation of the king eight times to Chaliapin's six, and Georges Baklanoff also gave two penetrating performances of the powerful title rôle. The opera is being revived this fall for Alexander Kipnis, who thus becomes fourth in a magnificent line of Borises.

Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," never attempted by the Chicago company until 1930 and given nine performances between then and 1932, was last heard on Jan. 26 of the latter year, with Lotte Lehmann, Sonia Sharnova, Mr. Maison, Oscar Colcaire, Hans Hermann Nissen, Edouard Habich, and Mr. Kipnis in leading rôles and Egon Pollak as conductor.

Puccini's "Turandot," performed six times here, remained in the répertoire until Nov. 20, 1935. The last Chicago cast included Mme. Raisa, Miss Claire, Armand Tokatyan, Wilfred Engelman, and Norman Cordon.

Yule News.

The combination of a Noel Coward revue and Beatrice Lillie is announced for New York about Christmas time. Miss Lillie has not been associated with a full length Coward production since the memorable "This Year of Grace," although many of his sketches have been used by her in other musicals since then. Mr. Coward will not appear in the new revue; he will, however, direct it.

Contract According to Culbertson

Psychology Is a Big Factor in Bridge Contests

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1938: By Ely Culbertson.]

PERMEATING every play, and behind every inference there is one subtle element which makes all the difference between the player who is an artist and the player who is an artisan. That element is psychology.

When playing on defense, partners must remember that declarer is "listening in" on their wires of communication, and that it is vitally important to confuse him while at the same time maintaining the correct inferences between each other. It is equally necessary for the declarer, in choosing his plays, to mask his batteries, to disguise his weak points or coax a lead into his strong suits.

A great player is as careful in destroying his traces, building effective alibis, or planting wrong clues during the play as a master criminal is in committing his perfect crime. Although every expert player likes to boast about his psychological subtlety and insight, I know but few who are beyond the childish phase of coarse bluffs and awkward false cards. Their attempts are made with bombs charged with sawdust. Nothing is more difficult in bridge than a subtle, effective psychic play, for it must be a well built lie, and it is much easier to become a president of a society for the promotion of truth than to be a convincing liar. A great liar, like a great strategist, must necessarily be a great logician.

In the deal shown below a defensive lead, made by an imaginative player, was hailed by every expert who saw it as a masterpiece of deception. It is not a complicated false card, but the mere artisan, who recognizes only the obvious and conventional false carding plays, could never rise to such heights of inspired simplicity. The hand:

♣ K 10 9 7 5

SOUTH

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
2 diamonds	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
Pass	Pass

After West had won the first trick in spades, and had seen the dummy, he clearly read the nature of South's hand. South must have at least two five-card suits to justify his bidding, and if his hearts were as good as ace-king, that suit was solid. East and West, therefore, could win no trick in hearts, and the maximum of three tricks in spades and clubs. The setting trick, if there was to be any, must come from the diamond suit. If East held the ace or king-jack of diamonds he could surely win a trick, but if South held the ace-jack and East no better than the king, South would have only one possible chance to make the hand—to enter dummy on the third round of hearts, lead a low diamond, finesse the jack and then play the ace in the hope of dropping the king. Regardless of the fact that in most cases this play will not work, this was one time when it would work, and West knew it. So West promptly led the nine of diamonds.

Now it would take a clairvoyant in the South position to read the distribution correctly. It would seem to practically any declarer that East held diamonds king-ten with one or two small cards, and that West was leading a singleton or a doubleton in the hope of getting an immediate or a delayed ruff. If this was true, the contract could be made, and South proceeded to play on the assumption that East held the two missing diamond honors. The diamond nine was covered by dummy's queen, and East's king fell to the ace. Now three rounds of hearts placed the lead in dummy, and the diamond eight was led. When East played a small diamond South played low, finessing for the ten, and West took in the setting trick.

It is common knowledge, I hope, that I am always glad to answer—free of charge—any questions on the subject of bridge. Indeed, readers of my column send in these questions to the extent of hundreds each week. Most of them concern the bidding of given hands. Since from the nature of things I cannot be familiar with the personalities involved, I must always base my answer on the best theoretical, or academic bid. It is a different matter when questions are put to me in person and when my questioner is able to describe the bridge personality of the players involved. Then, I can make nicer decisions and this applies especially to the cases in which I am personally familiar with the contestants and their peculiarities. Take a hand like the following, for example:

♦ A J 9 6 3 2
♣ 9 7 5

WEST
♠ J 9 8
♥ Q 10 8 5 3
♦ K 8 5
♣ A 6

♠ 10
♥ J 6 4 2
♦ Q 10
♣ K Q J 4 3 2

SOUTH
♠ A Q 6 5 3 2
♥ A K 7
♣ 10 8

Suppose some one submitted to me only the North-South hands and asked me what North should do if the bidding went as follows:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 spades	Pass	?

This is one of those decisions that I hate to make at long range. If I were North, I would base my action at the point noted on my appraisal of my partner. If I consider South a good player I would raise to three spades without a qualm; this bid must be considered the correct one, academically and theoretically. But suppose I knew or suspected my partner to be rather weak in his play of the hand. Under that circumstance, I would probably pass, resigning myself to the possible loss of a game in the interest of surely acquiring a part score. In other words, my diagnosis, based on the bidding and my own holding, would be that a game contract would probably require good handling.

As a matter of fact, this hand occurred in actual rubber bridge play and, as North, I passed to two spades because experience had shown that this particular partner, South, did not handle his cards very well. It is interesting to note that my deliberate conservatism was well calculated in this instance. West opened the ace and another club, East won the second round, and continued with a third. My partner, with absolutely no thought, ruffed, and was promptly over-ruffed by West. Eventually, of course, the defenders had to be given a diamond trick and thus we were held to three odd.

Of course, no really good player in the South position would have been guilty of such a play as ruffing the third club. South had a sure diamond loser and therefore had nothing in the world to lose by tossing a diamond on the third club. Had he done so, four-odd would have become a laydown. But it was just such a mistake as this that I had allowed for and I commend this policy to my readers: Raise a good player aggressively, but when your judgment tells you that a high contract will offer problems of play, take it easy!

The bidding [both sides vulnerable]:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	6 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opens the heart king. Can declarer fulfill the contract against the best defense? [Declarer is permitted, in this case, to peek at the opponents' hands.]

ANSWER: Declarer can fulfill the contract by playing as follows: Win with heart ace. Draw one round of trumps. Lead diamond and if West plays low, finesse the ten spot. [If West splits his diamond honors, win with king, then return to South with a trump and finesse against West's other diamond honor.] Discard South's losing heart on dummy's third diamond. Ruff dummy's heart jack. Now, with hearts and diamonds stripped from the North-South hands, lead a club toward dummy and play either the queen or the ten. East wins but must return a club up to dummy's tenace, or a red card that will permit a ruff and discard.

Stock to Offer New Symphony Compositions

Dr. Frederick Stock, beginning his 34th year as conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Oct. 13, has promised several new compositions for the season's répertoire. Dr. Stock explains the large list of premières by the "larger number of interesting things being produced."

Six compositions by as many Americans are named: A new cello concerto by Arne Oldberg, composition teacher at Northwestern university; a violin concerto by Frederick Jacobi; a "Suite for Strings," by Charles Wakefield Cadman; a "Chorale for Strings," by Roy Harris; a "Suite for Orchestra," by Walter Piston, and the Fourth symphony by Harl McDonald. Jacobi, Harris, and Piston are being represented on the symphony concerts for the first time.

Other new works include Bartók's music for strings, piano, celeste and percussion instruments, as well as one of his piano concertos; "A Norfolk Rhapsody," by Ralph Vaughan Williams; Roussel's Symphony No. 4 and "Flemish Rhapsody," Schönberg's Suite for Strings, Martinu's Concerto for string quartet and orchestra, Max Trapp's "Symphonic Suite," Casella's "Introduction Chorale and March," Marcel Poot's "Allegro Symphonique," Hoeller's "Hymns on Gregorian Choral Melodies," Miaskowsky's Fifteenth symphony, Liadoff's "Symphonic Picture from the Apocalypse," Stan Golestan's "First Rumanian Rhapsody," "A London Overture" and a piano concerto by John Ireland, "A Varmland Rhapsody," by Kurt Atterberg; Prokofieff's "Russian Overture," Op. 72; an excerpt from "San Francesco d'Assisi," by Malipiero, and Von Reznicek's "Overture to a Comedy." Only two of these composers, Martinu and Hoeller, will be new to the symphony programs.

Sibelius' "Pohjola's Daughter" and the rhapsody, "A Shropshire Lad," by Butterworth, both of which have been played by the Illinois Symphony orchestra, will receive their first performances by the Chicago Symphony organization this season. Sibelius' Fifth symphony, Walton's "Façade," and Kodály's "Dance Suite" will be heard for the first time in Orchestra hall, although they have all been performed by the orchestra at the Ravinia festivals in past summers.

Novelties previously announced are Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde," Leo Sowerby's organ concerto, Alban Berg's violin concerto, and two compositions by Ernst Krenek, a piano concerto and "Triumph der Empfindsamkeit."

By Douglas Newton

Events Occur with an Ugly Swiftness After the Crazed Philly Breaks In Upon Anna and Philip Hartigan

CONCLUSION

(Copyright: 1938: By Douglas Newton.)

THINGS happened with an ugly swiftness. Anna Silver, seeing the crazy light in Philly's eyes, cried out to rouse the house.

Philip Hartigan shouted: "She has a knife! My God—look out, Anna!"

With an extraordinary effort he heaved himself from the bed, grappled the half-witted girl at the moment she sprang at Anna. Both lurched with a heavy thud against the wall, Philly wriggling fiercely to get free, her face set blankly ahead in a blind obsession to get at Anna.

Hartigan held to her tightly and caught her wrist in an effort to wrench the knife away. Only then did the mad mask of the girl's face twist into a living rage. She gave a shrill, animal scream of fury and turned on Hartigan, fighting like a wildcat.

Anna shouted and shouted for help as they staggered about the room. The half-witted girl had the superhuman strength of the insane. Hartigan, exhausted and lame, was no match for her. With a crash they hit the bed, fell onto it. Even then Hartigan held on like grim death, calling: "Get clear, Anna! She's mad!"

Anna hovered over the struggle trying to catch Philly's right arm. In the gray light it was impossible to time the quickness of the movements. She grabbed Philly once, but a lurch flung her across the room against the washstand.

There were sounds from below now, doors opening and voices calling. Anna shouted again, and as she shouted Hartigan gave a short, hoarse cry of pain. He fell down upon the bed, and Philly wriggled back, tugging her knife free for another stab. Instinct made Anna snatch the water can from the washstand and fling its contents over the mad girl, and, as Philly turned on her, smash the enameled can down on the girl's head.

Philly went down sprawling on top of Hartigan, and Anna, leaping forward, tore her off, thrusting her across the room while she covered the hurt man with her body. Philly rose to her knees, shaking her head like a hurt dog, but her eyes were fixed in a glare on Anna. She was half way up when there was a rush of feet outside and Hayman grabbed the mad girl and flung her out onto the landing.

The room was full of people in every state of undress. There was a babble of voices. Lot and Mrs. Weldegger were asking panic questions. Saul's voice cut in harshly:

"Hartigan's in here! Can't you see? Philly came up to stop them from escaping."

The babble broke out again. Anna sprang up to silence them, to tell them that Hartigan was hurt. Mrs. Weldegger screamed: "Blood! Philly's killed Miss Silver!"

There was blood all down the front of Anna's dress. It so terrified them that Anna could not make them understand that it was Hartigan who had been stabbed. It was Jim Bells who said:

"Hartigan's bleeding like a pig—she got him as well."

The double tragedy stunned them to silence, and Anna cried:

"Only he was stabbed. Help him, quick; he may be dying."

Jim Bells, cool and unmoved, shoved forward and examined the stricken man.

"He's got it bad," he said quite callously. "In the tummy."

"He'll—die?" Saul's voice shook as he asked.

"Like as not," Jim Bells shrugged, and he gave Saul an odd quick look.

It was then that Anna noted that Saul and Jim Bells were fully dressed, though the others were all half clad, but she had no time to think about that. Mrs. Hayman was saying:

"Fetch water, some one. Swabs! Towels! Hayman—where's Hayman?"

"He's locking Philly away," Lot muttered.

"Well, you, then—water, towels. And hurry. We've got to do something to keep off the gallows!"

The words struck them dumb. They stood palsied, terrified, as the brawny woman loosened Hartigan's garments and exposed the wound. It was narrow and deep, blood welling from it terribly. Mrs. Weldegger began to moan; only Anna was capable of helping. Mrs. Hayman straightened as she waited for Lot, stared at Anna.

"You—what about you? Where did she get you?"

"She didn't. He prevented her—saved my life."

"We must get a doctor at once," Mrs. Weldegger burst out.

"Don't be a fool," Jim Bells said contemptuously.

"But we must! We must save him! Think what it means if we don't. I knew I was right in not wanting to be mixed up in this. I knew it could only have a bad end."

She muttered on, all of them listening in dead silence until Lot came in with a bucket of clean water and an armful of towels. Hayman came with him. Hayman even pushed his wife aside, mumbling: "Leave it to me. I was in the army medical corps—I know how."

With strangely skilful hands he went to work on Hartigan. Under his treatment the injured man groaned a little, opened his eyes. He stared straight at Saul.

"So, Ben, this is where your crookedness leads you—murder?"

"None of my doing," Saul answered, pallid and furtive-eyed. "That girl is a half-wit—not responsible."

"But you are, Ben. You provided the impulse. Your responsibility began when you stole my play."

Mr. Saul licked dry lips, muttered: "Nonsense. We'll talk that over later."

Phil Hartigan shut his eyes as though he was past caring. Saul backed away. He touched Anna's elbow.

"Come downstairs," he murmured. "I want to know how it happened."

"I'm staying with Mr. Hartigan," Anna said, and turned her back on him. For a moment he grasped her elbow as though he would drag her away, but as she turned fiercely on him Jim Bells, who had been out of the room, came to the door, called him with a lift of his head, and he went out with the man.

They got the injured man comfortably onto the bed, and there was nothing more they could do for him. Anna sat by his side holding his hand; the others stood in a frightened group, listening to Mrs. Weldegger again insisting that they should get a doctor. The others, half won, half afraid, hesitated. Mrs. Hayman muttered, "He may be all right——"

"I know he won't," Mrs. Weldegger insisted. "I knew something would happen. I should never have let Ben talk me round."

"It was the money he offered, too," Mrs. Hayman scowled. "More than poor people could resist. And his swearing there wasn't no risk——"

"Well, there wasn't any, not in the ordinary way," Hayman put in. "Saul made that all plain enough. It was a hundred to one chance this chap ever knowing—or that Miss Silver would come back like that an' find him on the stairs."

"There always is something like that," Mrs. Weldegger whimpered. "Crookedness never does succeed."

"O, I don't know," Mrs. Hayman shrugged. "We ain't done yet. The motor cruiser's here, and, as Saul says, everything is now ready for just such an accident like this—didn't he celebrate on it last night? He's got the head that will pull us all through—for you can always trust him to look after himself, and that means us, too."

The half-witted girl had the superhuman strength of the insane.

"Yes, he's got the brains." Lot tried to be confident. "He was sure last night we could all get away safely—and you can depend on him."

Mrs. Weldegger only sniffed at that, and the talk ended in an uneasy silence. Anna had little attention for them. She was watching Philip Hartigan, who had slipped into an uneasy coma. She was growing so frightened that at last she said: "You must fetch a doctor for him. I'm afraid he's dying."

They all stirred uneasily at that. Some one said, "Better ask Ben Saul." Then Hayman said, "Where is Saul, anyway?"

"He went out ten minutes ago," Lot said.

HAYMAN got up and went downstairs. He was gone a good ten minutes. When he came back they heard him cross the landing and then cry out as he came running to the door.

"What is it?" Mrs. Hayman cried as she saw his frightened face.

"What do you mean, gone, too? . . . He couldn't!"

"His door's open. I went to it just now. Unlocked and open, an' the room empty."

They were all looking at Anna, their eyes scared, their voices babbling. Mrs. Hayman said threateningly, "So she slipped out during the uproar and let him free——"

"No, she didn't," Hayman said, his breathing thick. "I saw she didn't. . . . Besides, I remember something. Jim Bells asked me for the key while we was waiting for Lot. . . . An' Jim Bells has gone, too—and Saul!"

There was a babble of voices at first, all asking questions, all terrified. It was Mrs. Weldegger, fatalistically steady, who said:

"You know more than that, Hayman. What is it?"

"I looked through a window downstairs—the one where you can see the motor boat in the creek. And it's gone, too."

Lot let out a cackle of fear. Mrs. Hayman swore he was lying. But again Mrs. Weldegger's fatalistic voice cut across their babble:

"I knew that that was what he meant to do all along. I know him so well. . . . I ought to have realized last night. His 'celebrating' the completion of his plans—he was making us so drunk that he meant to have us all sleeping like hogs this morning when—I suppose the tide serves, Hayman?"

"Yes, by gum, he's got the tide with him."

"Yes, and he and Jim Bells were dressed," Lot screeched. "Why didn't I see what that meant? He meant to leave us in the lurch anyhow, and now——"

"An' now he's done it, the double-crossing hound," Mrs. Hayman roared.

Ronny and the police arrived while the Weldeggers and Haymans were trying to escape.

They were scuttling in and out of rooms, collecting pitiful bits of salvage, when there was a roar of cars from outside and abruptly the house was full of blue uniforms. The Weldeggers collapsed at once, the woman going into hysterics, Lot babbling the whole story of the crime to prove his innocence to the first policeman.

Only Mrs. Hayman made a sturdy dash for liberty, charging out of her kitchen, knocking down a policeman, and rushing toward the garage, where her husband was starting up Saul's big car. He had it moving and, with her on the running board, was actually bumping across a field toward an unguarded gate when a policeman flung his truncheon through a windshield. Thereupon Hayman swerved into the gatepost and the car was wrecked, though they were taken unhurt.

Anna was down the ladder at the first sound of the tumult, and even then found Ronny's arms half way. As she clasped him she cried to a sergeant behind him that there was a badly wounded man upstairs who needed a doctor, and then, as he ran to a window to signal, she panted out to Ronny the news of Saul's escape.

"Quick! Make the police do something. If that motor boat is not stopped that monster will get away for good."

Ronny only kissed her calmly and at leisure.

"The police are already doing it," he smiled as she struggled in his arms. "While I waited for the police to come up I telephoned again, this time to Gravesend, telling them of the motor boat and the likelihood of Saul's escape. They said they'd have launches off the mouth of the creek as soon as the police from Rochester arrived at Pluckshole. They even said they'd wireless a destroyer they knew was anchored in the Thames off the mouth of the Medway. So I fancy Saul's goose is cooked."

"In that case, kiss me again," Anna said. "O, my dear, it's terribly sweet not having to be afraid for you."

But they were not really heartless. A minute later they were with Hartigan. He was still unconscious, and the sergeant told them gravely that he looked so bad that the sooner they got him to a hospital the better. They were only waiting for the doctor before getting him down to one of the cars. A local doctor arrived a minute later and at once gave the orders for the move.

"Will he get over it, doctor?" Ronny asked anxiously.

"I doubt it," the doctor frowned. "It's an ugly wound."

"Will he die—soon?" Anna asked.

"No," the doctor said. "He may linger a day or two."

"And recover consciousness?"

"I think that likely," the doctor said, "though there's no saying."

They did not see Hartigan into the car, for at that moment a motor launch came rushing up the creek and a policeman landed from it and asked for Ronny.

"We've got Saul all right," he said, "but he's started talking big. Insists we have no legal right to board him, as he's done nothing. We want you to charge him."

Ronny, Anna, and the local sergeant went off in the police launch, and as they skimmed down the creek the river policeman told them what had happened.

Saul had nearly slipped them. His big cruiser was running for the open sea when they sighted him, and showing such a turn of speed that they had little chance of catching it. They signaled to the motor boat, but those on board pretended not to see.

It was only when the destroyer off the Medway began to move across Saul's bows that he saw that the game was up. He hove to promptly enough then and played the honest and indignant citizen when they boarded him.

"And," the man added grimly, "he's the sort that will get away with it, too, unless you've got something that will nail him good and proper."

"Murder's good enough, I guess," Ronny said grimly.

But it wasn't.

They found the motor cruiser anchored far out in the Thames, with a lean gray destroyer keeping watch over her and a cluster of police boats about her. Jim Bells was lounging in the pilot house, indifferent and sneering, a fag glued to his lips.

Saul was stretched in a deck chair on the after deck, a cigar in his hand, the living embodiment of a distinguished and reputable citizen. An inspector leaning against the rail near him swung curtly on them as they came aboard.

"Are you here to charge this gentleman?" he said, and his tone warned them that Saul was going to be a hard nut to crack.

"I charge him," Ronny said.

"What charge?"

"Murder!"

The inspector went rigid, but Mr. Saul said evenly:

"Who is murdered? I know nothing of this."

"Don't lie!" Ronny stormed. "You know very well a man was stabbed in your house and that he'll die."

"Not murder to begin with, then, as he's alive," Saul said quietly, and the look he threw at the inspector, as well as the frown on the officer's face, told them that they'd have to make a better case than that.

"Attempted murder, then, that will lead to a charge of murder when the man dies," Ronny said.

"And do I understand you to accuse me of stabbing this man?" Saul began loftily.

"Don't fence. You know Philly stabbed him——"

"Philly!" Saul pretended to be surprised. "But what nonsense! This girl Philly isn't even my servant, inspector. She's a half-witted maid employed by my sister in charity. What on earth concern have I with her? I mean, if, as this young man says, she stabbed some one in one of her outbreaks of mania, that's surely a matter for my sister and alienists rather than me. My sister, I take it, is at the house. Then she alone——"

The inspector, who had summed up Mr. Saul as a dangerous bit of goods to handle, said angrily:

"Is that all you charge him with?"

Anna saw that Saul was going to slip through their fingers. His long experience with criminals had taught him how to deal with the police, always bound down by legal procedure. She burst in:

"He's a material witness, anyhow. He may even be an accessory."

"What? Are you actually telling the inspector I was present when this affray happened?" Saul cried.

Anna was taken aback. Of course he wasn't, only——

"Was he, miss?" the inspector snapped.

"No, but——"

"There you are," Saul broke in. "It's a tissue of nonsense. Well, I deny the whole thing and mean to take all legal steps to protect myself."

"You're also a thief," Ronny cried.

"How—a thief?" the inspector demanded.

"Even now he is trying to escape to the continent with the proceeds, amounting to £100,000, of the play 'The Black Mark,' which he stole——"

"From Martin Davaray, the author," Saul jeered. "Well, I am Martin Davaray, the author, and I defy you to produce any evidence in court to prove me otherwise."

"You'd lose," Ronny said fiercely. "Mrs. Weldegger and Lot have already confessed to the police."

BUT Saul was not even taken aback by that.

"So you say. But they did not write that play, and I did, as my signature on scores of agreements shows——"

"That won't do," Anna put in. "The man who did write it has testified to me. I shall stand witness in court."

"What man?" Mr. Saul snapped.

"The man who was stabbed," Anna said.

"This sounds like a conspiracy, inspector," Saul said savagely. "They talk of this unknown man, of whom I deny all knowledge. They do not, you notice, even mention his name. He is probably unconscious now—yes, I thought so—and will remain so until he dies. It's a put-up thing to rob me. But even at that it's a civil action, because—well, what right even have you to intervene? Are you a relative of this man?"

"No," Ronny scowled. "But he's my best friend——"

"Friend!" Saul's scorn was final.

"If that's all," the inspector said severely, "the gentleman is right. It's a civil matter. You must proceed against him through the courts. I have no right——"

The local sergeant who had accompanied them from Dodmans, and who had come up behind them to listen, said here:

"What was the name you gave, sir?"

Saul, who had been smiling in triumph, broke off to look at him sharply.

"Me? Benjamin Saul is my name—or Martin Davaray; that's my pen name."

"Not Basil Lintz?" said the sergeant, and for some reason Saul was abruptly pallid and dumb.

"Nor Andreas Helmuth?" went on the sergeant.

"Why, what's this?" the inspector asked sharply.

"Well, here are two passports bearing those names and this gentleman's photograph. I found them hidden in the false bottom of his suitcase."

The inspector took the passports, studied them, said grimly to Saul:

"I'm afraid I must detain you, sir."

"Why?" Mr. Saul's demand scarcely rose above a husky whisper.

"For giving false information to the foreign office, and maybe traficking in passports. We've had word to keep a strict lookout for this sort of thing. Anything you have to say, sir, you'd better keep for Gravesend station, though I caution you——"

Saul, flabby and stricken abruptly, jumped to his feet and ran toward the rail. But his day was done. The sergeant shot out a foot and he fell, a winded and cringing mass, on his own deck. The sergeant stood over him while the inspector went forward and ordered Jim Bells to put the motor boat about.

THE nurse said, "You mustn't speak too much, Mr. Hartigan."

"It won't make much difference," the man in the hospital bed said gently, "and I might as well make the most of the time I have left."

He looked very weak as he lay there, yet somehow he looked more content. He knew he must die, probably before the afternoon was out, but he was not afraid and he was not complaining.

"Don't worry about me," he said, pressing Anna's hand because of the tears in her eyes. "I've learned to take these things with philosophy."

"Like Gorton in your play."

"Ah, my play—that was something, after all. I haven't really ended a complete failure."

"You've taught the world a lesson in courage," Anna cried. "And they'll know it's your message. The Weldeggers leave no doubt that Saul stole the play from you."

"Yes, and the police told me they found evidence among Saul's papers as well. And those lawyers you found me, Ronny, they say it'll take no time to get all the money back—such a huge amount, too. Poor Ben, to have fallen and bungled——"

"He's a dirty crook all the same," Ronny said.

"O, he was a good fellow once, like us all. Frail, like us all." Hartigan's face became still against his pillow. "Frail, all of us—that includes me, Ronny."

"It doesn't matter, Phil," Ronny said thickly.

"Not so much—now. It's all over, all the fear—and I hope my penance has served. But it might matter between me and you, boy."

"It'd make no difference, whatever you've been. I'm proud to have been your friend, Phil."

"The thing I did was ugly——"

"It doesn't matter. It was long ago, and you were young."

"No excuse," Philip Hartigan said. "I never found any for myself. I was guilty. I bitterly regretted it, but I was guilty. . . . The beast impulse in us all, Ronny. It flashes out under temptation of easy plunder—just like poor Saul. The others with me, they're still in prison. I escaped—perhaps Saul helped me; he knew the methods of the underworld even then, and kept silent about me. Count that to his credit, Ronny, when—when your day comes. . . .

"The money will help you to your farm. I'm glad it'll do good work for the world. And help you—together." He smiled at Anna. "But don't be hard on poor Saul if he should need help. Remember—I had a lot to be forgiven, too."

Presently he said: "It's been wonderful to have your friendship, Ronny. It's helped me over a lot of bad patches."

"It's meant everything to me, Phil. You've given me all that counts in life. I was nothing—and you gave me my chance."

"How I loved doing it!" the dying man smiled. "You know, I've been lucky—luckier than I deserve. I've written a play I'm proud of writing and seen it win a great success. I've had the devotion of you two grand young things and seen you happy together. Many men better than I have been far less blessed."

His head fluttered on the pillow; his breath was but a sigh.

"I'm making a happy ending in spite of all. No more fear, success and good friends—good friends about me——"

The nurse came from behind the screen and said cheerfully: "You must go now. He mustn't——" Then she said quietly: "No—you may stop. It's nearly over."

"They'll say I married you for your money if I don't get in first," she said with mock seriousness.

"We mayn't get it," he smiled. "Saul's still insisting he's the one and only author of 'The Black Mark,' so you may be taking on a beggarly little assistant demonstrator at an agricultural college."

"Stuff!" she said. "All the world, and especially the lawyers, know that he hasn't a ghost of a chance. I'm marrying the future owner of the Hartigan-Eltham Experimental Farm."

"So you're really marrying me for a home in your beloved country?"

"If you think that's your only attraction, all right," she laughed.

"Are there any others?" he smiled. "When we first met you seemed to regard me as the most unlikely human specimen on earth."

"Yes, I didn't think there was a ruder, unpleasanter young man living. And then I found one or two virtues."

"Such as?"

"I'll tell you on our honeymoon."

"Where shall that be?"

"Why not Africa?"

"The farm where Hartigan lived and wrote 'The Black Mark'?" he suggested.

"And where he learned about life," she said. "Yes, we'll go there—and learn about living, too."

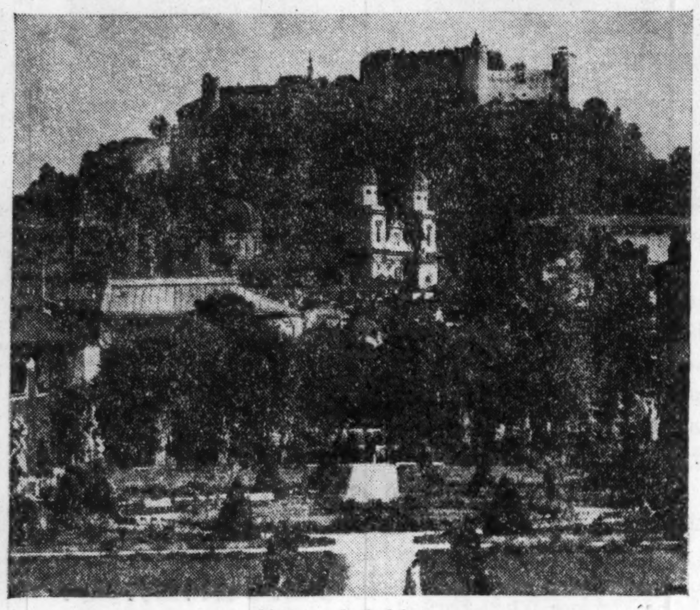
Nazi Invasion Alters Spirit of Salzburg

By May Birkhead

PARIS.—We had a glance this midsummer at two resorts in what once was called Austria. Now they both are absorbed, as a result of the well known anschluss, into Germany. One of them is Salzburg and the other Bad Gastein. As every one knows, Salzburg has been for years, with its great August music festival, a sort of artistic international playground where Americans, French, and British came in shoals. Bad Gastein, a noted health resort, with marvelous radioactive waters, drew many foreigners for the thermal and rest cure in July and August, but in September its hotels were reserved chiefly for the Austrians, especially Viennese, of the well-to-do classes and the nobility. It was the thing for them to go there after the summer feasting in Salzburg and elsewhere.



A View of Salzburg

It was a curious experience to see Salzburg and Bad Gastein this summer and to observe the great changes. At Easter, we were told, the Germans came to both of these celebrated towns, as to scores of other places in the Tyrol, in hordes, seeking what they could not get at home. They made a raid on the many products fashioned of fine Austrian wool, they bought all the butter in sight, and they gathered in all the oranges to be found.

The masses of the Austrian people in places such as Salzburg and Bad Gastein welcomed the first invasion of the Germans. But now, it seems, a change has come over the former Austrians. The Germanization of their easy-going ways, the verboten signs, the multiplication of the swastika and other German flags and emblems, have left them bewildered, not to say resentful. And they are wondering if their appeal to the foreigner is about to undergo complete eclipse.

Having attended several of the music festivals at Salzburg in recent years, we could not but be struck by the contrast this season. Of course, with Max Reinhardt in the bad books of the Germans, his famous production, "Everyman," usually given on the plaza in front of the cathedral, had been entirely suppressed, and his representation of Goethe's "Faust," with the remarkable series of stages worked into the walls of the old Reitenschule, had been supplanted by the same author's "Egmont." Neither this performance nor those of the operas given in the Festspielhaus suffered in the quality of their presentation. But the audiences—what a change! A handful only in evening dress, the rest were German youths, the men in plus fours or their equivalent and the girls in Scout costumes.

The crowd of Salzburgians that used to gather to see the notables get out of their cars was not there, nor were the highly dressed foreigners from many lands who made the scene in the Festspielhaus so brilliant. Salzburg was full of red flags and swastika emblems, but the streets seemed deserted except for the Scoutists marching. No more waiting for motors, as in the old days, when reaching the Festspielhaus was like getting to Longchamp on the day of the Grand Prix. The Wagnerian performances were well conducted and well sung, and so was Mozart's "Figaro"; but even the uninitiated could see the vast difference between Verdi's "Falstaff" as directed by Vittorio Gui and the marvelous performances of this opera under Arturo Toscanini, hitherto one of the summits of the musical season there.

So great was the disillusionment that it was some relief to get on to Bad Gastein. Every one revels in its amazing beauty, and its hotels flank the two grandiose waterfalls that spout in tandem right in the center of the town, while its background of forest and snow-clad mountains makes a panorama of permanent delight. August has never been a particularly fashionable time there. The normal big increase of its population came from those taking the cure. Its waters are so hot that they must be cooled for the baths, which, as some one has said, make the patient feel like a ball of India rubber. You take them right in the basement of the hotel where you happen to be staying. After the morning bath you must take two (Continued on Page 3.)

One of the youngest and prettiest members of the Chicago committee of the Arden Shore association is Miss Dale Klapproth. The committee is sponsoring an American Flagship ball on Oct. 8 at the Drake hotel to raise funds for the Arden Shore camp in Lake Bluff. The party is to be a dinner-dance.

Mrs. Frank E. Cheeseman is not having a leisurely early fall, for she is working on a benefit the Evanston Infant Welfare Juniors will give. It is to be a dinner-dance at the Palmer House on Oct. 28.

Right: Miss Patricia Bristol soon will be taking up her studies again at Mundelein college at Sheridan road and the lake. Mundelein students are assisting the Sacred Heart alumnæ with plans for a dinner-dance to be held at the Lake Shore Athletic club on Oct. 8 to raise funds for a scholarship for the daughter of some former Sacred Heart pupil. Miss Bristol's parents are the James T. Bristols of Lake View avenue.

Finds Geneva Is the Saddest City in Europe

By Cousin Eve.

EN ROUTE TO BRUSSELS

It took backbone to leave Cannes with everything so beautiful. There was the Esterel reaching a long blue arm into the sea, glittering like a lane of sapphires and diamonds. On the left, rocky fantastic Antibes, highly fashionable, that belonged to my ancestors centuries ago.

Paul, the ace chauffeur, dashed us away with no time for heartbreak, crossing plane-shaded avenues like a streak for the up and up behind Grasse. We were taking Napoleon's road over the Alpes Maritimes, a dear dream of mine. These Alps rise suddenly and mysteriously from the sea in granite walls that have known Napoleon's armies and what others?

So I had longed to solve their mystery. En route to the orientalist congress at Brussels to improve my mind, we were leaving paradise for a purely highbrow adventure.

At Grasse, terraces of roses and tuberoses, of heliotrope and myosotis for the soap industry, wafted a farewell from the Midi as we shot up.

Behind lay the entire panorama of the Blue Coast, blazing in the sun, until walls of rock swallowed it and us. It was a day of hairpin turns and granite precipices, highly exciting and grand. The air was like wine of Auvergne, heady and pure; and there were strange peaks and deep valleys. And far blue vistas of lesser vales and peaks. Near Castellance huge signs "Halte! Arretez!" might have stopped us for luncheon. But we didn't believe in signs and pushed on to Digne, where the fare at the only hotel was marvelous. It is one of a chain operating over all the Midi.

We raced on, as Aix-lex-Bains was our objective, and at Sisteron ran into a sinister mass of motors on the high road. It was the third accident that morning, with cars smashed or turned over, and here the victim was an English lad, Jack. He whispered that he was dying. But the doctor said he had a chance, poor boy!

Sisteron has a dark spooky church from the eleventh century, a "monument historique," with heavy Gallo-Roman columns, and great black stoves at the rear. Music was going on, odd barking of the choristers of Provence, shouting with much insistence from the darkness of the nave. A stained glass window over the altar and a few bulbs were all the light. We did not climb the mountainous citadel to see its thousand year old relics, but took for granted that the view up there was marvelous. And so wended our way into Savoy, having passed that day the provinces of the Alpes Maritimes, the Basses Alpes, and Provence.

Aix-les-Bains is one of the loveliest and most fashionable spas in Europe. People take aches and pains to Aix and leave them behind, having a nice time in the process. We descended at an old fashioned house, the Villa Victoria, built for Queen Victoria when she visited Aix with a huge suite. It was filled with English who regarded Aix as the great world, and dressed for dinner accordingly. The four large glass dining rooms of the hotel were gleaming with bare bones, shoulder blades, fans, jewelry, satins, feather capes, and what have you. It was really a great gesture I thought, this making of a cure dinner into a party. Very heroic! But after that we patronized the Hotel Splendide dining room, where the guests don't take things so seriously. In fact it was like the Ritz in Paris, very gay indeed and cosmopolitan.

The Splendide, set high on the mountain with lovely gardens and vistas, is gorgeous inside. Its walls are sustained by columns and pilasters of lapis lazuli and gilded bronze. Its furniture is white or pale yellow. In the dining room the pillars are yellow marble. They have a snappy orchestra and the food is beyond compare. This orchestra, like all the others, gave us "Snow White" without let or hindrance.

I asked the maître d'hôtel what celebrities he had for the moment. And he pointed out Edouard Herriot, Radical-Socialist, eating cosily in a corner.

The casion at Cine was most amusing. There were two boule tables and crowds around them making one franc bets. It takes a long time to get hurt with a three cent franc, and the croupiers looked discouraged. Dancing was being done in an elegant, formal way, mostly waltzing, everybody in toilette du soir, with hundreds standing and goggling.

Admission to the Casino is only four francs, so the little bourgeoisie of Aix goes and gives itself a time, watching wealth and fashion, with a touch of rheumatism, comport itself.

Opera and comedy by the best artists are given during the season, and the golf and tennis clubs keep the visitors amused by day. The cure houses, bath houses, parks and floral effects, are beautifully kept up, and on the old fashioned side, rather than modern. Aix has a pensive, dreamy atmosphere like a time-worn colored print, and its patrons are for the better part gout addicts of the old school.

Two hours of driving and we were in Geneva, having passed Grenoble, Annecy, and its mountain lake. To me Geneva is now the saddest place in Europe. I had remembered it as a sparkling capitol on a glorious blue lake with a back-drop of mountains.

I remembered it with Mount Blanc towering fifteen thousand feet into the blue sky—with light hearted travelers, with fashionable suburbs, with music and a train of life!

I found Geneva dreary and gray—Lake Geneva was drab, the mountains were draped in fog, the hotels fairly empty. Besides being gray, Geneva was expensive, and how! The Swiss franc is something to reckon with, a sort of half brother several times removed of the French franc, and travelers run quick, quick into France where the exchange favors them.

Before dark we motored up and out to the huge, sprawling white building which houses the league of nations. This "palace" does not even dominate the hill upon which it stands, being a two storied office building; but two millions of Rockefeller money are in it.

I asked a sad looking shopkeeper if the league of nations had not brought prosperity to Geneva? He said that the five hundred permanent members of the league had not made a dent in the depression that was going on in Geneva. And that for three weeks of September the league members would meet and buzz, but that was all. It would not help the situation.

The best hotel was a spotless inn with beautiful linen and service. We dined there upon roast veal, which was wheeled around the salle à manger on a little silver gocart. For the sweet course we had melon ice to counterbalance the first course, which was a watery soup. The melon, they said, was not "marqué," an ominous sign in Europe. When things are not "marqué" one passes them by.

One hour later, assailed by pangs of hunger, we passed into the nearby casino and ordered a nice little hot supper. One franc boule was being played here, but the Geneva casino was a sad, lugubrious place and did not hold us.

Next morning we left Switzerland in a light drizzle, rounding the lake to Nyon, which for the moment is the best frontier. It was sad to see so many lakeside villas for sale, and lovely old châteaux boarded up. Voltaire lived most of his life at Ferney, still occupied, and Rousseau, Goethe, Lord Byron all wrote of beautiful Geneva and its lake. We saw the Jura mountains in a fog blanket and had a good Provençal luncheon at the Corne d'Or at Champenolle. Here many chic motors had gathered in a downpour.

The dining room was nice, for the landlord and his whole family were hustling cobwebby Burgundies and viandes du pays to their patrons. Near us sat a French duc and his wife, red cheeked and hearty in hunting dress, with their hunting dogs under the table. Several diligence loads came in very hungry and the whole atmosphere was comfy and old style.

Our Paris chauffeur Paul had learned by now that an antiquary shop or a twelfth century cathedral was sure to stop the car. So he detoured to avoid Gallo-Roman towers and flying buttresses and passed curiosity shops at 90 kilometers an hour. But he could do nothing about Auxerre, nor yet Dijon, two large, highly Gothic cities abounding in buttresses and Gallo-Roman fortresses, which barred our route. Many Burgundian dukes of the royal line have strutted into their splendid cathedrals, and although we were traveling to Fontainebleau two hundred kilometers away, we stopped and lingered long.

Avallon is a usual stopping place for the night. There is a snug inn, too, and the town is attractive. But Fontainebleau is in the forest, and we contrived to arrive rather late at the Hôtel d'Angleterre. This was, centuries ago, a country house of the ducs of Guise, lying as it does at the very gilded gates of their rich kinsmen, the kings of France.

One doesn't often rave about hotels, but this Hôtel d'Angleterre was fascinating. It was also very expensive, really a hôtel de grand luxe. It was dark when we came into the cobbled courtyard, where on the left in a long glass gallery a few people were still at dinner. The wall of this gallery was covered with hundreds of framed colored prints and engravings of long ago. The entire ameublement of the hotel was old and lovely.

Our bedrooms were in marvelous taste, the walls hung with Toile de Jouy, the beds modeled after Marie Antoinette's bed in the château. Each bed, by the way, was draped with a moustiquaire, or mosquito net, formidably large and strong. So that in the middle of the night, when awakened by the vast and disturbing silence of Fontainebleau's forest, it was wonderful to hear the mosquito's battle song and not to feel its bite.

At the Angleterre they did a thing I like. The maître d'hôtel presents the peaches, set out upon a bed of cotton, as if he were M. Cartier exposing a superb ruby to my bedazzled eyes.

The château looked magnificent next morning. The right wing is now a music school, where many Americans study and Lucien Muratore teaches singing. In the street beween French officers were off for a gallop in the forest with pretty women in riding dress.

The Château de Fontainebleau is a gorgeous plaisance wonderfully kept up, where kings of France have disported since François I. To describe the florès of its carved, gilded, and tapestried chambers would make a book. I liked Mme. de Maintenon's suite, with a bust of Louis XIV. on the marble chimney piece. There was a thrill over the small table where Louis XIV. revoked the edict of Nantes, with which Henri IV. had given liberty to Protestants eighty-five years before. The Grand Condé died here, and Josephine was divorced at Fontainebleau in 1806. Among many other stirring things that came to pass in this glorified hunting lodge of Louis VII., the most dramatic was probably the abdication of Napoleon Bonaparte. This took place in Napoleon's small study at a little three cornered table April 4, 1814, when he signed his name to the document.

One walks through these rooms in a daze, trying in a way to repeople them. Strange, too, are the royal monograms carved in the gorgeous woodwork: H. and D. [Henri and Diane de Poitiers], F. and G. [François I. and Gabrielle].

There is a marvelous Chinese museum at Fontainebleau, brought to France by the first French mission 150 years ago.

We returned to Paris via the artist colony at Barbizon, which has grown into quite a town. The studios of Millet and Rousseau have been preserved by their students and friends and one duly visited them. Driving back through the open fields we saw the locale of Millet's "Angelus," with the old church tower in the distance and the huddle of peasant houses.

Paris was very exciting. The Americans were all flitting home like swarms of frightened birds. Instead of the usual gay time at the collections, lunching beforehand at the Ritz, or dropping in late for tea and seeing one's friends, there is nothing of the sort.

The threat of war put a quietus even upon the new styles. Parisians are still away in the country and rarely has one seen Paris so empty. It seems rather a lark to be going to Brussels to meet up with the orientalists. I dined at the Eau de France, a celebrated bourgeois restaurant hugged up against the Gare de l'Est, where one hears railroad engines puffing as one eats. It's the sort of a place nice young Frenchmen take their fiancées, and one has familiar conversation with all the staf from the patron down to the tiniest buttons. Imagine my surprise when William K. Vanderbilt, his wife and her daughter, Betty Warburton, who comes out this winter in New York, arrived at the next table.

I also had tea with Count and Countess Giovanni Castagnola, who filled a flock of little tables at the Ritz with their guests. They, too, had just come up from Cannes. Among their guests were Mrs. Randolph Minor, Mrs. Paul Healy, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Williams, and Herman Gade, who is returning to Boston before long, and will come to Chicago.

Art Faculties of Distinction Begin Classes

By Eleanor Jewett.

This season of the year is filled with the opening of schools and galleries. Painters of distinction are joining various faculties and gallery managers are arranging prospective shows with an eye to making this the most brilliant winter of a series of winters which have been, to put the lowest value on them, interesting.

Wellington J. Reynolds, one of our better known painters and one who has been honored abroad recently, has for several years been a teacher at the Chicago Art institute. This year he has joined the faculty of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts. He will teach anatomy and drawing in the day school and advanced drawing and painting in the night school.

The Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, 18 South Michigan avenue, plans to instruct in modern photography. Floyd Merideth Wright has had a great deal of experience and met with a good measure of success in this craft and he will teach all aspects of photography, including lighting, composition, and dark room technique. His classes are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

Frank H. Young, director of the American Academy of Art, 25 East Jackson boulevard, announces the addition of two new instructors to the faculty. Harland Frazer, nationally known illustrator, will teach an evening class in painting and illustration. Miss Libera Yetta, prominent dress designer and stylist, will teach the mechanics of dress design in the day school.

Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, world famous as a founder of modern architecture, has joined the faculty of the Armour Institute of Technology in Chicago as professor of architecture and director of the school of architecture. He has just returned from Europe to undertake his duties in Chicago. The appointment of Mies van der Rohe is in line with the current expansion program of the institute and is one of the first important steps toward making the architectural department of Armour one of the foremost in the United States.

The American Academy of Art, by the way, is introducing a course in cartooning, open only to advanced students, during the coming year. The class will be under William Hugh Juhre. Antonin Sterba, portrait painter and etcher, has been added to the evening school faculty to teach life drawing.

The fall term of the Chicago Art institute opened last Monday. There has been a change in the evening classes. Instead of three evenings a week, classes will be held four evenings—Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday—from 6:30 to 9 o'clock. Students will be permitted great freedom of choice in their courses. If they wish, experienced artists may work without criticism.

The last statement strikes rather oddly on the ear, for it is the popular notion that criticism is practically 90 per cent of art instruction. One is led to wonder why any artist who does not wish his work criticized should bother to take instruction. Surely if a student may work without criticism, then, indeed, has painting become the stronghold of personal freedom—even to the creation of stuff that fears no censor, no matter how poor it may be. Somehow this does not tally with our idea of learning. But—other times, other customs.

Through its department of education the Art institute is offering an unusually attractive program of lectures this fall. Starting tomorrow, at 11 a. m., Miss Helen Parker will open a series of talks in the galleries, alternating with illustrated discussions of various art topics. Beginning tomorrow, too, is the series of talks on the art and life of the people of Guatemala and Mexico given by Miss Helen Barsaloux during the noon hour, from 12:15 to 12:45 o'clock. On Tuesday evening, Sept. 27, from 6:30 to 8 o'clock, Miss Parker will open a group of lectures designed to survey the arts of the Netherlands and Germany, and of the French Rennaissance. The Florence Dibell Bartlett free lectures on "Adventures in the Arts" will be given every Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall by Miss Parker.

Walter J. Sherwood, editor of the Art institute weekly news letter, is back from a month's vacation which he spent at Woodstock, N. Y. Mr. Sherwood met a great many artists there, among them Doris Lee, Charles Rosen, John W. Taylor, Alfeo Faggi, Kuniyoshi, Jean Paul Slusser, and John Nichols, cousin of Chicago's Dale Nichols.

With an increase in enrollment over that of last year, the Evanston Academy of Fine Arts has opened its twelfth school year. The distinguished portrait painter, F. R. Harper, has been added to the teaching staf. Mr. Harper will conduct the class in painting.

Violet Beatrice Wenner, well known for her many stunning portraits of prominent people, has opened her studio in the Italian court, 619 North Michigan avenue, for classes to both beginning and advanced students. Clases will cover still life, flower, and portait painting. Mme. Wenner will give a lecture on art once a month and will conduct those who are interested on a tour of some current Chicago exhibit. The classes give every indication of being a pleasant place in which to develop one's latent talent cr improve what talent one may have.

The eighth season of plays at the Goodman theater, Art institute, will open on Monday evening, Oct. 2. The play will be "Why Not?" a Pulitzer prize winner, by Jesse Lynch Williams. It is planned to put on ten plays this season, the productions to be chosen mainly from Pulitzer prize winners.

The Children's theater will open on Saturday, Nov. 12, with a matinée at 2:30 o'clock. A play about Tom Sawyer will start the season.

The popular Sunday travel lectures given by Dudley Crafts Watson in Fullerton hall, Art institute, last year will be featured again this season. The first lecture is this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mr. Watson's subject is "Michoacan and the Tarascans." On succeeding Sundays Mr. Watson will discuss "Glimpses of North Africa," "Rome," "Vienna," "Paris," and "London."

"MIDSTREAM" BY ALBRIGHT

Adam Emory Albright enjoys a deathless fame in the parade of childish figures which has flowed constantly from his easel during more than a quarter of a century of painting. This delightful episode, suggestive of the season that has just slipped into the past, is in his finest manner and contributes greatly to the charm of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts exhibition at the Stevens hotel.

Dedication of Hall to Honor Frances Willard

Frances Willard, pioneer feminist and temperance leader, will receive the tribute of fellow Northwestern university alumnæ and members of Alpha Phi when the new Willard hall on the Evanston campus is dedicated Wednesday, the 99th anniversary of her birth. Alpha Phi members will present a portrait of Miss Willard, to hang in the hall.

President Walter Dill Scott will officiate at the dedication of the new dormitory for freshmen girls. A pageant, "A Century of Women's Achievement," will be presented by alumnæ, with Mrs. Hope Summers Witherell in the rôle of Frances Willard. The dedication of the portrait will follow the pageant.

Miss Willard was initiated into Alpha Phi's first chapter in 1875 at the University of Syracuse, where she was studying for her master's degree. In 1881 she helped to organize the second chapter at Northwestern university, her Alma Mater, and seven years later she became national president. Miss Willard founded the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and built it to a world-wide organization. She was president of Northwestern Female college before it became a part of Northwestern university.

Hostesses at the reception will be Mrs. James Ware Barton, North Shore Alumnæ president; Miss Rosemary Hickox, president of Beta chapter; Mrs. Samuel E. Lingle, president of Alpha Phi House association; Mrs. Roy D. Shelton, alumnæ adviser, and Mrs. Ralph M. Strader, district governor.

At the reception gold medals w[ill] be presented to four Chicago hi[gh] school students for essays submitt[ed] in a contest sponsored by the St[u]dent Pan-American league. Ernst P[...] of Hirsch High school, Roderick B[...]sam of Austin, Tom Grefenkamp [of] Hirsch, and Miss Carolyn Sims of La[ke] View were winners in the ord[er] named. Javier H. Tribune Plans Conference on Club Publicity

By Betty Browning.

What does newspaper publicity mean to an organization? How can an organization go about obtaining such recognition? What activities make "news"?

These and many other questions will be discussed at a press conference to be held under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE Thursday, Nov. 3, at 2 o'clock in the handsome auditorium of station W-G-N. An invitation is extended to all women's organizations to send representatives. Because of the limited number of seats available, only presidents, press chairmen, and program chairmen are included in the invitation. Admission will be by ticket only.

Each autumn writers who report club activities are besieged with requests for information on how to get accounts into the paper. Since it is impossible for the hundreds of clubs, parent-teacher associations, church organizations, American Legion auxiliaries, civics, patriotic, artistic, and philanthropic organizations within the forty mile area covered by the downtown and metropolitan sections to receive individual instructions, a press conference has been planned.

Presidents and program chairmen, as well as press chairmen, are invited, because a press chairman usually is hampered unless they understand her problems.

A brief program—limited to two hours, with no speeches to exceed fifteen minutes — has been outlined. Specialists will discuss each phase of newspaper publicity as it pertains to organizations. Speakers will include Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin, beloved Elgin, Ill., club leader, who, as press and publicity chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, directs the publicity of an organization of two million women in America and twenty-one foreign countries.

Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin.

Chesser M. Campbell, advertising manager of THE TRIBUNE, one of the youngest men ever to hold this position, with a veteran's experience extending back to his first job on the Paris Tribune when he was just out of college.

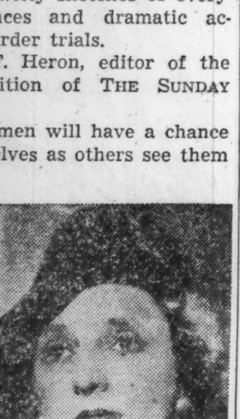
Miss Marcia Winn, girl reporter for the city desk whose by-lines have appeared over witty sketches of everyday occurrences and dramatic accounts of murder trials.

Laurence T. Heron, editor of the Canadian edition of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

Press chairmen will have a chance to see themselves as others see them and their difficulties. A skit drawing on the experiences of eight press chairmen has been prepared for the conference and will be presented by the Chicago Woman's club players. Mrs. Fred W. Waterman, press chairman of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, is chairman of this group and will have a leading rôle.



Mrs. Fred W. Waterman.

A surprise feature on the program has been arranged with the cooperation of Jason F. Whitney, president of the Chicago City Opera company.

Each of the writers who handle news of women's organizations in the downtown and metropolitan sections briefly will discuss ways and means of obtaining publicity through her department.

Tickets for the conference may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with each request to the Club Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Mrs. Waterman will give a press tea at 1:30 o'clock next Thursday at federation headquarters, 30 West Washington street, to open the season for her department. District and club presidents also are invited as guests of their press chairmen. Mrs. William T. Bruckner, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Lufkin will be guests.

Another press meeting will be held Friday at 2:30 o'clock in the Ivory tearoom at Mandel Brothers' store. All women's organizations in the Chicago area are invited.

Betty-Jane Winans Is to Be an Autumn Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Van Clement Winans of Glen Ellyn announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty-Jane, to Dr. Kenneth E. Kloehn, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Kloehn of Appleton, Wis.

Miss Winans was graduated from Lawrence college in Appleton. Dr. Kloehn attended Lawrence college and was graduated from Northwestern University Dental school. The wedding will take place late this fall.

hours of rest; and then every one starts on one of the attractive promenades in the midst of the wonderful scenery, some of the paths leading right underneath the giant waterfalls which, if you look at them at night, show a strange phosphorescence.

In this cure resort organized amusements are few. Whatever diversion is to be had must be arranged among congenial groups for themselves. The larger hotels seemed to be comparatively unfrequented. Among the Americans we saw Mrs. Grenville T. Emmet, widow of the late ambassador to Austria, and her daughter; Miss Ruth Hitchcock, daughter of the late Senator Gilbert Hitchcock of Nebraska, and Countess Colloredo Mansfeld, the former Nora Iselin of New York. planning a rapid visit to her husband and son in Vienna before going to Italy and the French Riviera. With her was a former South Carolinian, Mrs. Clark Williams.

Some animation was given to the American group by the presence of Thomas H. Watson, president of the International Business Machines corporation, who almost caused a sensation by telephoning from Bad Gastein to his wife in the United States. Mr. Watson's European headquarters are at Geneva, and he had invited to Bad Gastein some twenty of his European representatives and their wives, who eagerly joined in the costume parties where Tyrolean dress was worn.

The inhabitants of Bad Gastein, very Austrian in tradition, resented the invasion of the Germans. There were virtually no swastika flags to be seen in August, and although the dozen or so Jewish shops were marked and in two or three places there were signs that Jews were forbidden, the natives exhibited little ardor for the new régime which tries to draw hard and fast lines among this easy going people.

Convalescent Home to Raise Funds at Dance

The junior board of the Chicago Home for Convalescent Women and children will dance at a Swing ball next Saturday evening at the Palmer house in order to raise funds for the home at 2678 West Washington boulevard. Together with the senior board the junior board members maintain this refuge for underprivileged women and children discharged from hospitals but nevertheless too ill to return to their homes.

Mrs. Kane Cavenaugh.

The children's dormitory is the particular responsibility of the junior board. Here hundreds of youngsters have been helped to regain their health. More than 15,000 women and children have been cared for at the home since it was opened in 1902. In that year Miss Anne Hibbard, a worker in the wards of a number of hospitals, interested Mrs. Solomon Sturgis in the idea of a home for convalescent patients. The first home was opened in an old house at 1516 West Adams street, with Mrs. Henry C. Lytton as president, and Mrs. Sturgis as chairman of the board. Mrs. Robert Babcock followed Mrs. Lytton in the presidency.

As the neighborhood changed, the pressure to change the location of the home grew greater, and in 1923 the present house and lot at 2678 Washington boulevard were purchased. With increased facilities — there are 66 beds—the home now can keep its patients longer.

Philanthropy Is Nucleus of Social Plans

By Judith Cass.

It's the open season for benefits, and every one is working hard for some philanthropic cause. Not all of the benefits are affairs of the immediate future, however, for some of them are just in the process of being planned. Recently, at Mrs. Alden B. Swift's in Lake Forest, a group of women met to form a permanent sort of organization to work for the Lake Bluff orphanage. Every summer for several years this group has been sponsoring a garden party and fair to raise funds for the orphanage, but now it is planned to start work on the annual benefit earlier in the season and to make it a larger affair.

The garden party always is given at Bel Orme, Mrs. Harry McIntosh's beautiful estate in Lake Forest. Mrs. McIntosh and Mrs. Caswell A. Sharpe are honorary members of the new organization. Mrs. Swift, Mrs. Lithgow Mitchell, Mrs. Nicolas Starosselsky, Mrs. Owen West, Mrs. J. Sterling Davis, Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mrs. Marvin Pool, Mrs. Austin Niblack, and Mrs. Alexander H. Revell Jr. are among others interested in the orphanage.

Those who count Orphans of the Storm a pet charity are working already to make a success of a lecture-luncheon to be given for the benefit of the animal shelter in Deerfield on Nov. 22. The lecture will be given by Abbé Ernest Dimnet, who will arrive in this country in October for his annual lecture tour. His subject for the orphans' benefit will be "The Changing Map of Europe." The affair will be given in the ballroom of the Drake hotel.

Miss Mildred Fitzhugh is general chairman of arrangements. Assisting her are Mrs. Lithgow Mitchell, Mrs. Owen B. Jones, Miss Sylvia Peter, Mrs. Melville Flynn, Mrs. Cyril W. Anderson, Mrs. Dean R. Matson, Mrs. Allen Ashcraft, and Miss Elise Chauvet.

The Winnetka junior board of the Infant Welfare society met last week at the Indian Hill club and elected new officers for the coming year. Mrs. Richard Scott is president; Miss Phoebe Massey, vice president; Mrs. Burton Hales, treasurer, and Mrs. John Holmes, secretary.

The annual rummage sale for the benefit of the Grant hospital will be held on Oct. 13 at the nurses' home. The woman's auxiliary of the hospital is in charge of the sale, but the chairman of the auxiliary, Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, will not be here to conduct it. She is abroad and will not return until the end of October. Mrs. Donald Wood is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Tomorrow afternoon at the Casino the debutantes who are not combining debut and school activities will be the guests of the fashion show committee of St. Luke's hospital at tea. It is not purely a social gathering, for the purpose is to "weigh in" the buds and discover which have possibilities as mannequins. Not only are their weights, their heights, and the sizes of their shoes registered but the efficient and tactful secretary puts hieroglyphics on each card to indicate a young lady's bad as well as her good points.

The show itself, THE benefit of each season, will be given on the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, Oct. 18, in the Grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel. The debs who do not model on the runway will sell flowers and cigarets to the several thousand women who are there in the afternoon and to the hundreds of men and women who are at the evening performance.

The debs will have a taste of modeling before they work for St. Luke's hospital, however, for on Wednesday afternoon of this week they will make their debuts as mannequins at the twelfth annual fashion show of the Winnetka board of Northwestern university settlement. This is St. Luke's twelfth show, too. The north shore show will be given in the gymnasium of the New Trier High school in Winnetka. Many luncheon parties will precede it, some of the hostesses being Mrs. Donald Defrees, Mrs. Chester Sargent, Mrs. George Booth, Mrs. Harold Barnes, Mrs. Calvin Selfridge, and Mrs. Whipple Jacobs.

Mrs. Austin Jenner will give a tea on Tuesday for the models who will take part in the show. Mrs. Jenner is chairman of the large and capable committee that has planned the event.

The new Willard hall, the freshman women's dormitory of Northwestern university, has been completed and the dedication ceremonies will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday in the west women's quadrangle.

Mrs. Richard B. Hart, president of the Associate alumnæ, will introduce Mrs. Minna M. Schmidt, who will present her pageant of "A Century of Women's Achievement." President Walter Dill Scott will deliver a brief address of dedication, and Mrs. Hope Summers Witherell, in the rôle of Frances Willard, will assist in the ceremonies. Following the dedication, alumnæ will act as guides in showing visitors through new Willard hall. In case of rain the ceremonies will be held the next day.

Dog lovers are looking forward to the Northbrook Kennel club dog show to be held next Sunday in the Riding hall at the Onwentsia club. The show is especially popular with amateur dog fanciers because the dogs do not have to be registered with the American Kennel club to be eligible in the Northbrook event, and its "papers" and other information about pedigrees are not required, either. If it is not registered arrangements can be made at the time of entering the dog for a card file to be set up with the American Kennel club, upon which will be noted a complete record of the dog's winnings.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody have entered some of their toy Manchester terriers in the show. These diminutive dogs weigh but seven or eight pounds, and Mr. Peabody hopes to have the name "Miniature Manchester" adopted by the A. K. C. as the breed's official designation.

Invitations are out for a swing ball to be given by the junior board of the Chicago Home for Convalescent Women and Children on Oct. 1 at the Palmer house. The party is to be a dinner-dance, with supper served from 8 until 11 o'clock. Mrs. James Hyland and Mrs. Fred Cloyd, at Plaza 3500, are taking reservations.

Growing boys who are active in sports may safely absorb more than four thousand calories in their food each day, which is probably twice as much as their mothers need and even much more than their fathers eat.

Grandmothers of the Nation Will Convene Oct. 1

Chicago grandmothers will be hostesses to grandmothers from all parts of the country at the first annual convention of the National Grandmothers' club, Oct. 1 and 2, at the Morrison hotel. Sunday, Oct. 2, has been proclaimed National Grandmothers' day by the organization.

A button replica of the famous Della Robbia plaque of a baby with outstretched arms is to be the official insignia of delegates. A bar may be added for each grandchild, a star for great-grandmothers.

Incorporated last spring, the club was founded by three Chicago grandmothers, all successful business women. Mrs. Marie K. Brown, president, has charge of a railroad's travel service. Mrs. Ora H. Snyder, candy manufacturer, is treasurer, and Mrs. Grace A. Gray, third founder, is secretary. It was the arrival of her first grandchild at the time of the annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs three years ago that prompted Mrs. Brown to round up the other grandmothers at the meeting and compare notes with them.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

ESCORTED TOURS

Lesser Antilles Give You Your Fill of Tropics

By Percy Wood.

In three weeks' cruising from New York the traveler who doesn't require luxury liner accommodations may take his fill of tropic life and beauty by calls at thirteen islands in the Lesser Antilles—the little West Indies—where colonial administration proceeds variously under American, British, and French auspices.

Most of this warm archipelago, which stretches southeastward from St. Thomas in the Virgin group to Trinidad, off the northern coast of Venezuela, was discovered by Columbus in the course of his later voyages and much of it is not on standard tour itineraries—an omission which may be amended if the current popularity of the Caribbean continues.

For centuries the battlegrounds of English, Spanish, French, and Danish admirals, as well as the lair of pirates, the Lesser Antilles are agricultural islands, producing sugar cane, fruits, coconuts, tobacco, cacao, and cotton—to the extent that tillable soil can be wrenched from the jungles and the tall peaks, some of which still are active volcanoes. They are peopled by descendants of African slaves, blacks whose speech ranges from clipped English through broken Spanish and a curious French patois, depending upon the nationalistic history of their particular island.

By and large they are a peasant class, working the crops for white landlords and appearing somewhat more prosperous in the French and American islands than in the British. Keenly aroused to the growing tourist trade and its possibilities of largesse, the profession of port guide and chauffeur to the traveler is gaining in favor among the field hands.

The typical little West Indies cruise from New York is aboard a combination freight and passenger ship of intermediate tonnage, with accommodations for perhaps 100 in first class, as many more in second, and a heterogeneous cargo.

On the forward deck, well lashed against the anticipated swells off Cape Hatteras, may be a steam roller for St. Vincent, a mahogany colored bull destined to be lord of a herd in Antigua, and, if the holiday season is near, a great bunch of Christmas trees for the delight of children who never have seen snow. Below hatches are automobiles, farm machinery, general merchandise, and mail.

Five mornings after a noon sailing, before dawn risers aboard ship see, off the starboard bow, a light which is the eastern tip of Porto Rico, the first land since New York. Presently the brown cliffs of St. John, a Virgin Island, slip by, and then the steamer swings into the landlocked harbor of Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas, amazingly beautiful with the coming of daylight.

Point of administration for the Virgin Islands, which the United States bought from Denmark for $25,000,000 in 1917, St. Thomas was once the favorite hideout of pirates preying on the Spanish galleons that carried gold and silver from Mexico. On a hill overlooking the fabulous harbor stands a squat tower called Blackbeard's castle, after a singularly gifted cutthroat whose fierce countenance looks out from the pages of American school books. Another tower on a nearby hill—which is now part of a hotel—bears the name of Bluebeard's castle, for a French privateersman known as Edouard le Barbe Bleu.

A drive about St. Thomas and up to Drake's seat, on a ridge overlooking both the Atlantic and the Caribbean, discloses Danish influenced picture card white houses with amazingly red roofs, an old red fort now used as a city hall, and a street of ancient stores, where some tourists yield to the purchase of white cork sun helmets and almost all sample planter's punches at 15 cents the tall glass.

Since Charlotte Amalie is a duty free port, perfumes, whisky, cigarets, fine Danish pottery, and silverware can be had at extremely low prices. Native rum is manufactured by the government, as it is on almost every island the cruise visits. It is cheap and pungent.

After six hours ashore—the average stay in most ports—the ship steams for four hours to St. Croix, or Santa Cruz, as some call it, and anchors off Frederiksted. Passengers are taken off in small boats. This is another of the Virgin Islands, as Danish in its buildings as St. Thomas, but the American tourist is brought back to the present by occasional signs denoting WPA projects. From the edge of the village may be seen the sugar plantations' ungainly windmills, powered by slowly turning sails.

Another old red fort, containing the administrative offices and a self-help store, where native products may be had, is within walking distance of the landing stage. As in St. Thomas, there are basketware, embroidered linen, guava jelly, and pottery. Of more questionable value are the huge "pearls" the native fishermen peddle in the waterfront saloons.

In the middle of the evening, as a round silver moon paints the tips of every ripple in the bay, the ship weighs anchor for St. Christopher, British West Indies, which Columbus named for himself but which has been shortened to St. Kitts.

Beyond the coastline of St. Kitts the following morning, if the air is clear, will loom the volcanic peak of Mount Misery. Many years ago, during one of its periodic eruptions, it spewed forth a tremendous mass of black rock, which soared over the native villages at its base and fell, hissing, just beyond, at the shoreline. But this was more than luck, the Negroes decided, and to this day they will tell you that the mountain is their guardian. They point, as they talk, to the black and twisted lava against which the blue surf thunders constantly.

Well worth the three hours it takes is a motor trip around the island from Basse Terre, the port. Brimstone hill, an imposing fortress which seems impregnable, requires a climb, but from its battlements the view is rewarding. The "Mother colony" of the British group, as St. Kitts is called because it is the seat of government of the Leeward Islands, stretches to either hand. Beyond, a few miles off shore, are the Dutch islands of Saba and St. Eustatius.

Almost at the foot of Brimstone, walled on three sides and with the sea as a fourth barrier, lies a group of white buildings with red roofs between the palm trees. This appears to be an enchanting community—until the guide explains that it is a leper colony, the only one in the Lesser Antilles.

Along about dusk on the same afternoon the ship anchors off Antigua for a few hours and there is time enough for a swim or a walk about the very British town of St. John, concluding with a rum punch on the veranda of the Globe hotel. Perhaps on the return voyage there will be an opportunity to drive across the island to Lord Nelson's dockyard, where, from 1784 to 1787, the famed English admiral careened and repaired his ships.

At midnight the steamer calls briefly at Montserrat to unload cargo. Passengers may go ashore on the back trip and on that excursion are promised the opportunity to climb to the crater of an active volcano, already making its presence known with a stench of sulphur fumes.

Guadeloupe, one of the largest of the Lesser Antilles, is really two islands—Grand Terre and Basse Terre—which are separated by a narrow strait. Anchoring off the town of Basse Terre early the next day, cruise passengers may, if they choose, take a bus across to Pointe-a-Pitre, to which the ship will sail late in the afternoon, and rejoin it there. The bus trip is harrowing, for the half-caste chauffeurs think it imperative to drive with the accelerator pedal crushed to the floor boards, but it is through incomparably beautiful jungles and cane fields, and a stop is made for bathing in the hot mineral springs at Doles les Bains.

These natural baths are delightful, the water is constantly at 90 degrees, and the pool is almost as large as that of a country club. Huge, creeper-laced trees skirt its edge. Through their boughs beat the sudden tropic showers, giving the bather an added fillip.

Pointe-a-Pitre, one of the substantial cities of the Lesser Antilles, is as colorful as any. Modern, brightly decorated buildings dot it here and there; sidewalk cafés serve champagne for a fraction of its cost in America, and generally there are cock fights under exact rules. Those with uneasy stomachs do not relish these contests, but they are absorbing to others. Near the dock is the French government perfume store, with prices comparable to or lower than those prevailing in St. Thomas. And there is another incentive to buy, for with each $10 purchase the clerks throw in a quart of champagne.

Sailing from Guadeloupe late in the afternoon, the cruise ship reaches, shortly after dinner, the harbor front of Roseau, Dominica, one of the loveliest islands of the Caribbean. Here is practiced obeah—a counterpart of the primitive religion known as voodoo in Haiti—which the British ban with stern penalties but cannot stamp out. Drums may be beating in the hills this night, but the chances are slim that whites could get close to them. It would be a hazardous venture.

More certain entertainment is the dance at Coronation hall, a native club which features a quaint floor show and musicians possessed of perhaps the most determined lungs and the finest sense of rhythm in the western world, albeit they lack the power of shading their melodies. Police guards are furnished passengers to and from the jetty. Their presence may be necessary, although the blacks appear to be merely curious, rather than surly.

The visit to Martinique, on the following day, should include a ride from Fort de France, the port of entry, to St. Pierre. Once a city of 30,000, St. Pierre was destroyed by an eruption of Mount Pelee in the spring of 1902. Only one person escaped. Today the ruins are still being excavated and on the lava bed, atop the buried city, stands a small village and a volcanological museum, presided over by a courtly American scientist, Dr. Frank A. Perret, who has watched Pelee for more than 30 years.

Neatly displayed in cases are relics of the disaster—carbonized food and clothing, human bones, and the fancy tricks white hot volcanic rock can perform on bottles of perfume and other glass objects. There is also a piece of the tree under which Lafcadio Hearn wrote his fascinating "Two Years in the French West Indies."

The tourist is shown a small dungeon in which, it is claimed, cowered the only man to escape the eruption. He was a prisoner waiting for his breakfast when the holacaust broke. Three days later he was rescued, only to say, "Where's my breakfast?" Or so, at least, runs the tale.

Back in Fort de France, a bustling city, there will be time to admire the statue of Josephine, Napoleon's empress, who was born here, and to drink some rum punches at the sidewalk cafés before the sailing hour.

The steamer docks at Castries, St. Lucia, the adjoining island, late in the day. Before the days of Diesel engines this was the principal coaling port in the West Indies. It has a fine harbor and a splendid hotel and country club. This is the place to buy wicker hampers, necklaces of shark's vertebræ, and nutmeg and spices in aromatic little baskets.

St. Lucia has a unique guide class of small, ebony hued boys who go under the names of "Clark Gable," "Robert Taylor," and other American movie heroes and maintain the fiction in the face of the severest cross-examination. They are amusing gamins and, although they may miscall some of the gorgeous shrubs and trees in the botanical gardens and dispense other misinformation, they are worth the shilling they ask.

Barbados is the little England of the Antilles. It has been under British rule since 1605, is on the itinerary of many cruise ships, and is noted for its hotels and beaches and its excellent food. Lucky is the tourist invited to a Barbadian home for a breakfast of flying fish, plantains, sausage cakes, and West Indian rice—preceded by a few rum cocktails, which should be tossed off at a gulp if one wishes to be fashionable.

The island is comparatively flat and studded with picturesque windmills which grind the sugar cane. The plantation homes are low, cool structures and the hospitality of the planters could hardly be matched.

Trinidad, the terminus of the southbound cruise, is reached the following morning through two straits—the Dragon's Mouth and the Serpent's Mouth—which enclose of Gulf of Paria. They make an imposing entrance, with the Venezuelan coastline forming the background. The large harbor of Port-of-Spain is jammed with steamers and a few sailing ships. To watch one of the latter moving out majestically under full sail is an experience.

Port-of-Spain is a city of 70,000. The island of Trinidad contains about 400,000, one-third of whom are Mohammedans and Brahmans from the East Indies. They preserve their racial identity and colorful costumes and are adept at fashioning heavy silver jewelry, samples of which are one of the stock purchases of the women tourists.

The brand of hospitality toward the tourist in Barbados is carried on in Trinidad. The homes are large and airy and the big yards contain lime and avocado pear trees, orchids, and perhaps a large cage of varicolored parrots and South American macaws.

On the return voyage there are brief calls at Grenada and St. Vincent, in the Windward Islands, the former splendid and hilly. St. Vincent, which generally is reached at dusk, has night blooming tropical flowers, providing an aromatic accompaniment to a short ride into the interior. At the Aquatic club breakers roll in on a black sand beach and leave it gleaming ebony.

Return calls are also made at all islands, save Guadeloupe, touched on the down trip. The stops, at different hours from the first arrivals, permit daytime drives into the interiors of places previously visited at night. In Dominica a trip to the orange groves high in the hills will be rewarding; hardy tourists will want to climb to the crater of Mount Soufriere, the active volcano in Montserrat.

This rather awesome experience will require about three hours and stout legs, for cars can come no closer than a mile from the crater. The walk through the jungle is along a sort of path. The climb is sharp and treacherous, but eventually the persevering ones may stand in a hot pit of yellowish-green rock and watch nauseating sulphur vapor boil from crevices in the rough floor. There is no sound except a slight hiss from the subterranean caldron and the cry of the birds in the surrounding jungles. Generally it is a better story when told at home.

Nuptials Open Pasadena Fall Social Season

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL.

Inaugurating the fall social season was the big church wedding last Saturday evening in All Saints' church which united Miss Elizabeth Leigh Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Walter Wright of San Marino, to N. Brownell Merrell of Syracuse, N. Y., son of O. Edward Merrell of that city. He is a brother of Mrs. Merrill Gesner of Syracuse and St. Paul, who is to make her home in Chicago this winter. Here for the wedding, she will leave this week-end for Illinois.

The former Miss Wright is a graduate of Leland Stanford last June, a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and the Junior league, and a member of an old Pasadena family. Her mother, who was Ruth Shelton, is a sister of Mrs. William Parmer Fuller Jr. of Palo Alto.

Mr. Merrell is an alumnus of Wesleyan university and of Stanford and is a member of Alpha Delta Phi. He and his bride will live in Pasadena after their motor trip through the north.

Several Chicagoans had a part in the pre-nuptial festivities which honored Miss Jane Lines, who became the bride last evening of Howard Good, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wells Good of Honolulu. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Lines. Their wedding, too, was solemnized in All Saints', and the bridal party included Mrs. Allen Chase [Lucile Thorsen] and Mrs. Albert Buckingham Sturges, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Leila P. Sturges.

In compliment to the bride was the bridge luncheon and shower Mrs. Arthur C. Thorsen gave at the Annandale Country club last week for twenty guests. Among the guests were Mrs. Chase, Mrs. Stanley Rouse of Chicago, who is to locate here; Mrs. Eugene Rouse, Mrs. Thomas Sullivan, and Miss Georgia Clifford, daughter of the Herbert G. Cliffords [Virginia Montgomery of Evanston].

Another important bride of the early fall was Miss Helena Childs Vosburg, daughter of the Royden Vosburgs, who was married yesterday afternoon to John L. Lamb of San Diego and Palm Springs.

From Harbor Point, Mich., comes word from Mrs. J. Findlay Torrence of Pasadena that she will accompany Dr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis Pierce of Chicago, with whom she is sojourning in Michigan, back to their home and will remain there for a time before returning west. They expect to head for Chicago today. The two women are sisters.

Miss Helen Hunter, daughter of the Robert Hunters [Gwendolyn Mitchell, of Chicago], has been summering in Montecito with her parents and went on to San Francisco recently, where she was entertained informally by Mr. and Mrs. John Bradley [Gay Wright].

Southern California waved farewell recently to a favorite Chicagoan, Mrs. Charles Kerwin of Lake Forest, after she had completed her visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Gray of Berkeley square, Los Angeles. Many persons entertained for Mrs. Kerwin, including Miss Marguerite Winston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bandini Winston, who gave a tea at the home of her parents on South Lucerne boulevard. Her mother assisted her, as did Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Francis Brown, and Mrs. Sven Lokrantz. Mrs. Gray gave a luncheon recently at the Bel-Air Bay club for her daughter and Mrs. George Martin gave a tea at her home on South Irving boulevard.

Off for Honolulu on the Lurline last Friday were Dr. and Mrs. Frank N. Freeman [Flora M. Dunn] of Chicago. The two were married here last Christmas eve. They were guests here of Mrs. Freeman's daughter, Miss Barbara Dunn, in Westwood Hills.

Mrs. Fred Keene of Chicago was among the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Armstrong of Los Angeles when they complimented Mrs. Andrew Life, just back from summer travels.

The Voice of the Traveler

AS CHEAP AS LIVING AT HOME.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 20.—To the Travel Editor: On July 10 you published a letter of mine on Japan. I received more than 150 replies. I was quite surprised at the number of persons who wish to travel to foreign countries, but hesitate to do so because they feel they cannot afford it. That is why I believe your readers would be interested in the following:

Why not travel, when you can do it as cheaply as living at home? A trip to other lands is not expensive if you know the secrets. In this letter I propose to pass on to others what has taken me fifteen years and more than 150,000 miles of traveling to learn.

I took a nine months' trip around the world, and spent only $100 a month. This included all expenses—steamship tickets, hotels, meals, trains, taxi fares, sending a few presents home, keeping up my wardrobe, cigarets, cabarets, night clubs, and seeing all the points of interest along the way.

There are four ways of traveling at sea: First, second, and third class on a passenger ship, and one class on a cargo ship or freighter. Go third class, and do not be afraid, as you will find many writers, artists, globe trotters, students, and professors traveling third. The staterooms are comfortable and the meals excellent. You have swimming pool privileges, a lounge, a writing and card room, a bar, deck games, movies twice a week, and dancing. It is far better to travel that way and spend at your destination the money you save than to spend all your money on first or second class. Cargo ships are also nice, but on them you must provide your own amusement, and there is no doctor aboard. Some freight lines do not carry women unless accompanied by their husbands.

Do not travel like a tourist. A tourist is a person with a camera that he buys at a curio store. He rides first class on the trains [because he doesn't know any better], spends a great deal of time visiting museums and churches, and never remains long enough to learn the language or make friends. Be a globe trotter instead. Go third class on the trains and second class on the buses and subways [because that is the way 95 per cent of the people travel]. Be sure to visit the markets [where you see present day life] and never hire a guide, for that takes away the thrill of finding your way around by yourself. Travel slowly, stay at least a month, and you will be rewarded by the friendships you have established.

Don't be afraid to take a trip without a companion, for the minute you go aboard ship you find others going to the same city or country.

In a foreign city it is not necessary to hire an automobile to see the sights. Two 5 cent coins are all you need. Just hop aboard any street car or bus and ride to the end of the line and back. You will find this much better, as you can observe the natives more closely, and you'll have an opportunity to learn a few words of the language.

Many persons prefer to travel on a conducted tour, but I always travel alone. On a tour everything is arranged. You know in advance the cost of the trip and you have the same companions throughout, but all the thrill of adventure in getting lost and making yourself understood is taken away. And if you like a certain place and want to remain longer you can't do it if you're a member of an organized group.

Carry your money in travelers' checks. The cost is 75c for a hundred dollars. Checks of $10 or $20 are the best. This relieves you of all financial worry. If you have as much as $500, a letter of credit can be obtained at any bank without charge. Before entering a country get $5 changed into that country's currency. This can be obtained from the ship's purser. It will enable you to tip the baggage porters and pay the taxi to the hotel or pension.

Under no circumstances take a trunk—not even a steamer trunk. It is only a worry and expense. And the fewer clothes you take the better. A hundred personal calling cards will come in handy.

If you care to take your camera your films can be developed anywhere. But if you are going to the tropics, have the films sealed in airtight tins.

In going indefinitly on an income of $100 a month you cannot travel fast, as you use up too much money in transportation. Stay away from countries where you do not benefit by the money exchange. All over the world there are pensions that are not only cheaper than hotels, but there you meet the other guests and learn something about their countries. Pension rates run from $6 to $9 a week, including meals.

If there is any other information your readers would like to have, they can address me at 2320 Carlton terrace, Louisville. Please ask them to enclose stamped envelope for reply. BRENT ALFORD.

PACIFIC PARADISE.

Streator, Ill., Sept. 18.—To the Travel Editor: Can any one tell me which island or country is known as "the Paradise of the Pacific?"

I have often heard Hawaii referred to as such, but the other day I received a letter on which the postmark was completely unreadable, but which bore the words across two New Zealand stamps: "Paradise of the Pacific."

I shall be grateful for an answer via your readers. ADRIENNE MACKENZIE.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA.

LONDON, England, Sept. 11.—Sir: Having received a copy of your paper, I find it highly interesting. I wish, if possible, to have my name placed on the list for mail from your travelers and other readers. I am very interested in foreign travel, not having the chance to travel myself. I will welcome any letter or card and would reply if needed. I hope to visit your country some day and would like to know something of it. My address is 23 Lawn Gardens, Hanwell W. 7, London. Trusting that I am not too far away for mailing purposes, I am,

Yours respectfully,
EDMUND PATRICK O'HIGGINS.

She she been bedfast with rheumatism for the last two years and I am sure she would be pleased to hear from any one who would care to send her a card. Her birthday is Oct. 21.

SHIRLEY MCGLAUGHLIN.

Greenleaf, Wis., Sept. 19.—To the Travel Editor: After admiring your column for some time, I've decided to ask you to enter the name of my brother, Urban Zimmer, Statesan, Wis., on your list. He has been a patient there for four years. He would deeply enjoy hearing from your readers.

DORIS ZIMMER.

Downers Grove, Ill., Sept. 18.—To the Travel Editor: My sister-in-law is a shut-in, due to arthritis. She cannot even feed herself, but has a faithful 18 year old daughter who takes care of her. Will you please place her on your list? Address: Mrs. J. L. Eickhorst, Box 11, Route 1, Lemont, Ill.

MRS. R. C. EICKHORST.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—To the Travel Editor: Kindly add the name of Clarence Johnson, 5601 North Pulaski road, Chicago, to your shut-in list. He is ill with tuberculosis, and must remain in the sanitarium for several more months. He would appreciate any mail your readers might send. A FRIEND.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—To the Travel Editor: I wish to thank the many persons who have sent me such lovely letters and cards since my name appeared in your column. [MRS.] BARBARA KLENCK.

Air Lines Mark Ten Years of Flying Growth

Marking a decade of successful passenger flying in this country, the eight air lines operating in Chicago will observe National Air Travel week, starting next Saturday.

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, pointed out yesterday that Chicago has 100 incoming and outgoing flights a day and has more air transport companies than any other city in the United States. As a consequence, he said, this city will play a leading rôle in the celebration.

Among the features of the observance here will be a massed flight of ten or more big ships. They will take off from the Municipal airport about noon Monday, Oct. 3, for a tour over Chicagoland. There will be numerous talks before clubs and over the radio. It is anticipated that in the course of the nation-wide celebration at least 50,000 persons will take their first ride in a modern airliner.

It was only ten years ago, Col. Gorrell relates, that the air lines were flying single engine planes at a speed of 90 miles an hour. In 1928 they carried a grand total of 47,000 passengers. Last year they carried 1,267,000 passengers and millions of pounds of mail and express at an average speed of close to 200 miles an hour.

A table of the industry, issued in 1929, would cover less than five pages of today's Aviation Guide, which in its last issue had 132 pages. Fares ten years ago averaged 12 cents a mile—more than double that of today—and coast to coast time was 33 hours, as against 15¼ hours now. There were no sleepers, no meals to speak of, no stewardesses, and little night flying.

Harold Crary, vice president of United Air Lines, is chairman of the national committee in charge of the observance. Other members are Paul H. Brattain, vice president of Eastern Air Lines; Charles A. Rheinstrom, vice president of American Airlines; J. B. Walker, vice president of Transcontinental and Western Air; D. D. Walker, general trafic manager of Chicago and Southern Airlines; Charles E. Beard, vice president of Braniff Airways, and Victor Chenea, general trafic manager of Pan American Airways.

Please tell me something about the great floral clock in Westmount, Que.

The face of the clock is 18 feet in diameter. Electrically driven, its minute hand is 8 feet 8 inches long, its hour hand 6 feet 6 inches. From June until early fall it is a center of interest for tourists. More than 5,100 plants decorate its Roman numerals, its hands, its subtle reminder, "Tempus Fugit," the pattern on its face, and the hutched brown beaver silhouetted at its foot. Santolinas form the numerals, red and yellow achyranthus the Latin legend, sedum the face, and echeverias, green alternanthera, and mesembryanthemum the borders. The beaver is a mass of brown achyranthus. The clock is to be seen near Victoria hall in Westmount park.

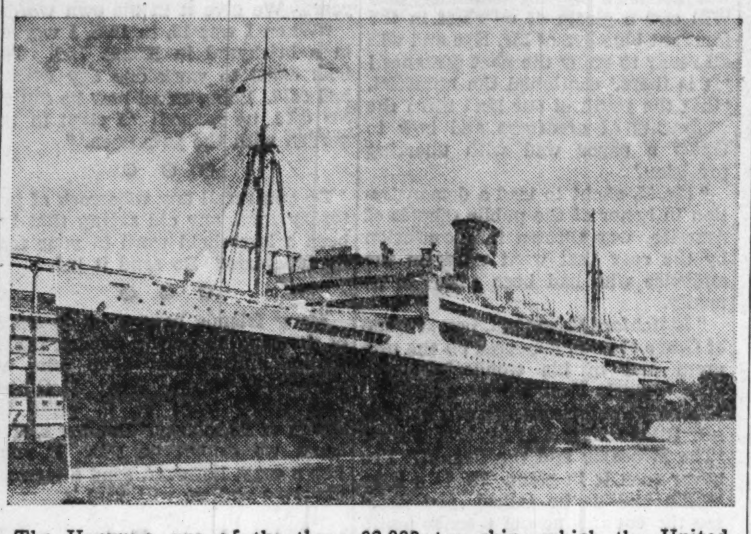
GOING SOMEWHERE?

With the sailing of the S. S. Brazil from New York Oct. 8 the United States will start its luxury steamship service to Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Santos and Buenos Aires in a bid for a major part of the rapidly growing tourist trafic between the Americas. Three modern liners, each more than 600 feet long and each having a displacement of 32,000 tons, are to comprise the new "good neighbor" fleet. They will be operated by the United States maritime commission under the name of the American Republics Line.



The Uruguay, one of the three 32,000 ton ships which the United States Maritime commission is placing in operation between New York and east coast ports in South America.

For years the steamship service between the east coasts of North and South America has been considered inadequate. Because of the development of closer international relations between the United States and its southern neighbors, with a resulting expansion of trade and cultural ties, the commission decided last spring that this service required immediate improvement. So it acquired three liners from the Panama Pacific Line and began the job of reconditioning. The Virginia was renamed the Brazil, the Pennsylvania the Argentina, and the California the Uruguay. About a million dollars was spent in lifting their faces. Each of the three accommodates 400 passengers. They have an average speed of 18 knots, are twin screw, and are the largest turbo-electric liners ever built in this country. The New York shipping firm of Moore & McCormack will act as managing agents.

Meanwhile, the maritime commission has asked for bids for the building of three combination passenger-cargo vessels for the Mississippi Shipping Co., Ltd., of New Orleans. This company, of which W. L. Blackman is the Chicago manager, operates the Delta Line. The new ships will run from New Orleans and other gulf ports to Rio, Santos, Montevideo, and Buenos Aires. It is planned to have them ready early in 1940.

Word received in Chicago says old Fort Laramie, army general headquarters during the Indian wars on the plains and long-time capital of the wilderness west of the Missouri river, has been proclaimed a national monument by President Roosevelt. The score of crumbling buildings that still mark the site at the junction of the Laramie and North Platte rivers, a mile from the Burlington station at Fort Laramie, Wyo., are to be restored and preserved as a memorial to the traders and soldiers of covered wagon days. The site is a landmark on the Oregon trail, the Mormon trail, the Overland trail, and the route of the Pony Express. Donald Ashton of the Burlington headquarters in Chicago visited the place last month and was surprised to find the buildings still standing, even though most of them were badly in need of repairs.

A pilgrimage to Rome for the beatification of Mother Francis Xavier Cabrini was announced last week. E. L. de Rosa, Chicago manager of the C. I. T. travel service, relates that pilgrims will sail from New York on the Rex Oct. 29, visit places of interest throughout Italy, have an audience with the pope, and return on either the Conte di Savoia, arriving Dec. 4, or the Vulcania, due back Nov. 24. The beatification ceremony will take place Nov. 13. Mother Cabrini died in Chicago Dec. 22, 1917. She was foundress of the Institute of Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, and her work among newcomers from Italy gave her the name of "the saint of the immigrants."

Nearly every tourist auto over the Columbia river highway these days is stopping at the Bonneville dam, completed early this year. The huge dam, forty-three miles east of Portland, is designed to produce more than 600,000 horse power of electrical energy and to improve navigation on the upper Columbia. It lies close to the highway.

The Champlain again will be sent on a Christmas and New Year's cruise to the West Indies. James F. Nolan, Chicago agent of the French Line, has been notified that the 28,000 ton liner, sometimes referred to as "a bit of France afloat," will leave New York Thursday, Dec. 22, visit Nassau, Kingston, and Havana, and return Tuesday, Jan. 3. Christmas day is to be spent in Nassau.

Both the New York Central's Twentieth Century Limited and the Pennsylvania's Broadway Limited will readjust their schedules today with the end of daylight saving time. The Century is to leave for New York daily at 4 p. m. central standard time, the Broadway at 4:30 p. m.

A new Chicago organization called the History Tracers and composed of camera, nature, and railway fans and amateur geologists and palentologists will make an Indian summer excursion next Sunday to the Mississippi palisades at Prairie du Chien, Wis. The group will leave over the Burlington Zephyr from the Union station at 8 a. m. and return at 11 p. m.

A bicycle tour through the Rock river valley is set for the same day. Traveling from Chicago to Rockford over the Illinois Central, the sightseers will leave from Central station at 9:05 a. m. They will visit Kilbuck park, Camp Grant, and Rockford college, pedal their way along the river, and return that evening.

Because of last week's storms in the east, the New York Central has temporarily suspended through service from Chicago to Boston. This was announced Friday by F. H. Baird, passenger trafic manager. Service to New York and Albany is being maintained, Mr. Baird said, and the Boston service will be resumed as soon as conditions permit.

Tourist interest in Mexico this year has caused the American Express travel service to continue its two weeks' escorted tours until Dec. 11. Each Sunday a party will leave from Chicago for Mexico City, Toluca, Puebla, Cholula, Guadalupe, the Pyramids of the Sun and the Moon, the Floating gardens at Xochimilco, and Cuernavaca.

Color tours through the heart of Michigan's forests will be held throughout October. Many of the routes will be marked out for the benefit of visitors wishing to take the Indian summer pilgrimages. Traverse City, Manistee, Cadillac, and Newaygo are among the communities backing the project.

Anticipating a heavy travel movement to Cuba this winter, the Peninsular and Occidental Steamship company will increase its service between Florida and Havana to eight sailings weekly. There will be six sailings from Miami and one each from Tampa and Key West. The new schedule is to take effect Dec. 15.

Leaving New York Christmas eve for a nine day cruise to South America, Trinidad, Martinique, and the Virgin Islands, the Aquitania will start this winter's Cunard-White Star program. On Jan. 5 the Franconia is to begin her annual journey around the world under joint Cunard and Thomas Cook & Son auspices, and on Feb. 11 the Carinthia is to leave for South America, South Africa, and ports on the Red and Mediterranean seas, with the American Express company handling the shore excursions. The Britannic will go on nine trips to the West Indies and the Georgic on two, making a total of fourteen cruises on the company's schedule.

Miami Spends 14 Millions on New Buildings

Miami, Fla., Sept. 24.—With arrival of the fall season, metropolitan Miami is pushing to completion a $14,000,000 construction program providing increased hotel, apartment, and recreational facilities for its winter visitor population.

Erection of eleven hotels, 46 apartment houses and scores of tourist camp cottages will provide 2,453 additional rooms for use of visitors, thus making it possible to accommodate more than 100,000 persons a day. Homes have sprung up at the rate of 40 a week in the last few months, helping to reflect an $8,000,000 increase in real estate valuation.

A dozen new theaters are being built under a program calling for an expenditure of $1,250,000. A new golf course and country club have been added to the recreational facilities at a cost of $250,000.

Rentals and hotel rates will be as low as, if not lower than, they were last season, with efficiency apartments available at $50 a month and rooms in the big bayfront hotels averaging $6 and $7 a day.

That Pillar of Wrought Iron

In the "Tips to Tourists" in last Sunday's TRIBUNE this query and answer appeared: "Q.—I have been told that somewhere in India there is a pillar of wrought iron that has weathered fifteen centuries without rusting. Can you tell me where it is? A.—In the courtyard surrounding the Kutub Minar, near Delhi." The item brought back memories to Kenneth A. Cook, general agent in Chicago for Canadian Pacific steamships. Mr. Cook saw the pillar in the course of his round the world cruise on the Empress of Britain several years ago. He dug into his files and the accompanying picture is the result.

The pillar of wrought iron at the Kutub Minar, near Delhi, India.

DETOUR

By FREDERIC BABCOCK

Did you ever see the shoreless Sargasso sea? . . . You probably will this winter if you take any one of the many cruises from the United States to the West Indies, South America, and around the world. . . . But this once mysterious body of water, lying to the east of the Greater Antilles, has lost much of its mystery. . . . The belief through the ages that it was "the graveyard of the Atlantic" is now known to be both false and ridiculous. . . . Few ships have been either wrecked or stranded in its quiet waters. . . . It is one of the safest regions in the entire Atlantic.

● Up to a quarter of a century ago the Sargasso sea was a source of great worry to navigators. . . . Then the Norwegian government sent Sir John Murray to explore it, and what he found was enough to explode its grim reputation.

Sir John reported that Sargasso—rather thin in seaweed nowadays—stretches from the east bank of the Gulf stream, off the coast of Florida, to a point halfway to Africa. . . . It is situated in the North Atlantic "whirl," which is caused by the movement of the Gulf stream, the West Wind drift, the Canaries current, and the North Equatorial current. . . . Thus it is a victim of environment; it can't do else than stay where it is and function as it does.

And just what is it? . . . To the passengers on the cruises it is nothing but a vast mass of greenish-brown seaweed. . . . The weed lies on the water in a single layer. . . . It has no organs of attachment; it simply floats around aimlessly. . . . And its present day thinness has robbed it of its sinister meaning.

● Fear of the Sargasso sea and similar phenomena dates back more than 2,000 years. . . . Aristotle wrote of their perils. . . . Before his time Phœnician mariners carried home with them stories of how immense fields of sea plants had endangered their ships. . . . In the fifteenth century a merchant of Cadiz sent a galley a hundred leagues westward, east winds swept the galley into the area of weeds and calms, and freedom was gained only after many difficulties.

Christopher Columbus had heard of the sea before he set out from Palos. . . . He plunged into it on his way to San Salvador in September, 1492. . . . He named it "The Sea Weed Meadows." . . . As he sailed slowly on the weeds grew thicker and thicker, until they spread out on all sides like a great flooded plain. . . . He took soundings, but could not find bottom. . . . His compass needle went wrong, pointing to the northwest instead of to the Pole star. . . . After days of drifting his ships emerged into a clear space, where the water was like a mirror. . . . It was so still, in fact, that it was stagnant. . . . So the becalmed Columbus was as badly off as when he had been in the weeds.

● Mutiny grew among the crews. . . . It might have prevented the discovery of America had not a breeze come out of the southwest. . . . The explorers escaped after having had their plans—and ships—tangled up for nearly two weeks.

Where did the sea get its name? . . . The Portuguese with Columbus saw in the weed a resemblance to the herb sargasso, which grew in the wells in their homeland. . . . It must have been quite a menace in those days, but today it's only a scenic curiosity.

Woman's City Club Outlines Civic Activity

With a notable program of civic activity outlined for the season, the Woman's City club will turn with a clear conscience to less serious matters at its opening program tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. E. V. L. Brown.

The era of Godey's Lady's book will be recalled in a lecture, "Pincushion Morality," by Beth Goode Heide. Ballads of the period will be sung by Thelma Jensen, soprano, with Adrienne Cooper at the piano. Afterward tea will be served in the charming lounge, overlooking the Buckingham fountain, at 410 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. E. V. L. Brown, recently elected third vice president and program chairman, will be in charge.

At a board meeting earlier this month the club adopted a civic platform. Included among its planks are a new state constitution, an equitable system of taxation, enforcement and extension of the merit system in civil service, an improved non-political system of paroles, protection of women and children in industry, women on juries, and the city management form of government for Chicago.

Nonpolitical administration of the public schools, safer certification and tenure provisions, extension of educational facilities, a simplified budget system with a proper balance between administrative and education costs were embodied in another plank.

Adequate housing, efficient public health administration, and increased age of criminal responsibility with exclusive jurisdiction of children of Juvenile court age in the Juvenile court are other planks. A maternal and child health program with provision for recreational and protective services are to be included in the improved public health administration.

Reorganization of the city, county, and state welfare structure to permit Illinois to qualify for federal aid to dependent children and the blind, to provide a comprehensive child welfare program, and to promote a high level of efficiency in county institutions also will be sought. Equal opportunity cultural, economic, and political, and equal protection for individuals and minority groups also will be stressed in the platform.

The Business and Professional Woman's Club of Chicago will resume activities with a dinner tomorrow evening at the Chicago Woman's club. Dr. Margaret Kunde will present J. D. Laux, assistant director of the bureau of economics of the American Medical association, who will discuss "The National Health Program."

A luncheon will open the season for the Campion Mothers' club at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow at Marshall Field's Wedgwood room. Members of the Campion faculty will speak. Mrs. John P. Goggin has been elected president for the year. Mrs. John E. Bourke, Mrs. E. F. Clarke, and Mrs. James M. Gleason are vice presidents; Mrs. T. P. Riordan, recording secretary; Mrs. J. Frank Kelly, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Alex Birren, treasurer.

The creative artists — dramatists, poets, sculptors, composers, painters —who form the Northern Illinois branch of the National League of American Pen Women will meet for the first time this season this afternoon at 410 South Michigan avenue. Leonard Balsamo, tenor, will sing, accompanied by Nina Knapp. Frances Donovan will give a sketch of her new book, "The Schoolma'am," and Edith Watts will read two of her prize poems.

Mrs. Ralph Merriam has been elected president for the ensuing two years. Others serving are Mme. Clara Edmunds-Hemingway, first vice president; Mrs. Tom C. When Chicago Was Young:

Ashland Block Was Sold for a Half Million

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, February 2, 1890.

"Dear Julia: While I write in the library, Will is having an interview in the parlor with a client who has come to him for advice about a real estate matter. They have finished their business and now are discussing a 'big deal' in the real estate world, just made known today . . . the sale of the Ashland block, at the northeast corner of Clark and Randolph streets. The late owner, Gov. S. B. Buckner of Kentucky, has just sold it to Mr. Alexander J. Alexander of Lexington, Ky., for $500,000. It is called one of the most important transactions of the year.

"The Ashland block, a six story stone and brick structure, was built shortly after the fire and cost $177,000. In the sale announced today, the building is appraised at $100,000, so that the land evidently is valued at $400,000, or $5,000 a front foot. The lot has a frontage of 80 feet on Randolph street and 140 on Clark street.

"The land on which the building stands has had an interesting history. First owned by Robert A. Kinzie, of our famous pioneer family, it was sold by him to Julius B. Kingsbury in 1833 for $60. Gov. Buckner, who married a Miss Kingsbury, inherited the property at her death. It has not changed hands for fifty years.

"Mr. Alexander, the buyer, is a well known Kentuckian, a brother of dear Mme. Waller [Mrs. James B. Waller], and his wife is a sister of my beloved friend, Mrs. John Stillwell, so I often meet them when they are visiting Chicago. It is because we know the families so well that we are especially interested in this real estate transaction.

"Julia, have you ever heard Bill Nye and James Whitcomb Riley [the Hoosier poet] in an entertainment? Do hear them, if you have a chance. Both are full of humor and, though a dozen years ago Riley was considered not to rank as a real poet, since he wrote of homely subjects, the literary world is at last recognizing him. He is very popular and Central Music hall was filled to the topmost seat last night.

"Will enjoys Riley, but Bill Nye is his special enthusiasm and he almost split his sides, as Nye spoke on the subject, 'School Days.' It was not entirely the humorist who intrigued Will, but rather the discomfiture of a man sitting just in front of us. This member of the audience was of the type who applauds vociferously every reference to our great republic, and he had his hands in position when Bill Nye deceptively started off thus:

"'Our common schools are the foundations of America's free institutions.' [The man, whom I'll call Mr. X, led applause for this lofty sentiment.] 'They are the bulwarks of our liberty and the pride and glory of our great republic.' [Again Mr. X gave resounding claps, in which he was followed by the audience, but Will saw a gleam of mischief in the innocent blue eye of Mr. Nye and was all ready to enjoy the next sentence.] 'It is there,' continued the humorist, 'that the youth of our land learn the rudiments of greatness and how to throw a paper wad with unerring precision.'

"Mr. X, about to lead a demonstration in honor of the public schools of America, was thrown into confusion by the roar that went up from the audience who had been taken in so neatly.

"Blatchford Kavanagh, boy soprano of Grace church, appeared on the program and in his wonderful voice sang 'Angels Ever Bright and Fair.' The whole entertainment was delightful. Riley told one of his best stories, 'The Educator and the Peanut.' I've never seen it in print. He is a born mimic and as he talked, you could see the country school teacher pointing a moral from the humble peanut.

"Will's caller is leaving and I must go and say good-by to him.

"Lovingly yours,

"MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND."

FOOTNOTES.

The Ashland block was rebuilt in 1892 and is now 16 stories high. It is one of the oldest buildings in the loop. The property is no longer held by the Alexander family, having been sold to a syndicate about ten years ago. Land values in the downtown section are now estimated by the square foot and the present land value of the northeast corner of Randolph and Clark streets is approximately $70 a square foot, which figures out at $784,000 for the lot on which the Ashland block stands.

Edward Feis, Chicago, writes us that he had a personal interest in that instalment of Martha's story, in which John D. Rockefeller's letter offering the first gift to the University of Chicago was mentioned. In 1889 Mr. Feis was employed as an apprentice by the Manz Engraving company. Mr. Rockefeller's letter was written in very faint ink and the Manz company could not make an etching of it for printing in the Baptist Standard until the writing had been traced in deep black ink. This task fell to the young apprentice and he recalls it with interest today.

R. B. Rector, Chicago, writes: "We always read your column and on Sunday afternoon drive around looking up the old spots mentioned." Mr. Rector, a Hoosier by birth, sends a wisecrack of yesterday, which he says has stuck in his memory for many years. We give it in his own words:

"When I was 12, in 1885, I worked in a brickyard in Brazil, Ind. The boss came to work one day with a bad cold. Being asked how he caught his cold, he replied: 'I slept in the garden with the gate open.'"

Do you recall any wisecrack of yesterday . . . any old saying that has been a household word in your family for years? Do send it in!

Many friends have sent us words of the song about the wooden legged soldier and several have sent the words of "Down Went McGinty." One reader asks us to print the words of "McGinty," but for lack of space we cannot do this. If you'd like a copy, however, send a stamped envelope and we will send it.

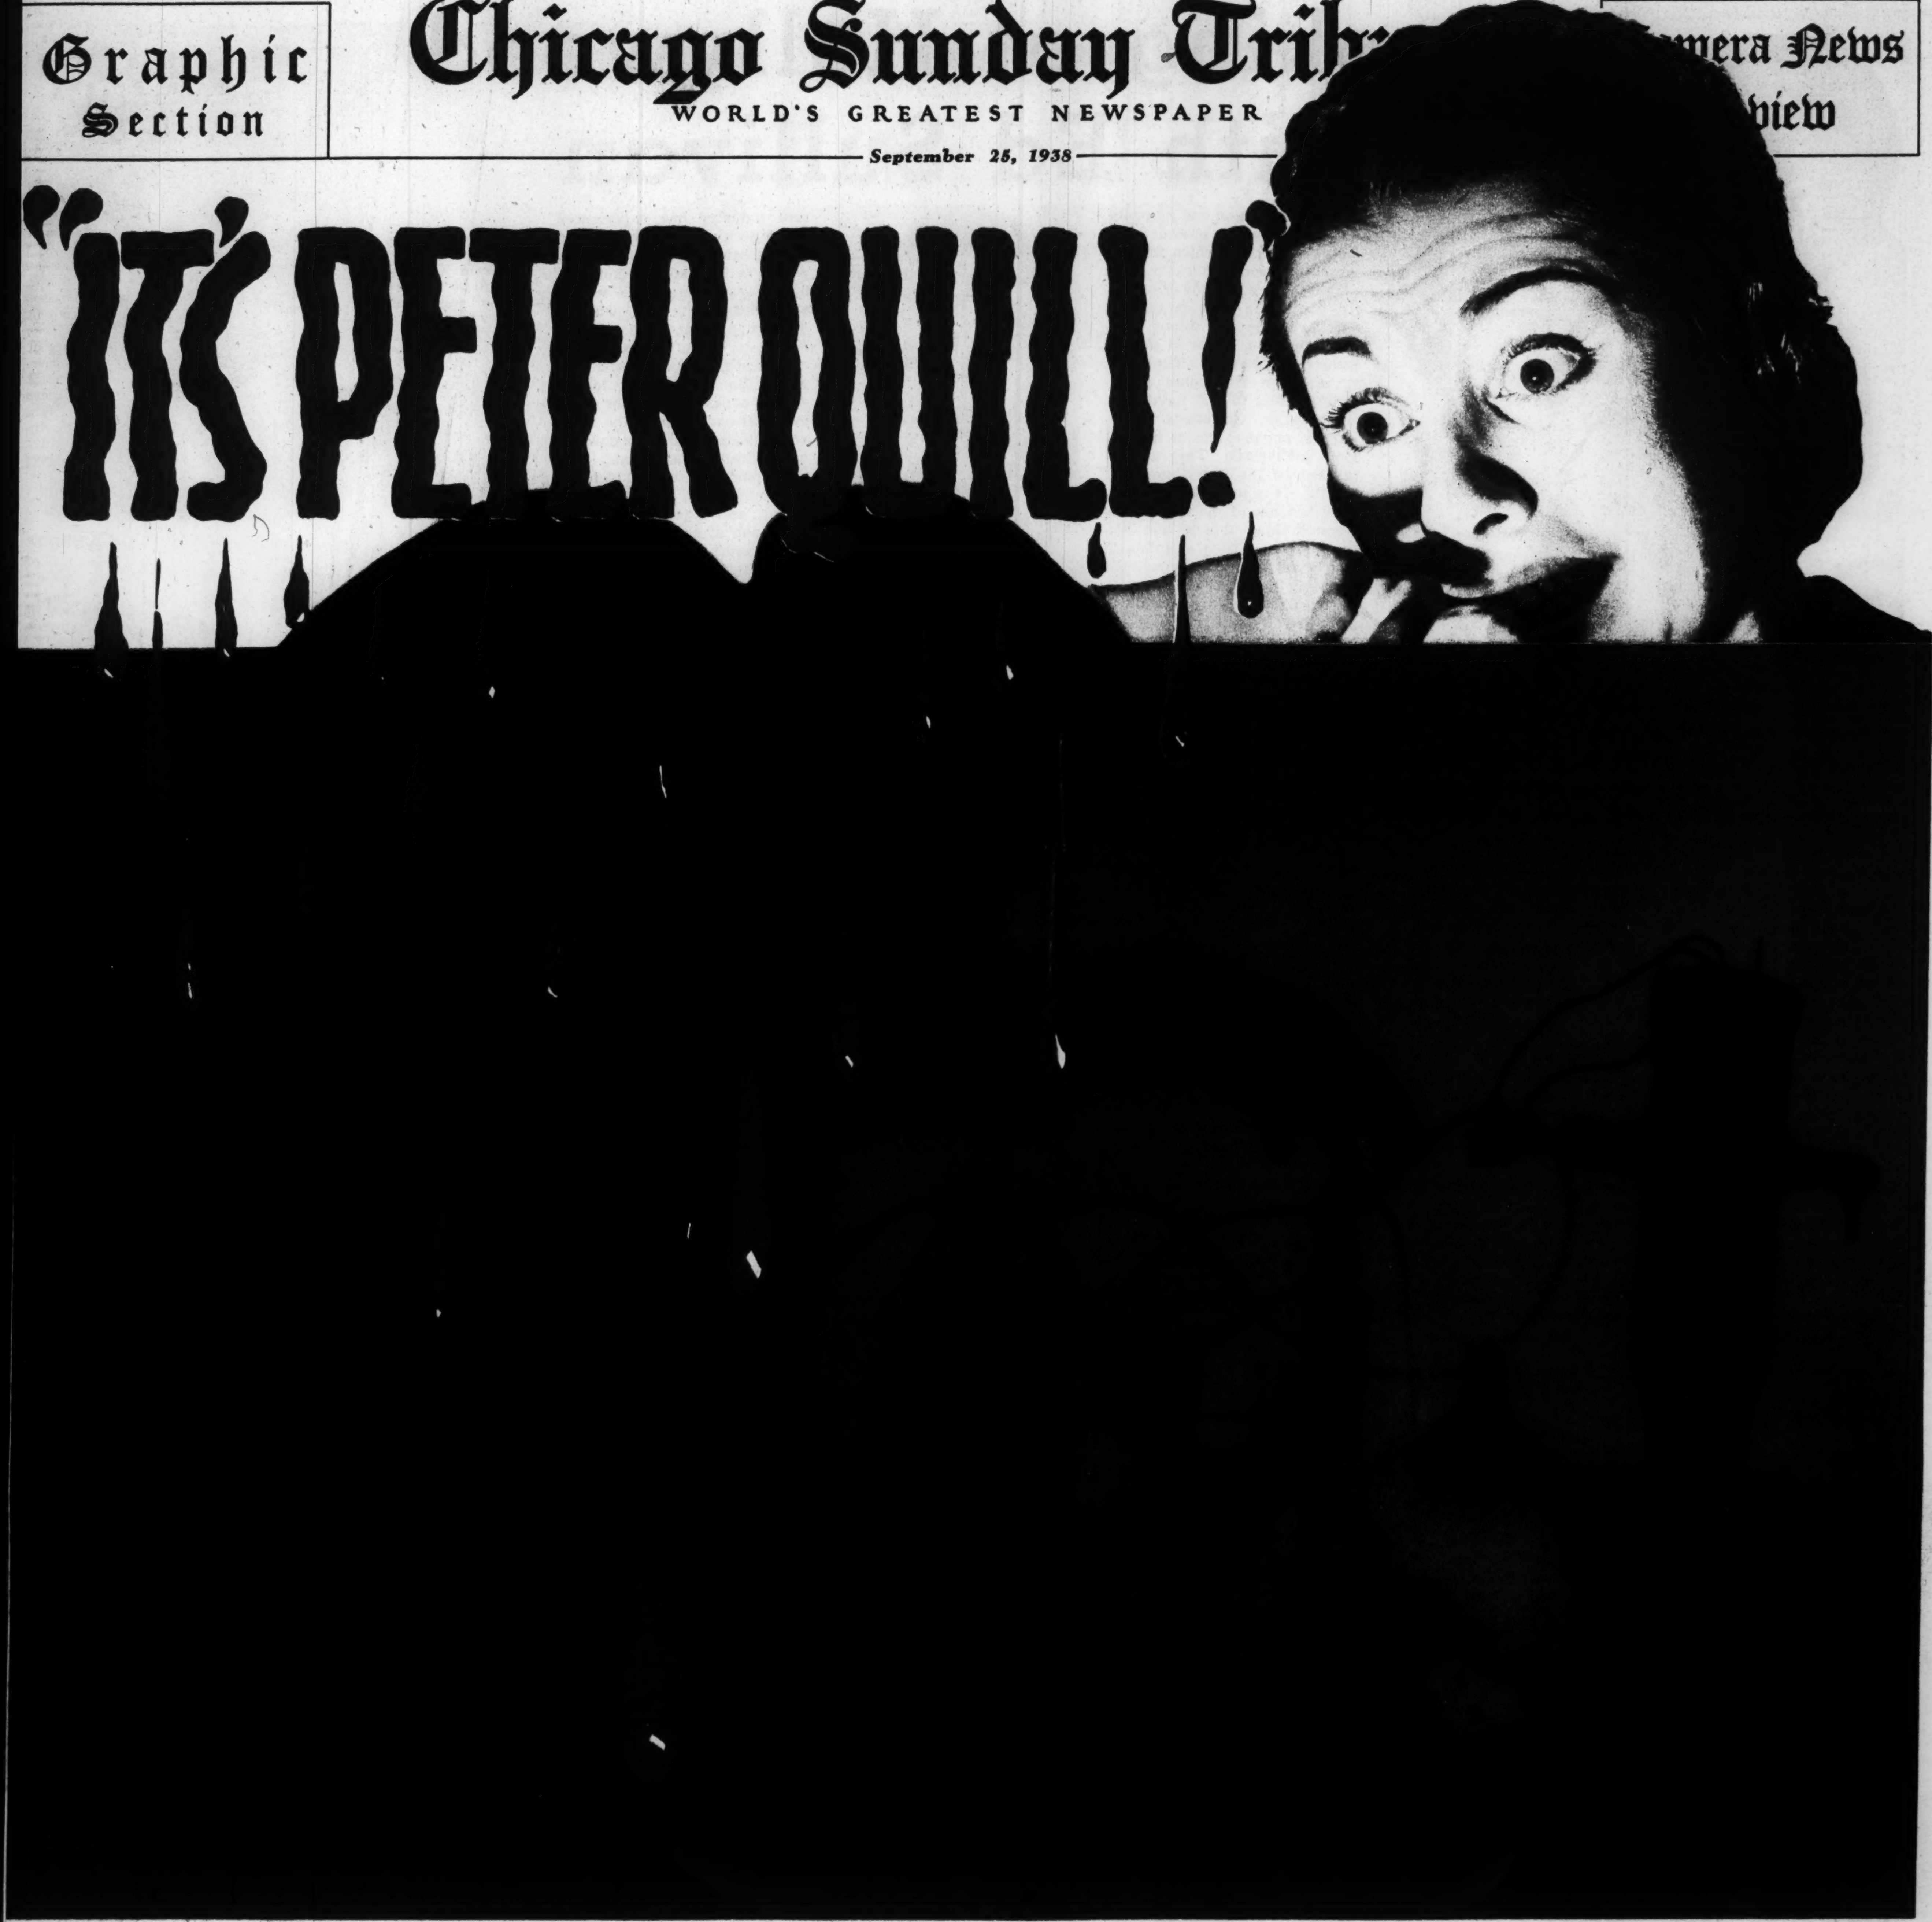
"IT'S PETER QUILL!"



Where Will You Be on Night of Sept. 30?

By THE SUNDAY EDITOR

WHO IS PETER QUILL?

THIS ARTICLE concerns a strange affair. You are not asked to believe it. Indeed, it is so strange that we boldly call it fiction.

● You may believe it if you like. Yet . . . if you [d]o not believe it you can at least believe that home [a]nd loyalty and freedom are always at stake and [t]hat "a nation is only as strong as the willingness [o]f its people to die for it."

● It is a strange thing that the radio is so power[f]ul. You will know this by fixing a date in your [m]ind. Do you remember the Cronin murder case? [T]here was an important date in that freezing horror. [I]t was common for men to ask each other, "Where [w]ere you on the night of May 4?" And although [t]he question was asked lightly, it was always with [t]ense lips, as if some deadly fear lay deep in the [v]ery asking of the question.

● The date is September Thirtieth. That is next [F]riday.

● The time will be 8 in the evening.

● The radio station is W-G-N.

● The radio dial is 720.

● It is strange that the radio is so far-reaching. [Y]ou will know this next Friday evening on W-G-N. [Y]ou will know it because you will hear a strange [u]nity of time and space. Time is limitless. Space [i]s never-ending.

● The radio is time and space. No one knows where its voice goes. This explains why we are alert to danger. We are always alert to strange sounds, hesitant at strange voices, and nervous over strange happenings.

● The radio station W-G-N is attempting a strange thing. It is reporting mystery as it happens—and with the swiftness which mystery always implies.

● Yet we all know that there is such a thing as time limitation. Even time on the radio is limited. It is for this reason that time on the radio must have the help of space in the newspaper. This brings into view another date. Remember, dates are important in mysteries.

● The second date is October Second.

● The strange and almost unaccountable life of Peter Quill comes into high relief. Names are as curious and strange as the persons they describe. Peter Quill. Repeat the name a few times. You find yourself fascinated with the notion of Peter Quill's appearance. There is something grotesque in the name Peter Quill. Grotesque Peter Quill! He is twisted and haunted by fears. He is a hunchback. He walks with shambling difficulty.

● Here is a notation which was written by an attaché of radio station W-G-N. Will you see if it gives you the idea you already have gained from repeating his name?

● "It is at once glorious and pitiful to write of Peter Quill. What he must have been in his childhood I hesitate to conjecture. I shrink from the task of even considering what his poor mother must have endured when she first became conscious of his misshapen form. I suppose her sick mind must have been sustained by that ever-celestial glory of maternity when she beheld his dwarfish proportions, his twisted torso, and all the unmistakable indications of monstrosity. . . . He will live in the caldron of hatred, in stifling winds of suspicion, and I think he may one day come very near to godliness."

● There is your idea of Peter Quill put into words. It is the kind of an idea in words that makes us all want to know more. A hundred years ago it would have been a laborious thing to find the means of knowing more. The radio station W-G-N will supply that need with the strange broadcast of next Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

● And where the broadcast from W-G-N leaves off in the strange inquiry into the acts of Peter Quill the Graphic Section of The Chicago Sunday Tribune will take up.

● These two avenues of news work amazingly together. The radio delivers its news as it happens. The newspaper reports the news after it happens. This will be a surprise to Maida Travers. Miss Travers is a celebrated soloist on the radio. She will be surprised, we say, to know how her life can be sifted into little particles and presented in a newspaper.

Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan

Movies Get Pat on the Back by Legion of Decency

By ED SULLIVAN

New York.

AT 485 MADISON avenue, if you go as high as the sixth floor, you will find the Legion of Decency. Now, I'd never seen the offices of the Legion of Decency, but you assumed from the name of the organization that one might find crabbed old gentlemen tottering about on canes and voicing regret for the "good old days" before the country went to blazes. Instead you find a group of good-looking stenographers banging away at typewriters, and in an inner office you find the youthful Rev. John J. McClafferty, executive secretary, who looks as though he might have played full back for one of Knute Rockne's Notre Dame teams.

You learn from him that the Legion of Decency, which is the articulate expression of Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish clergymen and laymen, believes that the major movie companies are doing an unusually good job of cleaning up the cinema.

For instance, of a total of 1,271 pictures which were reviewed by the Legion of Decency critics between February, 1936, and November, 1937, only thirteen were put into class C, which is the "condemned" class. Of the rest, 780 pictures, or 61 per cent, were given rating in class A, section 1, unobjectionable for general patronage; 380 were rated class A, section 2, unobjectionable for adults, and 98 were rated in class B, which means objectionable in part.

Fully aware of the evils of censorship, the Legion of Decency, operating under the supervision of five Catholic bishops in Fort Wayne, Ind.; Cincinnati, O.; Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, and New York, has fought resolutely against the temptation to become a censor. The principal aim of the Legion is to discourage the production and patronizing of films which present false moral standards, which in turn lower traditional morality. By "traditional standards of morality" is meant that murder is wrong, stealing is wrong, perjury is wrong, honor is due to father and mother. These, together with traditional standards relating to sex, have been accepted by Christians, Jews, pagans, and by men of no religious affiliations. They are expressed in the Ten Commandments. They are traditional.

In evidence of the broad view adopted, Mae West's last picture, "Every Day's a Holiday," which was submitted somewhat fearfully to the Legion of Decency by Paramount, particularly after her ill-fated radio broadcast, was not relegated to class C or even class B. The Legion classified it as class A, section 2, which indicated unobjectionable for adults.

When "Birth of a Baby" was issued the decision of the Legion of Decency was anxiously awaited. "This production," said the spokesman, "has considerable merit from the medical, educational, social and technical points of view; however, the film is not suited to general exhibition in the theater, where audiences are composed of both sexes and various ages, backgrounds, mentalities, and temperaments. . . . The theater at the present time is not popularly accepted as a clinic, consultation office, or classroom. The theater hardly provides the kind of environment necessary for a proper dignified and reverential attitude toward this subject, which is so sacred, private, and personal."

So you can see that the Legion of Decency, temperate in tone, is not an organization of bluenoses, swinging bludgeons at smoke rings. It is a good deal more temperate in its analysis of films than Hollywood.

Of "Blockade" the Legion commented that it did seem to them that propaganda for one side of the unfortunate Spanish tragedy had been disseminated, but didn't go beyond that warning. Privately the Legion reviewers thought the Wanger film to be a trifle stupid, but, of course, that does not appear on the official records.

Darryl Zanuck, who had only three of 113 pictures put in B class.

Greta Garbo's "Anna Karenina" was listed in class B: objectionable in part. Others in this classification were "Libeled Lady," "Mayerling," "Sylvia Scarlett," "Wife, Doctor, and Nurse," "Theodora Goes Wild," "A Star Is Born," "Three Men on a Horse." Bryan Foy's "Elysia" is one of the few American-made pictures ever to reach class C. "Ecstasy," of course, hit class C quickly.

They keep close tab on all the picture companies and have a regular score card. Darryl Zanuck ranks very high in this scoring. Of 113 Zanuck pictures only 3 were put in class B. In contrast, of 110 Paramount pictures 10 were given class B ranking, and of 96 M-G-M flickers 12 were voted objectionable in part. Warners had 78 reviewed, and all but 6 won class A rating. Columbia did even better with 97 reviewed and but 4 dropping to class B.

Surprisingly enough, there are those who attack the Legion of Decency as being too lenient with Hollywood. Mrs. James F. Looram, chairman of the department of motion pictures, thus answered critics recently:

"The number of sex films and other condemnable motion pictures launched throughout the country during the last year has brought a wave of protest from various cities indicating doubt concerning the activities of the Legion of Decency. Without excusing the films in question, we will endeavor to prove that any assertion concerning the lethargy or inertia of the Legion is absolutely and definitly untrue. The prevalence of the aforementioned films has also created the impression that Hollywood has reneged in its agreement for self-regulation by means of the production code.

"Since the advent of the Legion of Decency the motion picture industry has experienced a prosperity comparable to and even greater than any previous period in its history. Not only have outstanding films reaped enormous profits, but, what is more important, they have served to create a new dignity and prestige and aid public good will. We are having, for instance, honest love stories to the eventual exclusion of the ultra-sophisticated features; down-to-earth drama and whimsy comedy; splendid historical pictures; excellent music, including grand opera; and many other wholesome and artistic presentations.

"Of course, Hollywood is not lily-white in respect to the moral consideration of films. We have had a large number of B pictures, the majority of which have either glorified and approved of divorce or treated marriage lightly or solved the main plot by suicide. For example, the following films either presented divorce as glamorous or as the only possible solution to the plot: 'Baroness and the Butler,' 'Between Two Women,' 'Lady, Behave,' 'Love, Honor, and Behave,' 'Second Honeymoon,' and 'Vogues of 1938.' Suicide, presented as plot solution, was found in 'Flight from Glory,' 'It Could Happen to You,' and 'Juggernaut.'

"Of course, in this country, where divorce is legally recognized and is practiced quite generally, even in families of high social and political standing, we may be expecting too much to have divorce in films treated from the Catholic moral standpoint.

"The production code, which is the industry's own standard of self-regulation, is a splendid document. Its aproval has never been given to a film condemned by the Legion with the exception of 'Carnival in Flanders.' This film was made in France by a French company, and though the code authorities [re]quested many deletions befo[re] giving its approval, the Legi[on] condemned the picture becau[se] its theme was mass adulte[ry]. The subtle treatment and art[is]tic excellence of the film in [no] way lessened its pernicious [in]fluence.

"No film made by the ma[jor] production companies in Hol[ly]wood since 1935 has been co[n]demned by the Legion. The co[n]demned films on the Legion's l[ist] fall into two categories — fir[st], those made by independent pr[o]ducers in this country; second[ly], those made in foreign lands [by] foreign producers.

"Independent producers w[ho] cannot compete with Hollywo[od] because they lack the financ[ial] and technical facilities, capit[al]ize on the shock quality of se[x]. The production code and t[he] Legion of Decency are very sp[e]cific in their ideas concerning t[he] treatment of this subject. W[e] have on the condemned list, f[or] instance, films like 'Gambli[ng] with Souls,' a picture treating [of] white slavery; 'Damaged Live[s]' and 'Damaged Goods,' prese[nt]ing the effects, cure, and soc[ial] aspects of syphilis; 'Assassin [of] Youth,' pretending to war[n] against the evil effects of ma[ri]juana, but for the most pa[rt] nullifying the warning by obj[ec]tionable and salacious sequence[s;] 'Slaves in Bondage,' anoth[er] white slave subject."

Greta Garbo's "Anna Karenina" was given B rating.

Stars in Color

ROBERT TAYLOR whose real name is Spangler Arlington Brough, hails from Filley, Neb. He was born there Aug. 5, 1911. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 168 pounds, has brown hair, blue eyes, and a slight scar over his left eye. While appearing in a college play he was chosen by a talent scout to go to Hollywood to appear in films. He got his first chance in some "Crime Doesn't Pay" shorts, but went over big in "The Magnificent Obsession," opposite Irene Dunne.

ERROL FLYNN the young Irishman who made good in Hollywood, was born in the north of Erin on June 20, 1909. He was educated at the Lycée Louis-le-Grand in Paris and at St. Paul's school in London. It was while pearl fishing in Tahiti that he was asked by an English movie company, planning to film "Mutiny on the Bounty," to play the rôle of Fletcher Christian, a part played later by Clark Gable in the American film. This rôle gave him the desire to do some stage work, which he did, until he went to Hollywood. He's 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 180 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes.

JOAN BLONDELL in real life is Mrs. Dick Powell and the mother of two children. She comes from an old vaudeville family. She's a blonde, has grayish blue eyes, is 5 feet 4½ inches tall, and weighs 115 pounds. She appeared opposite James Cagney in two plays on Broadway. "It's Peter Quill . . . . . !"

Three persons of the radio. Three different souls. The radio W-G-N and the newspaper The Tribune will attempt the strange experiment of following their lives in broadcast and in print.

Never before have radio and the newspaper attempted such a unity of action into the lives of any such three persons. And the strange thing of it all is that we cannot know in advance what shiftings of fate, what winds of mystery, and what human treacheries may rise to change their lives.

The inquiry into the life of Peter Quill! This in itself suggests intrigue and cunning. How we all wish we could see what is around the next corner! How we listen with straining ears to the words of a fortune teller! How we wish we could know in advance what Peter Quill may do!

Of course, we cannot know. We can only know this: That on next Friday evening at 8 o'clock radio station W-G-N will begin its curious investigation.

Too, we can only know that following the broadcast of Friday night The Chicago Sunday Tribune in its Graphic Section will pursue the inquiry. We shall be listening to W-G-N on Friday night, since mystery and romance tremble in us all. And more important than to listen is to read the permanent record. The permanent record will follow, as we have said. The permanent record will be found on Sunday in the Graphic Section of The Sunday Tribune.

If we could tell you in advance of doors that creak, of footsteps that fall eerily on sagging floors, of vague mutterings in dusty attics—if we could tell you in advance of these things, of course, we would.

We can tell you only this: We shall all be hearing and reading —hearing on W-G-N and reading in the Graphic — the strange thing we have been trying to form in your mind as the indescribable thing we have been taught to know as MYSTERY!

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Mrs. J. F. K. seconds Mr. Snyder's views, so I'll second Mrs. J. F. K. The picture "Lost Horizon" was truly wonderful. The acting was grand and the scenery superb. I'm sorry to say that I've seen it only once, but if it comes to town again I'll be one of the first to rush to the theater. Don't you suppose that if a theater manager read all these letters in reference to that swell picture he might possibly show it the second or third time? I certainly hope so.

ARLEEN WHELAN
Another fan "discovers" her in "Kidnapped."

Even though I am only 11 years old, I, too, have an opinion, as I see most of the good movies. The other day I saw a picture called "Kidnapped," and the girl in the picture, Arleen Whelan, was simply adorable. Why haven't we seen her in more pictures, or is she new? Here's to success for Arleen Whelan.

And now for our French star. I agree with the person who wrote ages ago praising Simone Simon. She isn't exactly a wonderful actress, but it certainly is a treat to see her pretty face and adorable French ways and to hear her cute French accent. I hear she's gone back to France, but it's not for good, is it? I really read your column every time I can, and orchids to you, Miss Tinée.

Sincerely, MARILYN JOHNSON.

P. S.—If by chance you happen to publish this epistle, could you put in a little picture of Arleen Whelan? Thanks loads.

Editor's note: How lovely to hear from such a young reader! Never lose your enthusiasm, my dear. It's one of the greatest things in life. Of course we'll print a picture of Arleen for you, and you're welcome 'loads."

Dear Mae Tinée: We would like to know the ages of Melvyn Douglas, Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, June Lang, Carole Lombard, Nelson Eddy, and Joan Crawford. Thank you. THE QUESTIONNAIRE.

Editor's note: Melvyn Douglas was born April 5, 1901; Janet Gaynor, Oct. 6, 1906; Loretta Young, Jan. 6, 1913; Carole Lombard, Oct. 6, 1909; Nelson Eddy, June 29, 1901, and Joan Crawford, March 23, 1908. You're welcome!

Dear Mae Tinée: Not long ago my friend and I saw "Cowboy from Brooklyn." Dick Powell and Priscilla Lane were swell, and as for that new star, Ronald Reagan, he topped them all for us. He's a good actor, and so-o-o handsome! Let's have him in lots more pictures to come. Would you please give us a short biography of him? Very truly yours,

MARGARETTA CUNY.

Editor's note: Ronald Reagan was born in Tampico, Ill. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 170 pounds, and has gray eyes and dark brown hair. Educated Eureka college. Before entering motion pictures in 1937 he wrote a weekly sports column for a Des Moines, Ia., newspaper and broadcast sporting events.

Dear Miss Tinée: I read the Voice of the Movie Fan column regularly, and it is very helpful to me.

Recently your article spoke of Griffith Jones, whom I saw in "A Yank at Oxford" and "General Ling's Wife," both of which I enjoyed extremely. I think that he is a good actor and I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me at what studio I could reach him, and also Anton Walbrook.

GRIFFITH JONES
English actor in "Yank at Oxford."

Yours truly, J. A. E.

Editor's note: Thanks for taking the time to tell me that you like the column. Pleasant words DO help, you know. You can write Griffith Jones care of Gaumont-British Picture corporation, 142-150 Wardour street, London, W. 1, England, and Anton Walbrook care of Wilcox Productions, Denham Studios, Denham, Middlesex, England. Here's Mr. Jones' picture. Think it flatters him?

Dear Miss Tinée: May I say a few words in regard to W. B. B.'s letter? I can't see why every one is panning Bob Taylor, can you? I'm sure it isn't because he can't act. If the studio would only give him he-man rôles I'm sure his popularity would increase.

Please, girls, give Bob a chance, will you? If Gable likes him, why can't you?

Sincerely, ANNA GALLAGHER.

P. S.—Isn't Loretta Young an angel? I think so.

Editor's note: How'd you like Robert in "The Crowd Roars"? O, let's not have Loretta be an angel—yet!

Dear Miss Tinée: Not so long ago I read a letter in your column from Helen Drozdik, and I agree with her in saying that Louis Hayward should be cast in more important pictures. He is a grand actor, and I would like to see more of him.

Would you please tell me the names of some of his recent pictures, and who was the girl that played opposite him in "The Saint in New York"?

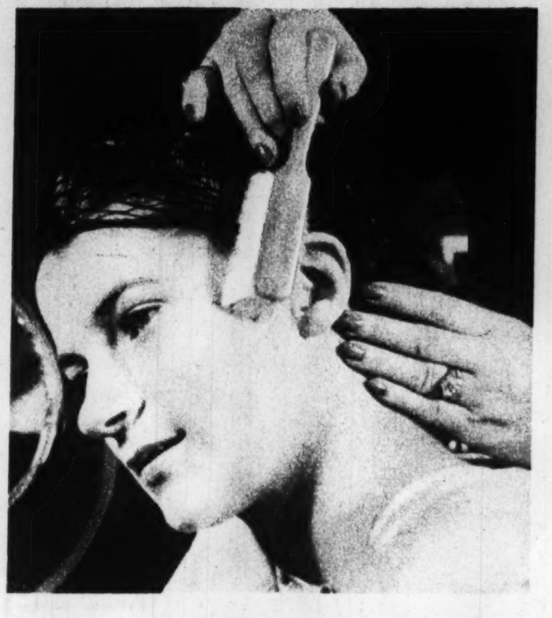
Sincerely, L. B. S.

Editor's note: Mr. Hayward's latest films are "The Luckiest Girl in the World," "The Woman I Love," "Midnight Intruder," and "The Saint in New York." Kay Sutton played the feminine lead in the last-named production.

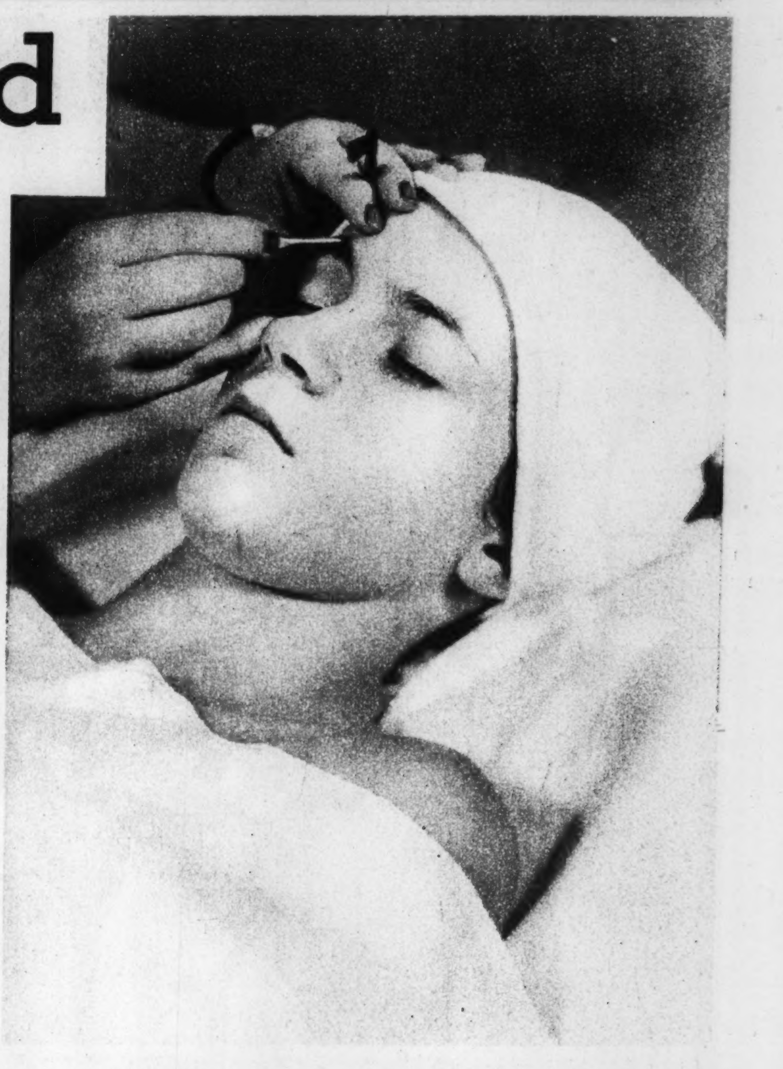
How I Transformed a Plain Jane

"Sis" Hopkins, a typical adolescent schoolgirl whose basic physical beauty has been hidden by the strain of fast growth and a lack of knowledge as to what beauty program to follow.

Proper hair treatments give the hair luster, and an end-curl permanent provides a lovely frame for a strong face.



The powder best suited to Cinderella's complexion is brushed on, and she is taught the secret of artful, natural-looking makeup.



A bit of very judicious eyebrow grooming does wonders in clearing up an almost indefinable air of muddiness about the face. Proper brushing in the future will maintain the appearance.

Beauty Salon Conquers the Awkward Age

By ELEANOR NANGLE

THE psychiatrist knows far better than many parents that the unsettling period of adolescence is made doubly difficult for the teen-ager who feels she is not as pretty as she might be. Many an inferiority complex that lasts into maturity is born of skin blemishes suffered at 15. The teen years are the difficult years when the bones grow long and the flesh is spare, when the skin breaks out in the stress of glandular readjustment, and an undeveloped style sense leaves a youngster in utter confusion about becoming clothes.

Of course, it's a passing phase and life does go on. The common garden variety of the beauty ills of adolescence aren't particularly serious. The only trouble is that every one knows this except the youngster who is tormented by them. She suffers exquisitely because she lacks the adult perspective on these passing ills of the flesh. A single pimple is more distressing to her at 16 than an appendectomy would be at 30.

It's this consciousness of gangling figure, straggly hair, and uncertain complexion that makes so many teen-agers problem children. It may very well be that your child is a brat only because she has the horrible secret fear that in a world of beautiful young girls she alone is ugly—and destined to ugliness forevermore. Like all fears, it's a bit on the foolish side. But the anguish is real, as the psychiatrist could tell you. And it's a brand of anguish that leaves deep scars on the feminine soul.

The good beauty salon — and many of the progressive schools —are now paying particular attention to the beauty needs of the teen-age girl. And salon heads and scholastic experts are accomplishing miracles with the Sis Hopkinses these days—miracles of correction of the ills of the difficult age, that in turn effect miracles in improved morale and poise.

One Chicago salon is now making a specialty of the peculiar beauty problems of the schoolgirl, working out simple, effective, and not too expensive treatments that combat all the beauty ills of the growing-up stage, ranging from corrective manicures for the nervous, unhappy young nail biters to scientific permanent waves for soft, babyish hair. It was with this salon that we recently conducted an experiment in making over an "ugly duckling" that gave us a very real thrill. Gave the ugly duckling—who really turned out not to be ugly at all — an even greater thrill.

Our subject was a 15-year-old girl, lean and lanky and rapidly shooting up to a height she'll some day be proud of. She doesn't care so much for it now, while it is manifesting itself in too-long legs, too-long arms, and a tiny waist that could almost be spanned with a rubber band. Her very soft, indeterminate hair came down to her shoulder blades, where it hung in inexpertly cut wisps. She had accomplished nothing more flattering in the way of face framing than to whisk it back and keep it back with a ribbon.

Her complexion was exactly like the complexion of thousands of teen-age girls—oily in patches, dry in others, with here and there pimples that infuriated and embarrassed her by breaking out at the most inopportune times. Her nails were blunt and strong but without the shapeliness and style expert manicuring achieves.

A corrective manicure does wonders for appearance and provides a thrillingly lovely reason for refraining from finger-nail biting.

She had the leanness that makes for harsh lines, even in her face. At this particular stage, the stage between childhood and young womanhood, she was not beautiful. She never thought she could be, either.

First thing our Sis Hopkins should have had is about fifteen more pounds. But she's the long-boned type and still growing; all she can do for the present is cover up the angles. With proper posture education and the weight that will come as she grows older she will have a slim, straight figure. So we left the weight figure where we found it and, with expert assistance, went on to the correction of other problems.

First, the complexion. For skins of this type, possessed by the teen-agers, it is always wise to supplement intelligent home care with professional treatment. And both at home and in the salon the simple treatment is based on cleanliness. Not just the casual cleanliness of daily use of soap and water, but an exquisite cleanliness that involves not only scrubbing but an education in hygiene.

The professional treatments our interesting and interested model had were not the deep massages and the patting and creaming given to older women. There is some creaming for softening and lubricating, but this is merely the prelude to a stimulating cleansing such as could never be given at home. A very bland soap is used, plus warm water and a little rubber-fingered brush that gives just the right amount of friction to help normalize the uneven flow of oil and to aid in the cleansing process at the same time.

These treatments, which are reasonably priced, work miracles in the teen-age skin. There is an immediate correction. But it is as a preventive of more serious skin troubles that they have their greatest value. With these treatments our teen-ager was taught the fine points of what amounts to an antiseptic cleanliness that guards the complexion. She was urged to be fussy about the cleanliness of everything that touched her face, from hands to handkerchiefs. She emerged from a course of treatments with a prettier complexion and a fund of useful knowledge about the present and future care of that complexion.

Parents have to face the fact that sooner or later their darling daughters will use makeup. And here, in our opinion, is the solution to the adolescent makeup problem: Say, "Go ahead, Toots, but learn how to use it." The thing that makes makeup shocking on the very young is that it is so often inexpertly applied and therefore obvious. Better to teach the youngsters how to make up properly than to have them sneaking lipstick and bungling its application. A little pure face powder to subdue the shine and a touch of lip rouge or pomade in a natural shade can be in perfect taste even for 16-year-olds.

All our 15-year-old subject needed was a bit of powder. What her face needed much more than makeup—and you'll find this true of many youngsters going through the difficult years—was grooming. Her skin was groomed to the point where it had clarity and a fine, unblemished texture. Then we got at those eyebrows. These were brows which had never known the pull of a tweezer, which is probably just as it should be in a 15-year-old. But neither had they known the touch of a small brush to shape and polish them. And that's as it shouldn't be!

The experts at the salon considered long and seriously. It was finally decided that grooming out those brows would do much to dissipate the almost indefinable air of muddiness about the little face. So we had some judicious plucking done. No exaggeration of the natural wide line. And no mascara, of course. But we got rid of the stragglers over the nose and eyelids. And this alone made almost as great a change in the child's face as the complexion treatments had done. The salon experts got in their educational plugs here, too. Our 15-year-old now has the invaluable beauty habit of brushing brows and lashes daily!

There were corrective manicures, too. Every mother whose growing daughter gnaws at her nails should try appealing to the child's vanity as the habit-breaker. If the nails are manicured regularly—and expertly — there will be no rough edges or hangnails to invite the nervous nibble. After a series of weekly manicures, pride in her hands will assert itself. As the nails take on the pretty shape and luster all feminine nails can have, vanity will outweigh the urge to disfigure them. We know the young subject of our experiment will give her nails tender care and consideration from now on. Some day she'll be justifiably proud of her long, thin hands with strong, jewel-like nails!

From the corrective manicures, and after face and brows had been given every attention we thought necessary, the battery of experts in teen-age problems moved on to the matter of our Sis Hopkins' hair. That was fun!

There were reconditioning treatments to restore luster and to give the hair more body—in other words, to take it out of the mousy class. Color of hair doesn't matter. Highlights of natural sheen take care of the color question magnificently. And for hair that lacks luster, reconditioning is the answer! Here again the salon specialists, and we ourselves, seized the opportunity to spread a good gospel. Our young subject, now she knows what luster will do for her hair, and how to achieve luster, is no longer a stranger to the good, stiff hairbrush! And a hundred strokes a day are in her opinion an energy investment that pays true beauty dividends.

Then there was the permanent. No one feels more strongly than we do against stiff, silly, old-looking waves on a young child's head. But an end curl is not a foolish gesture for the child whose hair is straggly. Her too-long neck and her angular face need the benefit of soft framing. So, assured by our experts that this permanent would be the kind we approve for the very young, we saw our young hopeful sit under curlers. We needn't have had a fear. The permanent, a machineless one, was practically invented for kids like her, with baby-soft hair. What curl she has—and this only in the ends — is wide and soft and lends itself beautifully to the schoolgirlish coiffure that was our final triumph of transformation!

You might notice the difference in clothes, too. The angles are still in that girlish frame. But they're artfully concealed by a boxy jacket and long sleeves. And the neck hollows are smartly hidden by a scarf knotted high!

We have never conducted a beauty experiment so satisfying as this. It was impressive to witness the transformation from "all-wrongness" in a 15-year-old to a natural, well groomed "all-rightness." But it was even more impressive to see a moody, uncertain youngster undergo what we can only describe as a spiritual rebirth. By a few simple, well directed beauty suggestions an unattractive child had appropriated beauty to herself. But, much more important than that, she had found the secret of poise and of self-assurance and self-help—three invaluable attributes to the youngster on the brink of womanhood.

If there's a difficult teen-ager in your home, take our advice and tote her to the beauty salon!

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

The Deb Season Is With Us

1 Miss Helen Gambrill, one of the season's first debutantes. The Exmoor Country club was the scene of her coming-out party, at which, tradition has it, she officially met her parents' friends and entered adult society.

2 Miss Alice Graff, a Winnetka deb.

(Tribune photos.)

3 Another Winnetkan . . . Miriam Bartlett.

What Is a Deb?

● Today's debutante is between 18 and 19 years old, probably is absorbed in the fun of entering or returning to college, and is still a bit breathless from the excitement of her coming-out party. That party, if it was a tea, cost her family anywhere from a very quiet minimum of $500 to a lavish $5,000. If it was a ball it might have involved even $15,000. (The $30,000 ones get national publicity.) A debut may occur any time between Labor day and New Year's. For the deb it is the highlight of a long succession of parties, formal and highly informal.

5 Elizabeth Knowlson, another bud o[f] the early season.

8 Georgette Hill and Harris Barber dance at the Exmoor club party. One of the major items in a debut budget is the orchestra—or orchestras. Another is the social secretary, who arranges a well populated stag line so that all who come may dance.

Plain Jane No Longer

● Meet Sis Hopkins, the 1938 miracle girl. This poised, pretty, and well groomed young lady is the gangling and self-conscious Plain Jane you saw go through a series of beauty treatments on page three of this section.

● Before The Tribune handed Sis over to a beauty salon for a complete and well planned refurbishing she was afflicted with all the distressing ailments peculiar to the growing-up stage. But now! Simple but scientific face treatments have cleared the adolescent skin. A careful permanent has given body and curl to the straggly hair. A new hairdress frames the angular face with flattering softness. Artful eyebrow grooming and an appropriate minimum of makeup complete the transformation.

● Sis Hopkins, with her latent charm revealed by correct treatment, has acquired a new sense of fitness about clothes — discarding the shapeless little-girl dresses for long-sleeved, high-necked frocks that conceal her spindliness.

● She's better-looking, and her disposition follows suit. But it's not just her private miracle. Proper beauty treatment can take most of the teen-age woes out of any girl's life.

How Does That Broadcast Actually Reach You?

By DR. MICHAEL FERENCE

AS LONG as the baseball game and symphony concert continue to be faithfully reproduced in radio receivers the average layman is wont to view this miracle of the twentieth century as he does the furniture in his home. But, given a peek backstage of modern broadcasting and receiving equipment, he cannot but be absorbingly interested and duly awed.

Broadcasting is essentially a process of converting speech and music via the microphone into electrical impulses (1 on the drawing); building up these weak electrical voice equivalents to an almost unbelievable intensity (3); superimposing them on a radio conveyor or wave (5), and finally allowing them to be radiated into space.

A minute bit of these radio or electromagnetic waves reaches every receiving set. By "tuning in" a listener selects one air courier of the many hundreds available. The receiver then accomplishes a procedure practically the inverse of broadcasting before the voice or music may be heard. This whole complicated series of events takes place almost instantaneously, for radio waves travel at the speed of light, more than 186,000 miles a second. For this reason listeners close to the receiver actually hear the violins of a symphony orchestra, for example, before many in the audience do!

On this page is shown the series of events that occurs from the time a note is sung into the microphone to the time we hear it in our loud-speakers many hundreds of miles away. Sound waves set up by the voice surge against the diaphragm of the microphone and cause it to vibrate, the variation in air pressure against the diaphragm actuating a corresponding increase or decrease in the flow of electricity. These feeble electrical equivalents of sound pass to an amplifier, where they are magnified (1).

Next the impulses pass through the control panel, where, through loud-speakers or ear phones, engineers hear the program as broadcast. They vary the gain in amplification, thereby assuring a proper level for broadcasting. Background noises are eliminated, and sounds which may be coming from various microphones, possibly widely separated, are suitably "mixed." The control room operator usually views the performers through soundproof glass windows and may signal them to get closer or otherwise alter their position in regard to the microphone to get the most satisfactory pickup.

The electrical impulses next travel by telephone wires to the transmitter, located far from steel structures of the cities, since these sap radio waves of their energy. Here the signals from the studio are again amplified (3) and then encounter the modulator, which superimposes the voice equivalents upon the radio waves, created by the crystal oscillator (4 a, b). Without this coupling of the electrical copies of sound waves and the carrier wave no signal would ever reach our sets.

This modulated radio wave is then passed on to the power amplifier, where this complicated high-frequency wave receives a final tremendous build-up (5). Finally the impulses are fed to the vertical antenna, which dissipates the electrical energy throughout all space.

Now, when a radio wave reaches a receiving set attuned to its wave length, a current similar to that of the transmitter, but greatly reduced in intensity, is set up or induced in the receiving antenna (6). If the receiver is of the modern superheterodyne design the following chain of events occurs: The incoming signal of, say, 720 kilocycles is mixed in the first detector tube with a radio signal of frequency of 670 or 770 kilocycles generated by an oscillator within the set. Coming out of this tube is a signal whose frequency is just the difference between 770 and 720, or 50 kilocycles (7). This intermediate frequency is twice amplified (8, 9) and sent to the second detector (10), which converts these still high frequencies to oscillations low enough to actuate a loud-speaker and create music (11). Before entering the loud-speaker, however, the signals are given a final amplification in the power tube.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

Breeding in America Gains

WHEN the American Kennel club made the announcement a short time ago that pure-bred dogs produced in the United States were now dominating American ring shows it was another reminder to the dog world of how (in former years) dog fanciers on this side of the Atlantic relied more on imported canines to win shows. The announcement also may have developed a few headaches in the British Isles, whose kennels ought to be prosperous, judging by the way American dog fanciers have been spending their money over there.

With American laws on importing pure-breds placing so few difficulties in the way of importers, and with English laws so strict, the way has been open for English and other continental kennels to reap a harvest of American dollars. If you want to sell a dog in England or take one over to compete in British shows you have to leave the dog in quarantine for six months. England has stamped out rabies, and English authorities take this long quarantine system as a means to prevent any infected dogs from entering the country.

American dog fanciers had a reminder of this strict quarantine regulation this summer when the troubles of a blind girl and her guide dog trying to enter England were reported by the newspapers. Authorities refused to waive the regulation that the dog would have to stay in quarantine six months.

Contrast this strict supervision of imported dogs with the laws in this country. You can bring a registered dog from England on a fast boat, have it cleared through the customs in the morning, and get it on a fast train that same afternoon. We recall this troubleproof, speedy procedure when we brought over a Clumber spaniel, a rather uncommon breed of spaniel in America, but one that has been bred in England since about 1750 and is used in that country for hunting. (There is no duty on a registered dog, either.)

England has had such demands on its show and hunting stock that this summer it was almost impossible to buy the top-notch specimens of certain breeds. With India and America taking so many dogs, the breeders complained that they didn't have much left for good breeding stock. But there are indications now that the imported versus American-bred dog situation may be changing.

During the first half of the year 146 dogs of 41 breeds took best in 270 variety group classes at 56 all-breed shows held by member clubs of the A. K. C. The individual leader was the white standard poodle Champion Blakeen Jung Frau, owned by Mrs. Sherman Hoyt of Katonah, N. Y. This dog had fifteen nonsporting group victories to her credit. When all the figures were in they showed that the hound and nonsporting groups were the most strongly American bred, each being won 56 times by dogs whelped in this country.

The American Kennel club figures that during the current year approximately 1,200 dogs will win their championships in American dog shows. (Last year slightly more than 1,100 championships were won by competing dogs.) Of the 1,200 champions that the A. K. C. expects to win certificates this year it estimates that at least 800 will be American bred.

What is it? It's a Chinese crested dog, a very rare breed in America. The owner is James Griffin of El Segundo, Cal.

The Plane That Doesn't Stall or Spin

By WAYNE THOMIS

FOR YEARS airplane designers have known of devices that can be used to make airplanes safe. Such devices—slots, flaps, etc.—enable airplanes to be flown slowly in the air and landed at low forward speeds in small areas. And most of all these devices prevent spins—the root of most airplane accidents even today.

However, the engineers have been more concerned with developing high speed. Now at last, from Germany, comes an airplane that is a perfect example of what can be done if all the aeronautical knowledge available today is used to create a really safe, slow-flying craft.

This plane is the Fieseler Storch—or Stork. It was designed in 1937 by the great German war ace and acrobatic flyer, Herr Gerhard Fieseler. Its first public demonstration was at the 1937 international flying meeting at Zurich, Switzerland. Fieseler has now sent one of these machines to the United States for an exhibition tour.

The ship is a three-seater high-wing cabin monoplane with a 240-horsepower Argus inverted V-8 engine. Superficially it resembles the old Curtiss Robin type "crate" that Corrigan flew across the Atlantic.

Resemblance ends with the outline of the ship. Along the entire span of the Storch automatic slots are fitted. These are false leading edges that snap outward about three inches ahead of the wing and create a passageway through which flows air that must pass over the wing. The slots cause the flow to remain smooth even when the machine has its nose pulled up steeply as it sinks toward the ground.

An airplane not fitted with slots and put into this position would stall; then it would begin a twisting spin toward the earth. This doesn't happen with the Storch.

The entire trailing edge of the Storch wing is hinged. The outer portions of this hinged area are the ailerons, or control surfaces used to keep the wings level and to aid the machine in turning. The inner portions are flaps that change the camber of the wing, add to its lift, and increase by a large percentage the total drag.

The flaps have the effect of increasing the angle of glide—making it steep, so that the plane can land short over trees or other obstructions—without increasing the forward speed of the descent. Most modern airplanes are fitted now with flaps, but virtually none of them have slots.

To descend the pilot closes the throttle of his engine, pulls up his nose until the slots open. Then he lowers his flaps and descends like a balloon or autogiro in what seems to be a stalled and dangerous nose-high position. The plane is traveling at 23 miles an hour forward and descending at about 500 feet a minute.

It can be squashed all the way into the ground in this position, or it can be straightened out to make a thoroughly normal landing.

The airplane's takeoff is equally remarkable. With the slots open and the flaps partially dropped the plane rolls 25 yards and then is hauled up on its tail. The engine labors, but the airplane hangs in the air, clawing its way up in a near-vertical climb of better than 1,000 feet a minute.

The machine has a wing span of 46 feet 9 inches, a fuselage length of 31 feet 11 inches, and stands 12 feet 4 inches high. It weighs 1,870 pounds empty and carries a total load of 770 pounds.

Its official performance follows: Top speed with slots closed, 130.4 miles an hour; cruises at 114.8 miles an hour; lands at 23.6 miles an hour in no wind; rate of climb, 1,141 feet the first minute, from sea level. It climbs into the air after a run of 23 yards. It rolls to a stop after a landing run of 49 yards.

Steps to Beauty

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1938: By the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.)

WHETHER we are becoming a world of jitterbugs or not, what with the recent years' epidemics of "shagging," "big appling," "Lambeth walkin'," etc., something's gotten into the younger toes of the nation at least. They're rarin' to dance, swing or otherwise.

But we really want to talk charm and health and grace as it is noted on the dance floor, that stage upon which all women may star effectively if they take the pains to learn their steps well, dress and conduct themselves after the manner that distinguishes women in any competitive field.

As the well known dancing instructor, Arthur Murray, says: "Dancing is the key to correct standing and walking for one very simple reason, namely, you can't dance well unless you first learn how to stand and walk well. Dancing actually helps build the new posture, and correct one, that you find so hard to cultivate as you walk along the street telling yourself you must stand erect."

Mr. Murray strongly urges dancing alone for practice, a recommendation bearing our hearty indorsement as a means to grace and poise and charms that will serve girls and women in any walk of life.

"Don't worry for a minute about the mistaken idea that it is impossible to learn to dance without a partner. In fact, by practicing alone at first you will develop a surer sense of poise and balance than you would ever acquire by being draped on a partner. And until you learn to dance properly alone it is not only unwise but an imposition to ask or expect any one to dance with you."

Mr. Murray suggests some exercises that will improve your dancing. These exercises serve to develop an ideal figure as well, and they contribute to a more graceful carriage and therefore better health. Rising up and down on your toes as you take long, slow walking steps around the room supplies dance-step lightness. It is an exercise that will lift the heavy-footed walkers out of their dragging floor or pavement hugging doldrums.

Tall girls whose escorts are shorter are told not to lean forward in an attempt to minimize their height, but to achieve the same effect much more gracefully by bending the knees instead.

Short girls are told to dance on the tips of their toes, stretching the entire body upward with head held high for height.

There's one step the girl invariably takes off with, whose grace is dominated by the manner in which she can step backward. Murray urges you to practice the long back step alone, letting the toe go back as far as possible. This step appreciably affects one's picture on the dance floor. We add that practicing the backward step is just as grace-promoting for nondancers.

"Don't dance with your hips 'way back," you're warned. It's an outmoded fashion. For good dancing the position that is considered perfect today is to be erect and tipped forward a trifle.

Don't wave your arms about in the airy manner.

Dancing is "conversation" to music, in our instructor's opinion. The more skill you acquire the more "words" you will have with which to converse. When you dance you express yourself. You hold your partner's interest through the correct use of musical rhythm, just as in good conversation you hold another's interest through the use of the spoken word.

Lightness, lightness, Murray emphasizes, is the secret of good dancing. It is the secret of the graceful woman anywhere, we add. Unquestionably there is no quicker route to this charming gift in women than through mastery of the dance. The walking step alone, or one-step, easiest of all steps, if practiced to your radio music would contribute much in the way of grace and lightness. You simply walk as softly and smoothly as possible, taking a step to every beat of the music, just as if you were marching along in a parade.

The parade, incidentally, leads to a reputation as a graceful woman.

6 Hardly recommended as authentic 1904 technique. It's a comedy interlude in the film.

7 The courtly finale. The role Bette Davis plays here is a romantic one for a change.

A Veal Chop and Prune Bread Menu

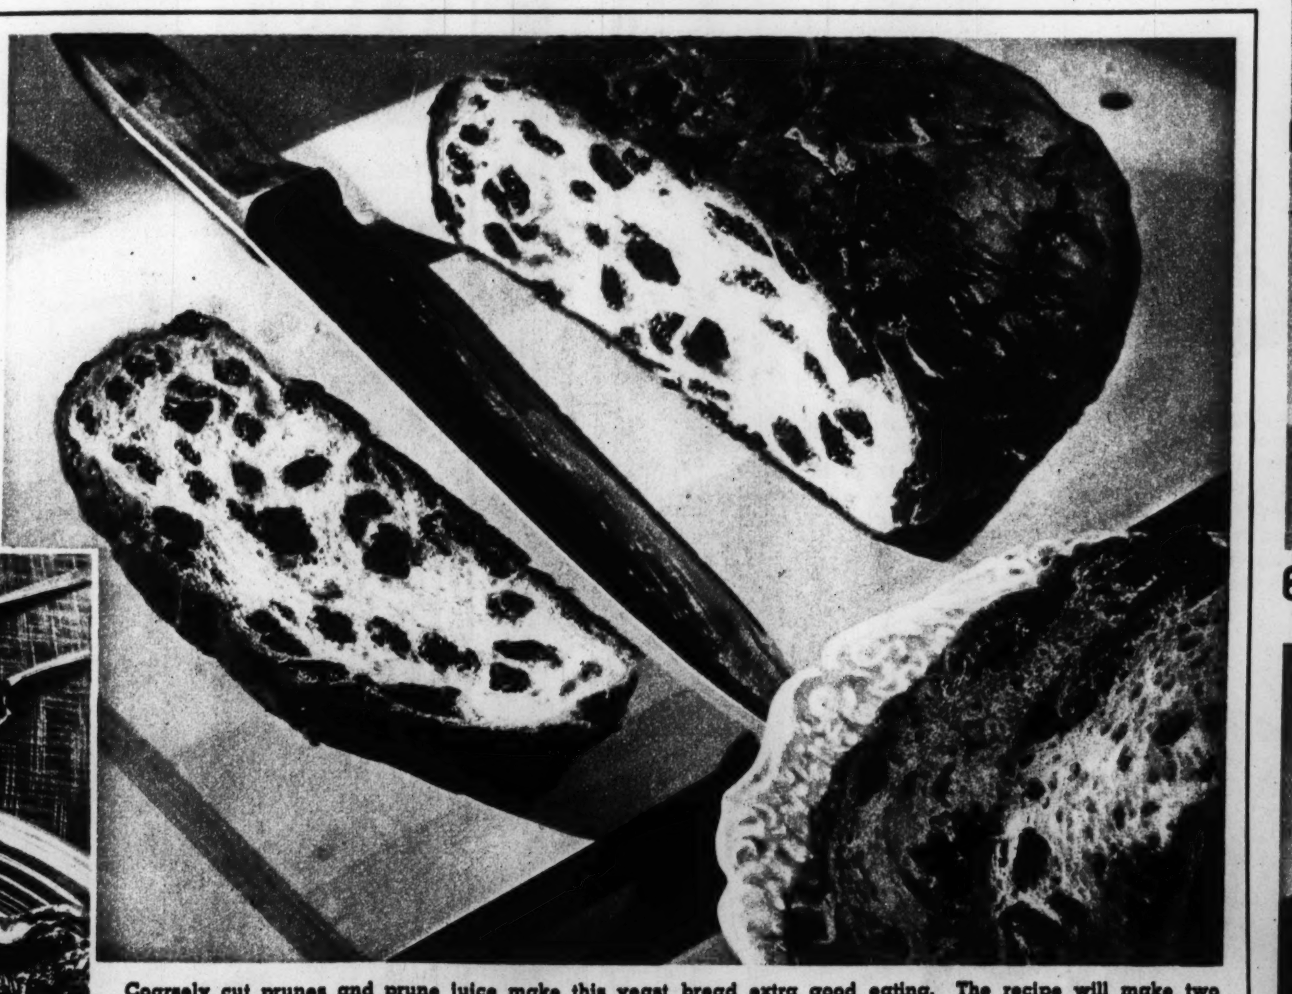
By MARY MEADE

NO MEAT is better than tender brown veal chops cooked in sour cream and served with a gravy made from the meat juices and cream left in the cooking pan.

Chops cut to include a piece of the kidney are best of all. The kidney contributes not only to flavor but to nutritional properties as well. Long, slow cooking required for veal gives such tenderness that these chops may be cut with a fork.

To prepare veal kidney chops in sour cream, begin by dredging the chops in flour. Brown them on both sides in hot fat, then season with salt and pepper, add ¼ cup sour cream and cover closely. Turn down the heat and let the chops cook gently for 45 minutes or so, until they become very tender. Add a little more sour cream from time to time during the cooking as the moisture evaporates from the meat. Make gravy from liquid left in the pan after the chops have finished cooking.

Prune bread is delicious with a dinner built around veal chops. The bread illustrated is a product of the following recipe, which makes a large round loaf or two ordinary loaves:



Coarsely cut prunes and prune juice make this yeast bread extra good eating. The recipe will make two average size loaves or one fat round one.

These veal kidney chops, cooked in sour cream, are brown and delicious, and tender enough to be cut with a fork. Cauliflower and string beans in a scalloped squash bowl are their good vegetable accompaniment.

PRUNE BREAD

2 cups prunes
1 cup prune juice
1 cup milk
3 cakes compressed yeast
4 tablespoons shortening
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
About 7 cups flour

Cover prunes with boiling water and let stand for ten minutes. Drain and cut in small pieces. Combine prune juice and milk and heat to lukewarm. Add yeast, stir until dissolved. Cream shortening, sugar, salt, and cinnamon. Add dissolved yeast and a part of the flour and beat until smooth. Add prunes and remaining flour. Mix well. Lift to a well floured board and knead the dough until smooth and satiny. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1¼ hours. Form into two loaves and let rise another hour, or until double. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for forty-five minutes.

the Carpeting that has set The Style of Today

People's ideas of floor-coverings have been definitely changing during recent years. The new America is demanding a new kind of beauty on its floors. That is why Gulistan Carpeting has made such a success: nothing before has so perfectly expressed the taste of today. This achievement has been recognized in the world's greatest exhibitions: at the American Institute of Architects . . . at the Paris Exposition . . . at the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art, and now, this year, the New York World's Fair has selected it for its luxurious Terrace Club!

What is it about Gulistan Carpeting that people everywhere like so much?

The combination of richness with simplicity! A fabric in one color woven with differently spun yarns, and patterned . . . but patterned so softly and exquisitely that the design hardly intrudes upon the expanse of color! The eye delights in the subtle contrast of textures . . . the sense of a deep pile . . . in the sparkle of tone upon tone! Many people are buying Gulistan because it is more practical than Plain Shade carpeting—foot-marks don't show so much. Equally beautiful as rug or as wall-to-wall carpeting, the new style provides the perfect quiet base for all types of furniture—period or modern.

BEFORE GREASE STOPS UP YOUR SINK USE Drāno

Drāno keeps drains free of grease and garbage—keeps them from slowing or stopping up

Grease from dishwashing is bound to get into your kitchen sink drain. There it may harden and cling to the inside of the pipe. Soon the pipe fills with coffee grounds, hair, lint and soapy scum. The drain runs slow—eventually gets stopped up. Regular use of Drāno prevents this nuisance. It melts and stirs up the greasy refuse so that water easily flushes it away. Use Drāno once a week, costs only 2c a drain. At neighborhood stores wherever you live. U.S. price never more than 25¢

A SOUNDER FOUNDATION FOR INTESTINAL

HEALTH

IT'S human nature to keep on hoping. No matter how constipated and sluggish you may feel today, you tell yourself that tomorrow will be another day—a healthier day. "Some lucky day," you say to yourself, "I'll find a way to solve my constipation problem. I'll find a way to win back youthful regularity."

Perhaps Saráka* is the way you have been looking for. Saráka is the laxative with "exercising action"—the laxative that helps turn lazy intestinal muscles into energetic workers for your better health.

The package of Saráka illustrated below is filled with tiny brown granules. Drink a glass of water—and swallow down a spoonful of them without chewing. Inside the intestines, these granules absorb the water and turn into soft, smooth BULK. This extra bulk is the secret of Saráka's famous exercising action. It gives the intestinal muscles something to exercise on.

Results are thorough but not violent. Many users are reminded of their healthy childhood days when constipation was unknown.

In addition to supplying needed bulk, Saráka also contains a specially treated cortex frangula which mildly stimulates the intestinal muscles. So you have *Bulk Plus Motility. Ask your doctor about this double action. We are confident he will tell you it is safe and non-habit forming. Then try Saráka. See for yourself how pleasant it is to take—and how pleasant after taking. Ask your druggist for the new Handi-size. Or mail the coupon for the free trial-size tin.

NEW HANDI-SIZE

If you only need a laxative occasionally, ask your druggist for the new "Handi-size" of Saráka. This new 49-cent size is more than twice as large as the can illustrated above.

He's Seen Luckies Buy THE "Cream" of 19 Crops

So CHARLES BELVIN Smokes Luckies, the 2 to 1 Favorite of America's Independent Tobacco Experts

TOBACCOLAND has many independent experts — skilled auctioneers, buyers and warehousemen. These men do not work for any cigarette company. Therefore they are not prejudiced. Here's what one of them — Charles Belvin — says about tobacco:

"At auction after auction for over 19 years, I've seen Luckies buy the best grades of tobacco — the 'Cream of the Crop'!"

Sworn records show that, among Mr. Belvin's fellow experts, Luckies have over twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together.

In addition to the finest tobacco, Luckies give you throat protection. The "Toasting" process, you know, takes out certain harsh irritants found in all tobacco. So Luckies are a light smoke — easy on your throat — delightful to your taste. Let a one week trial prove it!
